H.O.M.E.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY.

The thirty-sixth half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on Friday, at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street. The principal business entered upon was to pass finance resolutions—viz., 1. To authorise the directors from time to time to convert any portion of the borrowed capital of four millions, secured on outstanding bonds or debentures, issued with the sanction of the Secretary of State for India in Council, into debenture stock, bearing a fixed yearly interest or dividend not exceeding 5 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly. 2. Also, to authorise the directors to raise, by the issue of debenture stock bearing a fixed yearly interest or dividend, all or any portion of the further moneys or debenture capital which the company is empowered to borrow.

The report and accounts of the company demonstrate the increasing importance attached to the question of the supply of fuel on this company's now extensive system. It appears that the cost under this head amounted to one-tenth of the whole receipts of the company, and to one-fifth of the net receipts. The net increase in the last half-year's expenditure under all heads as compared with the corresponding half of 1866 is £64,877, of which £58,478 has arisen in the locomotive department alone. Thus it is solely owing to the very satisfactory increase of £161,589 in the aggregate receipts that the percentage of expenditure on gross receipts has been reduced from 46.79 per cent., to 45.69 per cent. on a comparison of the two half-years. It is evident that the cost of fuel is a matter of growing importance to this company, for it expended on "coal, coke, and firewood, including charges for transport, &c." in the last half-year, no less than £119,599. 6s. 1d., being equal to 12.24 per cent. on the gross receipts, and to 17.81d. per train mile, against £77,680. 8s. 9d., or 9.52 per cent. on the gross receipts, or 15.01d. per train mile, in the corresponding half of 1866. This increase shows the result of the system at present adopted by a company of importing every ton of coal used by them, instead of availing themselves of the coal deposits along their line, whence, it is said, a considerable portion of the needful supply can be procured at about one-third of the price now paid. The matter is the more important, because the present accounts, being made up to the 30th of June last, do not show the effects of the disturbance of the freight market occasioned by the Abyssinian expedition.

In moving the adoption of the report (which was taken as read), the Chairman (J. G. Frith, Esq.) expressed his satisfaction with its general tenour. The railway was now open to the extent of about two-thirds of the entire mileage contemplated. They had before them an account of the receipts and expenditure, which was of a very encouraging nature; and they would bear in mind that whilst there was every probability of the receipts subsequently increasing, the expenditure, on the other hand, was very likely to diminish. The net receipts for the half-year had been £530,568, and the guaranteed interest advanced by the Government amounted to £398,452. This sum being deducted from the amount of net receipts would leave £132,115 as surplus profit. The directors could not help noticing with deep regret the accidents which had occurred; but they had been unavoidable; they certainly would occasion very considerable outlay for repairs. He (the chairman) expected to see a speedy reduction in the cost of the whole traffic of the line, and a permanent capital instead of a fluctuating one. After expressing his regret at the loss the company had sustained in the death of the late chairman (Mr. W. J. Hamilton), the speaker alluded to the valuable services of Mr. T. R. Watt, the secretary to the company, and said that to fill the vacancy of managing director occasioned by Mr. Hamilton's death the board had elected Mr. T. R. Watt to be a director of the company, and had appointed him managing director instead of secretary. Her Majesty's Secretary of State having sanctioned an increase to the Home Establishment allowance to admit of the remuneration to Mr. Watt for his services being increased from £1,000 to £1,200 per annum, a resolution would be submitted to the meeting granting the above increase. With reference to the works in India, a valuable officer had been obtained in Major-general H. Rivers, R.E., Bombay, who would act as the company's agent at Bombay.

Mr. Nicol seconded the motion for the adoption of the report.

Several suggestions were made by General Beadle and other shareholders with regard to the mode of meeting the large expenses which would have to be incurred in repairing, or rather reconstructing those portions of the line which had proved insecure (especially the viaduct which had fallen in on the 19th July).

Mr. Ayrton, M.P., advised the meeting not to deal with these matters at present, but to wait the issue of an inquiry which had been instituted by the Secretary of State for India. He recommended an adjournment, and the convening at an early period a special meeting, meanwhile a full statement of the requirements of the railway would be prepared.

After a desultory debate among the shareholders on the damage done to the line by the accidents and its cost to repair,

Mr. H. C. E. Childers, M.P., agreeing with Mr. Ayrton, urged the prudence of not entering upon the subject of the reconstruction of the line at present. The Government had required the certificate of the consulting engineer on the state of the works in India as the condition of future action on its part, and that certificate had not yet been given. It would be irregular for this meeting to interfere in the appropriation of capital until the opinion of the Government on this subject could be ascertained. The resolution for the adoption of the report was then put and carried.

The Chairman, in reply to Mr. Oppenheim, said that he could not state what the reconstruction of the works would cost. It might be £500,000 or it might be less; and the accidents having so recently occurred it was impossible to state when they would be finished.

Mr. Freear pointed out a passage in the report which stated that previous to the fall of the Mhow-Kee-Mulle viaduct nothing had previously occurred to indicate the accident. By advices which he had received from Bombay he was informed that some time previous to its occurrence a serious crack had been noticed in the work.

Mr. Watt said that a very short time before it fell a report was brought under the notice of the company's engineers, and they in company with the Government engineers examined the work, and they came to the conclusion that the viaduct was safe. Subsequent events, however, had proved their estimate wrong.

The report was unanimously adopted.

The finance resolutions and that increasing the salary of the secretary were then agreed to, and the meeting adjourned.

The coast-guard mortar apparatus arrived too late to be available.

(ALEXANDRIA, Nov. 1.)—It is announced here that a battalion of the Egyptian troops who formerly served in Mexico is about to be sent to garrison Massowah.

DEATH OF COLONEL HARRISON.—An inquest was held on Wednesday, at the village of Edlingham, near Alnwick, respecting the death of Charles Henry Harrison, forty-two years of age, colonel of the Madras Royal Artillery, who was killed by the accidental firing of a breach-loading fowling-piece on Tuesday last, at Capheaton. The accident appeared to have occurred whilst Sir Hedworth Williamson, Bart., M.P., was explaining the structure of a central fire breech-loader, and had dropped the cartridges into the barrels, and whilst closing the breech one of them went off. Just at that moment Colonel Harrison had been crossing in front, not three yards off, and the contents of one of the cartridges lodged in his left leg. The inside of the leg below the knee was completely blown away. The wounded gentleman suffered a great deal from loss of blood, but, by the aid of handkerchiefs, a temporary tourniquet being made, the bleeding was stopped. The medical evidence of Dr. Robertson, of Glanton, was to the effect that death ensued from shock to the system. The deceased had been subject to varicose veins in the legs. The deceased gentleman, after the receipt of the wounds, had taken the band off. Sir Hedworth Williamson, who had been well-nigh distracted, endeavoured to soothe him; and afterwards, when assured that no bones were broken, he was most careful in his instructions to apprise Sir Hedworth of the fact. The Hon. Athol Liddell deposed at the inquest to the circumstances, and also stated that Sir Hedworth was a most skilful and careful man with the fowling piece. The jury, after hearing the evidence of one of the gamekeepers, who gave confirmatory testimony, returned a verdict of "accidental death."

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGETO THE POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.BY LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with the sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Perozhshur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review, May 15.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman, March 17.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner, September 15.

(THE PUBLICATION HAS BEEN UNAVOIDABLY DELAYED.)

Consequent on the measures adopted by Lord Cranborne to remedy the grievances of the Indian Army—one of which was the right of admission to the Staff Corps of all the old officers, unconditionally—a considerable change has been made in the appearance of this volume. Although the old Cadres still exist, nearly all the names are in italics, showing the number of officers who have availed themselves of the privilege; whilst the Lists of the Staff Corps themselves will show a great stimulus has been given to promotion, numbers of officers having obtained two steps of substantive (and rank in one day.

Mr. S. LOVELOCK, the OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR of the KUMAON and OUDH PLANTATION COMPANY, invites the attention of intending Settlers in India to the under-mentioned ESTATES, situate in Kumaon, and until lately carried on by the above Company. The climate of Kumaon is exceedingly healthy; and, in the hands of a resident proprietor, there is little doubt the Estates will yield a fair return.

CHOWKOORIE and WOODSIDE ESTATES contain respectively 1,690 and 1,275 acres, are freehold, and held direct from Government; they have each about ninety acres planted with Tea.

GUNGGOOLIE is composed of native village lands, and is believed to contain about 996 acres, of which about 140 have been planted out with Tea. There is a bungalow and several two-storied native houses, also a tea-house in course of erection on the Estate.

Gungoolie is forty-one miles from the Station of Almora; Chowkoorie is thirteen miles from Gungoolie, and Woodside eleven miles from Chowkoorie.

The Estates will be sold separately, but preference will be given to offers for the entire property.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Overland Mail received this morning brings no later news from Bombay, and but one day's later from Calcutta. The Madras papers, however, bring the intelligence from that Presidency down to the 14th October.

Abyssinia and the expedition thither were still, of course, the chief topics of discussion in Madras society. A land-transport corps was being organised for service in Africa, under Captain Twentyman, of the 18th Hussars, who had been ordered to Bombay to superintend its formation. Volunteers for the corps have been invited from the European commissioned and native non-commissioned officers of the native cavalry.

The Madras Athenæum has a grumble at the Bombay Government for wanting more subalterns from the Eastern Presidency, under conditions seemingly favourable for Bombay. Young officers of less than seven years' service will not succeed to the higher commands in the Abyssinian field-force. Therefore is the Athenæum sore. It also notices the blow dealt at the irregular system of under-officering native regiments, by the evident resolve of Government to send out full complements of officers to Abyssinia.

Sir Gaspard Le Marchant left Madras by the mail of the 12th, after a farewell entertainment at Government House. The Athenæum complains that out of his short term of Indian service—two years and a third—he spent at Madras barely two hundred days, the balance having been devoted to Ootacamund. It is hard to please everybody; so perhaps Sir Gaspard took the safe course of first pleasing himself. His departure, says the Madras Times, will cause no regret.

The monsoon had not yet broken, but the sky was occasionally overcast with ominous-looking clouds. Agricultural prospects seemed bright enough so far, and all fears of another famine in Southern India were at an end. Cuttack shared in the general improvement, the rice crops promising well.

Eleven hundred native candidates had sent in their names for the forthcoming matriculation examination at the Madras University, an increase of three hundred on the previous year.

At Tezpor, in Assam, no small sensation had been aroused by the murder of Mr. Falcon, the Assistant Commissioner.

He was found dead in his bed on the 8th September; some one had shot him through the head in his sleep, taking so close an aim as to burn a hole in the musquito curtains. A discharged servant was arrested on suspicion.

General M'Cleverty was on his way from Galle to take up the chief command vacated by Sir Gaspard Le Marchant.

Sir John Lawrence had dealt a sharp rebuke to the Madras Government for trying to establish a sea-toll, which Sir John describes as "a mere impost on trade, in return for no service whatever;" as "an undisguised transit duty," to be raised "under circumstances in which such an impost is least excusable." The Madras Government will therefore have to find some other way of raising their needful lakh of rupees.

The steamer Mula left Madras for Bombay on the 10th October, with the officers and petty officers of the Commissariat Staff supplied by Madras for the Abyssinian Expedition.

The Friend of India expresses the popular irritation felt in Calcutta at the way in which the Bombay Government, backed by the home powers, is overriding that of Bengal in the matter of Abyssinia. Sir John Lawrence has been quite laid aside, and the government of a little presidency that can't of itself meet half the wants of the campaign is behaving itself in a very impertinent manner towards its betters. So in effect declares the Friend; with what reason we do not clearly make out.

Colonel Fytche was expected at Mandalay by the end of September.

In reviewing the police reports for all India, the Supreme Government objects strongly to the preponderance of the military element, which is greatest in Bombay and Madras. The police, it holds, should be divided into two branches; the smaller for semi-military, the other for civil purposes. The native element in the higher ranks should also be increased. In short, the Supreme Government would look to the Uncovenanted Service of all colours for the chief maintenance of a good civil police.

A TELEGRAM of yesterday's date from Bombay announces the sad news of the total loss of the transport Bosphorus, in Algoa Bay, on the 21st October. She was a large steamer of 2,000 tons, chartered from Liverpool to carry stores to Bombay.

for the Abyssinian expedition. The crew, we are told, escaped in boats from the foundering vessel. As nothing is said of passengers, we may hope there were none on board.

THE terms of the new mail contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company have been so far settled that the decision of Parliament is alone wanting to set the seal to them. The present contract is for a longer period than the former, and its terms yet more favourable to the old company. Details, however, will not be published for the present.

Between Marseilles and Alexandria, and between Suez and Bombay, a weekly line of steamers will begin running from next February. The Bombay mails will be made up in London each Friday evening; and things will be so managed that the homeward mails will be delivered in London every Monday morning. Fortnightly mails for Calcutta and China will be despatched with the alternate Bombay mails. No contract has yet been made for the Brindisi route. For the present, owing to the alleged expense, any direct mail to China is still unattainable.

ON the evening of the 28th September Colonel Merewether's exploring party embarked at Aden in the Euphrates and Coromandel. The former went on to Massowah, an island near the mainland, with an anchorage only big enough for a few ships, and with such an absence of fresh water that the inhabitants spend their nights on the mainland. At Dissee Island the steamers came together, with no fresh news of the captives. On the 3rd October they reached Annesley Bay together. It was soon found that Zoolla, on the western side of the bay, was the only fit landing-place for troops. Wells of some kind were found there, and the anchorage is safe and easy for any number of vessels. On the 4th the landing took place, and a camp was formed three-quarters of a mile inland. The natives were remarkably incurious. It was soon discovered that the best road inland lay through a pass down which, at certain times, a torrent comes sweeping with fatal force. On the night of the 13th the greater part of the little force started on its march into the country.

The advanced brigades of the main body had sailed from Aden for Zoolla by October 29. The Satellite preceded them a few days.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, November 16, 1867.

"A BAD BEGINNING."

IF Government were to follow the advice of only a small number of the critics who have been writing in the papers about Abyssinia, in what a delicious muddle things would soon be! In the multitude of counsellors, each counselling a different course, what sort of safety could be found? How many different kinds of transport have been recommended; how many landing-places, how many roads, each of which was declared to be the only practicable! As for the water question, one would think from all that had been written about it, that travellers in Abyssinia were the thirstiest, most fastidious, or most unlucky people in the world. They have only the choice between bad water at one place and no water at another. Croaking begets croaking now, as it did during the Crimean war. Only the other day a writer in the Times observed that there was no drinkable water within sixteen miles of Anseley Bay, the landing place of the Abyssinian expedition. Whereupon an evening journal wrote a doleful article, headed "A Bad Beginning," on the faulty selection of an ill-watered landing-place; and many worthy folk will have shaken their heads over this new instance of official blundering.

Let us not be frightened too soon. If Anseley Bay be otherwise a fit and healthy landing-place, the want of good water can easily be compensated by means long since familiar to men of science and campaigners. The transports will doubtless carry or distil their own water. When the men have landed, they will carry with them, either in their own bottles, or in the Bhistie's mussak, water enough for a march of sixteen miles—not a long one for Indian soldiers. In crossing the desert between Sindh and Ferozepore our troops have had to carry their own water for three days running. What is a march of sixteen miles compared to that?

BURMESE CUSTOMS.

THERE is nothing very startling in the news that Colonel Fytche has set off on his mission to the Burmese capital. Whatever good or ill may come of it, the proceeding in itself sounds very like a mere matter of course. Burmah is our neighbour in India; and in these days the most barbarous or the proudest of potentates may to some extent appreciate the advantages of foreign trade. If China, and even Japan, have bowed before the intrusions of Western enterprise, why should the masters of the Irrawaddy hold aloof? If the white men have robbed them of Pegu, they may yet take their revenge in the form of peaceful barter, or in other ways not unknown to shrewd speculators of every hue and country.

What does however awaken in us a thrill of wonderment, arises not from the sending of the mission, but from the manner of its destined reception. Colonel Fytche, we are told, is to present himself before his Burmese Majesty according to the fashion, not of England, but of Burmah. The Chief Commissioner of Pegu, the Viceroy's ambassador to the Court of Ava, the representative of a world-wide empire, will have the privilege of squatting without shoes, like a humble Indian coolie, and knocking his head against the floor, in the sublime presence of a royal barbarian, whose throne the march of a few thousand British soldiers might at any moment overturn.

The picture is ludicrous, but not likely, we fear, to prove untrue. The Lord of the White Elephant—says the Calcutta Englishman—has flatly refused to receive the Chief Commissioner, "unless he takes off his boots and humbly prostrates himself on the ground before him." Against these unseemly and absurd conditions Col. Fytche protested long and earnestly, but in vain. His own natural protector had abandoned him to the enemy. Sir John Lawrence, so it is said, condemns his agent to gratify Burmese pride by conforming in this matter to Burmese etiquette. If this be true, it is certainly most deplorable, both for the Governor-General's sake and for the credit of the British name. Why a British officer should in these days be forced to throw himself into unseemly postures, and divest himself of part of his usual clothing, at the will of an ignorant savage who fancies himself a mighty ruler, we are slow to understand. It is no excuse to plead past examples or present emergencies. Lord Amherst has found few to censure him for declining to perform the Chinese Kotoo. If Colonel Fytche's mission was worth undertaking at all, it should have been carried through in accordance with English, not Burmese ideas of courtly ceremonial; with the habits of the nation sending, not that to which the envoy was sent. Such at least is our common rule of observance on ordinary occasions. A native of India coming to see an Englishman would no more think of taking off his turban than the Englishman, in returning his visit, would think of taking off his shoes. Each follows the custom of his country. American ambassadors, in the same manner, wear the plain garb of their own nation in European Courts. The principle in such cases is clear and rational enough. According to the opposite principle laid down for Colonel Fyche, an English envoy to Burmah ought not only to squat like a coolie and kiss the earth like a slave; he should also dress himself in the Burmese fashion, adopt the Burmese creed, and altogether forget that he is anything but a Burman born.

THE PORTUGUESE IN ABYSSINIA.

In the present state of general bewilderment touching the prospects and the drawbacks of an Abyssinian campaign, it may interest some and cheer other of our readers to learn what the troops of another nation achieved, under worse conditions, three centuries ago. Sir Henry Rawlinson has lately done his best to clear out of the mind of the British public some of the cobwebs spun there for months past by alarmist letters and panic-breathing articles in the daily press. He has shown how little we have to fear for the fate of our soldiers or the success of our military efforts in a country which can neither be called peculiarly unhealthy, being in many parts quite the reverse, nor is likely to offer any unusual hindrance to the march of an army trained up in English discipline, and led by such an officer as Sir Robert Napier. And about the same time another authority, namely the London Chronicle, was enlightening its readers on the mode in which a small body of Portuguese warriors, in the sixteenth century, carried out to its triumphant issue a most unpromising campaign against the internal and external foes of the reigning Negus of Abyssinia. Some of the facts which that journal derived from original Portuguese sources are worth reproducing here.

In the early part of the sixteenth century a certain intercourse sprang up between the Christian Negus of Æthiopia and the Portuguese. Those were the palmy days of Portuguese conquest and Portuguese trade. Then, too, as now, the Negus or Emperor of the "blameless Æthiopians" was worried and hemmed in by the encroaching Muslim of Egypt and other neighbouring States. His ambassador, Matthew, an Armenian merchant, came to Europe to court the alliance of some Christian Power, in hopes of using it against the infidel. Matthew's persuasions bore fruit. An embassy was got ready for the Court of Emperor David; but the death of its intended leader put off its departure. A little later another embassy was despatched, not however by the Portuguese Monarch, but by the Governor of Portuguese India. Its reception by the Negus was not so cordial as it would have been had it come direct from Portugal, or brought presents flattering to the pride, or troops available for the need of the royal barbarian. If the meeting was far from enthusiastic, the parting seems to have been marked by mutual murmurs. In reply to the complaints of the Negus, Da Luna brought up a long tale of the insults and misfortunes his mission had undergone at the hands of hosts who were no better, it seems, than vulgar thieves.

With the Patriarch of Abyssinia, however, Da Luna parted on far more friendly terms. He promised, if he could, to bring military aid from Portugal, in answer to the old man's earnest entreaties; for the "Abuna" had fond dreams of recovering Jerusalem also from the Turks. After a while the Patriarch's successor, Don John Bermudez, was sent to Portugal by the Negus to seek a wife for the latter in the family of the Portuguese King, and to conclude an alliance between the two States. As a minor object, he was to bring back European pioneers, who would turn the course of the Nile and otherwise annoy the Egyptians.

The troops did come at last. In 1538 Bermudez found himself in Abyssinia, with a body of four hundred and fifty soldiers and six guns, under the command of Don Christopher de Gama, to carry out his master's designs against the infidel. Half a strong regiment, even if largely composed of gentlemen with servants in their train, seemed hardly equal to the task of scouring a wide country, conquering a number of Mahomedan chiefs, and generally repairing the fortunes of Christian Abyssinia. Yet something very like this these warriors did, with almost no help from the Abyssinian ruler or his subjects. What little aid they gave was limited to the supplying of provisions, whenever the adventurers could not supply themselves from the plunder of the enemy's camp. In the way of fighting the natives seem to have done nothing.

In spite of all drawbacks however, Don Christopher's little army achieved its purpose after several hard campaigns; fighting always against tremendous odds, sometimes nearly surrounded, but contriving, with hardly an exception, to win the day. Discipline, courage, and good gunnery seem to have mainly insured their success. Few of the Turks were conversant with calivers, while all the Portuguese were practised caliver-men. So in the end Don Christopher's five hundred overcame all enemies, and won much show of gratitude from the young King, David's successor, who had long looked coldly on the European heretics, as "Arians and worshippers of four gods," but could not help warming somewhat to the men who had fought so triumphantly in his cause.

What a handful of Portuguese could do in the sixteenth century, ten thousand British soldiers ought, if they are worth anything, to do now. Except that the former were among nominal friends, the odds against them were infinitely heavier than they can possibly be against the present invaders. It is ridiculous to think of all the hubbub we have been raising in this country over the fictitious difficulties in the way of our Abyssinian raid. One would fancy that a sepoy army had never walked through Afghanistan, or endured the hardships of a Burmese campaign, or hunted down a Tantia Topie over the ravines and jungles of Central India.

Spirit of the Local Press.

THE COMPETITIVE SYSTEM FOR THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The Times of India cannot exactly see what practical good was to be gained by the official inquiry into the working of the new system. It is plainly impossible now to revert to the old order of things. Competition is now a fait accompli, and it is based upon such thoroughly sound principles that, if it is discreetly regulated, it can hardly fail to give us a fair supply of intelligent officials. We do not suppose that the men who enter the service now differ so fundamentally from those who got in by nomination, as is often believed. Take educated gentlemen as a class, and they are very much alike. We cannot see why the educated men who fight their way in, now-a-days, should not possess the practical qualifications that their predecessors laid claim to. In our humble opinion, the great argument in favour of the competition system is, not that it gives us men of higher intellectual attainments—although we are perfectly willing to admit that it does—but that it throws open the grand field of Indian civil service to the nation, or rather the educated part of it, and does away with anything like monopoly. It is in its effect upon the mother-country that we look for its grand results. The Civil Service of India is fairly open to the youth of England, and it stands to reason that, in time, and as this privilege grows to be realised there, England will take a greater interest in India than she did, when she felt that its prizes were only for a rich oligarchy. The work of the country may have been as well executed formerly as now, but it was in the hands of a favoured few. Now it is offered to the many, and we cannot but think that this is in itself a great point.

The Times fancies that there is a great deal more to be said upon the manner in which the competitive system is worked, than upon its desirability as a system. It would be useful enough to inquire whether the present style of examination for admission is the best adapted for the purpose in view. The rules, too, for the subsequent disposal of the successful candidates might bear a little looking into. Both these subjects are well worthy of attentive consideration. The detail of the system is not yet perfect. It might be made far more effective than it is. But the material out of which the present class of public servants is manufactured is, we are convinced, a good one. Whether they want polish and "the air that moving about in society" imparts, is a question which we leave to the Madras Government to settle.

THE HINDU CUSTOM OF UNDIVIDED FAMILIES.

Referring to a lecture given by one of the Calcutta judges on the evils arising from the Hindoo family system, the Indu Prakash points out the difference between the social circumstances of past and the present time. Under former Governments, when insurrections and disturbances were constantly occurring, and it was difficult to get a living, this unity of families was probably advantageous. The people then had so little time to look into their own household affairs that family quarrels did not often occur; but now all that is changed; inhabitants of this country have now nothing to fear from without, and therefore much time for their private business; and besides this the manners and customs of the people are greatly changed also.

In each family there is one chief man, on whose character the happiness or unhappiness of all depends. He becomes, as it were, a king and his wife the queen, and they carry on the government. It is a "Moglai raj." The rest of the family are not consulted, especially if they are unemployed; they are looked upon as mere nobodies. The chief work of the wife of the family is to cause quarrels. She feels unhappy because the money expended on the family is that earned by her husband. Her feelings of self-interest force her to commit improper acts. If there be any hereditary property all fight for their shares, and at last suits are instituted in the courts. Thus the owners of the property lose it and are reduced to poverty; they become insolvents and are miserable. The manager, if he is selfish, looks to his own interest and cheats his brothers. If he is honest, probably the rest of the family suspect him without cause, and are always quarrelling with him; so that whether he is a rogue or honest, he is sure to be always accused.

Look now at the position of the wife; but it is difficult to find anything to compare this with. There is no freedom for a man even in our families; how can there be, then, for a helpless woman? Her condition is simply that of a slave. As soon as she is married she begins to be tormented. In some families, when the daughters go to their father-in-law's house, they may be considered to be entering on the torments of hell (yumyatana). She must rise the first in the morning and go to bed the last at night. She must do the most work and eat the worst food in the house, but she must be properly dressed, and must not appear in rags. As a reward for her labour she gets abuse and sometimes blows; but she must bear all this in silence, else what more will she not get? She has also to hear vile abuse of her parents and forefathers. Is she the servant of one person only? No; all in the house, great and small, exercise an iron rule over her. Until she is grown up she may not speak to her husband; who, then, will protect her? When she is grown up, if her husband is good and earns his living, she may begin to have a little comfort; but even then she and her husband may not speak in public together. If they do so speak they get the reputation of being immodest and babblers, besides which her husband's relations will begin to suspect her and be envious of her. If she have children it is not proper for her husband and her to show even ordinary affection or pleasure; but we cannot describe the strife, envy, and grumbings of the other women. In short, the houses of our people are often from this cause like the fire-places of hell.

But if these are the sad effects of this custom on individuals and families, they do not end there, but tend to the ruin of the country. By families living all together, the proper income of the house does not suffice for all. The whole weight of life is on the shoulders of one, and the rest are lazy and careless. All obey the orders of one, and so the independence which is natural to man is not even seen to be natural and fitting. From perpetual bickerings the spirit is broken, and the proper pride which is essential to every man is among our people destroyed. Besides this, from perpetual quarrels at home, interest in the affairs of the outer world is destroyed. There is a perpetual growth of inferiority and meanness. From all these causes there is but little work done. Independent energy and courage also cease among our people, and, from their having no proper pride, we do not even know the name of pride in our country as a virtue.

ENGLAND'S POLICY IN AFFGHANISTAN.

The Times of India holds that a strong and allied Afghanistan is what would best serve India west of her Punjab frontier. A policy even passively conducive to this end must eventually secure us the confidence of the Afghans and a high degree of honest and legitimate influence over them. And surely such a policy would be in every way more becoming, more worthy of England than that recommended by Sir Henry Green, and so warmly advocated by other Russo-phobists; namely, that of worming ourselves, by means of our gold, disguisedly and unfairly into a sort of suborned military and political control of Kheilat and Afghanistan.

The Bombay Gazette affirms that the chiefs and people of Beloochistan are constantly urging the British representatives along the frontier to take up military stations within their territory, for they have already had frequent opportunities of discovering that wherever a military force is led by British officers, order, peace, and prosperity follow in its train. They know that the presence of a British force is the only means of restraining the nomadic robbers who scour the country and live by plunder, as well as the only means of preserving peace among the different quarrelsome tribes.

In a merely commercial point of view (for to speak of strategy is to dangle a scarlet cloth before the eyes of our contemporary) the occupation of Quetta, with a good and safe road through the Bolan Pass, and a line of railroad connecting the foot of that pass at Dadur with the line that must eventually run between Kurrahee, Mooltan, and Lahore, would in a few years extend our trade with Central Asia to an unlimited extent, and prove equally beneficial to Beloochistan and its people by advancing civilisation and increasing the demands for the productions of their country. If we might say a word on its military importance we would add to the obvious consideration of its strategical value the fact that we would have a friendly country in our rear, and have Kurrahee as our base of operations at a distance of forty-eight hours' journey. In the event of an advance of Russia for inimical purposes, European troops could be assembled there at a height of five thousand feet above the sea instead of keeping them located to meet their foe in the deadly valley of the Indus.

The Delhi Gazette deems it likely enough that the story of the promises of Russian aid is a fiction founded so far on fact that Shere Ali's emissary was well received and courteously treated by the Russian commander. Afzul Khan's party in Cabul had a manifest object to gain, at least we can easily discern a motive, in causing the report to be circulated. Misunderstanding European politics, and, in their ignorance, supposing that jealousy of Russia would induce us to lend him (Afzul Khan) support in money or otherwise, a genius less inventive than an Afghan's might easily string a little invention on to the fact of Shere Ali sending an emissary to bid for Russian aid. As in the old adage of the test for a pudding, there is no test of policy like that of results; and certainly, as far as matters have gone yet, no one can deny that Sir John's much-laughed-at "masterly inactivity" has turned out the best policy after all.

The Friend of India declares that we have deliberately made ourselves friendless in Central Asia.

Meanwhile the excitement among the natives on the frontier, and among the discontented in every bazaar and feudatory State, cannot be overlooked. If we will not act, we must expect the action of others to be all the more energetic and dangerous to ourselves. The natives believe that Russia, after annexing Khokand, and making Khiva and Bokhara feudatories, has entered into a league according to which Shere Ali will be seated in Cabul, giving up Herat to Persia, who will hold it until, on the fall of Constantinople, she receives Bagdad and the tombs venerated by the Sheas as the reward of her subservience. With one foot on the Pacific and the other on the Persian Gulf the Colossus of the North will command at once Eastern Europe and Asia. This may be a dream, and it is an exaggeration. But a short four years ago it seemed far more improbable that Taskhend and Samarkand would be Russian possessions. The mean contrast between this and our inactivity, with an army badly organised and not up to even its Indian strength, is among Asiatics the greatest danger in our power. Never in our history has such terrible responsibility been incurred in defence to a rigid policy, as by the present Government of India in this matter. If this policy is right and successful Sir John Lawrence will show himself a statesman indeed. But if, as passing events make us suspect, it should prove to be wrong and fatal alike to our prestige in Asia and our work in India—?

The Englishman complains of the diplomatic inaction of the Indian Government towards Afghanistan as being hurtful in its effects on the native mind. To lend Shere Ali the moral support of our countenance and friendship, and the substantial assistance of a subsidy, seems to us to have been the policy which events had marked out for England to follow in Afghanistan, but we abandoned this chief to his own devices, and instead of seeing in the activity of the Russian arms in Central Asia a cause for strengthening to the utmost our influence beyond the passes, we confined ourselves with more and more strictness to a policy of non-intervention. What wonder if having abandoned the field of diplomacy as well as the field of arms we have now to watch the rapid steps taken by a rival Power to possess a vantage-ground which we have despised. Even now it is not too late to endeavour to separate the Ameer Shere Ali from his new allies. In a few weeks, however, this chance will have failed us, and we shall have no choice but to support a bad and unpopular cause at Cabul.

The advance of Persia on Herat, if true, is a breach of the treaty of 1857. The movements of Russia and the attitude of England are watched with the liveliest attention throughout Asia. This has been shown by the anxiety of the different principalities of Central Asia to secure our alliance, and by the eagerness with which the native papers of the Punjab and the North-West disseminate the news from Cabul. To such an extent is this anxiety of the native populations manifested, that the Government have recently called upon an official, connected with the administration of the Bahawalpore State, to explain why he hazarded the assertion that the English were about to give assistance to the rulers of Cabul.

The only guarantee, concludes the Englishman, India can have against being drawn into a costly war beyond the passes—a war in which it must be the aim of Russia to involve her—is such an alliance with the successor of Dost Mahomed, and such an understanding with Persia and Russia, as shall secure the independence of Afghanistan.

THE EPOCH OF MEMOS.

The Delhi Gazette begins an amusing article on this theme in the following fashion:—

"There are periods in history which are agreed upon and acknowledged by the respective historians and chronologers, and which serve to regulate the date of events." This is the remark of Haydn upon the subject of "epochs." There is the epoch of the Deluge, of the Argonautic expedition, of the building of Rome, of Nabonassar, of the Seleucids, and so on. And the present is the epoch of Memos.

Some of our readers may ask who Memos is—whether or no he is an Egyptian king? No; the Memos which characterise the present age is the plural of memo; and if you wish to know further, we beg to refer you to any of Sir William Mansfield's aides—(not de camp).

Yes, this is the age of memos. Everything is done by memos. Formerly in India everything went on by "chits," but now memos have been substituted for "chits," and everything is done by memos. We may venture to assert positively, though our sources of information are no deeper than the depths of our own moral consciousness, that the whole arrangements of the Abyssinian campaign will be conducted by memos. Is a church to be built, a man to be hanged, an agent of a railway company to be sat upon and ruined, a row of barracks to be constructed, a rat trap furnished to a record office or a cat to a "tahsil-daree," is an officer who has made himself obnoxious to be bullied out of the service, or another to be promoted, are a crore of rupees to be sanctioned for public works, or a week's pay for a female sweeper in a European hospital, all is done by memo. In Sir Walter Scott's days "Love ruled the camp, the court, the grove," but in our days memos rule the court from Sir W. Mansfield's palace down to the domestic concerns of the humblest writer in a sub-assistant deputy collector's office of the 10th grade. Perhaps we have benefited by the change. Things do not always go on quite smoothly where love rules everything—at least such love as the poet talks of, the love which rules courts and camps. We will not quote the following line, because we always thought it a blasphemous sacrifice of truth to a poetical flourish.

POLICE REFORM.

One of the worst follies committed by us—says the Englishman—just after the suppression of the mutinies, was the conversion of our civil police into an army. Our former police was, it is true, not a very good one, but by this measure we destroyed every possibility of its doing good, by giving it an organisation inconsistent with the performance of its proper functions. The places of the old darogahs were filled by men good enough for fighting, but wholly unfit for searching out crime, and quit as rapacious as their predecessors. The officers of the new force became thorough partisans of their men.

Happily it matters now but little; for this new creation is already a thing of the past. By a resolution which in the eyes of the Indian ryot, if he ever sees it, will more than atone for all his "masterly inactivity," Sir John Lawrence has condemned the military police on both civil and military grounds; and the whole establishment is to be reorganised. In lieu of the present homogeneous force, we are to have a small and separate body of military police for the performance of quasi-military duties, who will be armed and drilled as at present; while the main force, who are liable to be employed in civil duties only, are to be armed with batons or swords only, and officered by civilians from the uncovenanted service. The change at least affords a fresh chance for rendering our police efficient, as far as it is possible for an Indian police ever to be efficient.

BENGAL.

MISMANAGEMENT AT NUSSEERABAD.

Up to the 22nd September we are informed that the deaths from cholera among the 1st Royals at Nusseerabad amounted to seventy-seven, among whom forty-three were soldiers, the remainder women and children. Up to the date above mentioned none of the officers, although constantly with their men, had suffered from the disease. The first twenty-four cases which occurred were all, we believe, fatal, but afterwards some few recoveries took place. According to regulations in case of the occurrence of epidemic cholera, the medical officers in charge of the regiment advised moving the men into tents as soon as the nature of the malady became clearly evident. But from some mismanagement, either on the part of the brigade or civil authorities, the march was delayed nearly forty-eight hours, and, on the arrival of the men on their camping-ground, neither tents nor other conveniences were ready for their reception. It was, we are informed, nearly evening before all were under canvas. This was on the morning of the 8th instant. A few days after, when the women and children were moved, a similar "muddle" from absence of suitable carriage is said to have occurred. The regiment at length being located on a chosen spot on the Neemuch road was not able to move when cholera attacked the camp. Therefore, instead of being split into various small detachments, the whole corps remained huddled together, the foreground view from their tents being the graves of the men of the 106th regiment, who dying of cholera were buried on the spot in 1861. And not only was there absence of carriage, but hospital accommodation was deficient, doctors too few and medical subordinates insufficient. The folly of reducing the medical establishments to the lowest possible figure compatible with the performance of the ordinary duty was here exemplified in a most marked and melancholy manner. Happily illness of either surgeon or assistant surgeons has not, according to the last accounts, yet occurred, otherwise the condition of the regiment would have been even worse than it is. With this disastrous account it is cheering to find honourable mention made of the officers commanding the artillery, who with their men turned out and made use of their horses and limbers for the purpose of conveying necessities from cantonment to camp. But we are sorry to find the conduct of the brigade authorities, or rather of the Brigadier-General himself, severely animadverted upon. Whether all possible exertions were made to obtain sufficient carriage and accommodation, and to supply the men with necessities, will doubtless become the subject of official investigation.

Probably the authorities concerned may be able to clear themselves of charges of apathy or neglect. But the stubborn facts remain, that urgent applications were unattended to, and that, as we are credibly informed, for the first fifteen days the brigadier-general commanding the troops at Nusseerabad only visited the cholera camp of the 1st Royals once; did not then remain for more than a half hour; and neither entered hospitals nor married quarters. The great importance which all authorities attach to maintaining the minds of soldiers during periods of epidemic cholera in as cheerful a frame as possible need not here be adverted to. The absence, the studiously holding aloof of the chief military authority of the station, must have tended to depress men's minds, and this conduct on the part of the Brigadier at Nusseerabad was, to say the least, most ill advised and apparently apathetic.

This is in striking contrast with the conduct of Major-General Troup at Meerut, who at the time the Buffs were in camp visited one or other of their camps daily, generally going out morning and evening for this purpose.

We understand the Deputy-Inspector-General of Hospitals of the district has been ordered from Mhow for the purpose of investigating the circumstances connected with the outbreak at Nusseerabad. We trust a full inquiry will be instituted, and that those who may be found to have neglected their duty will not be shielded. We believe Dr. Murphy is the administrative official charged with the duty. From the character and antecedents of this officer we have an assurance that justice will be done, and incompetence exposed. Doubtless the blame will be cast from one department to the other, as was the case on the inquiry into the "fatal march."

As a preliminary step we would suggest the question, why communications were not stopped, or at least quarantine enforced, between Deolee, Ajmere, and Nusseerabad, in both of which places first mentioned cholera had been for some time prevalent?—Delhi Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE SON OF THE EX-KING OF OUDE recently asked for a fresh grant of Rs. 64,000 to pay his debts. His request was refused.

RELEASE OF BRITISH SUBJECTS FROM SLAVERY.—Under instructions from the Government of India, Captain Sladen, Agent at the Court of Mandalay, is taking measures to release British subjects held in captivity by the tribes along the North-Eastern Frontier of British India.

STATE OF CUTTACK.—The Officiating Commissioner of Cuttack Division reported to this Government on the 18th ult. that "the progress of cultivation continues favourable; the early rice has been cut in many places, and the crop is a good one; the late rice also promises well, no serious inundations have occurred, and by the last accounts prices of food in Khoordah have fallen to an average of sixteen Cuttack seers per rupee all over the country. As the season advances, the chances of serious inundation decrease, and our prospects for the coming season become more hopeful."

ALLOWANCES TO FIELD OFFICERS PROCEEDING TO ABYSSINIA.—The Times of India says that field officers proceeding to Abyssinia are to be allowed 600 lbs. of kit; captains 400 lbs., and subalterns 200 lbs. Commanding officers and heads of departments are to be each allowed a native soldier's double poled tent, and all others a tent between two. The European Artillery are to be quartered eight men to a tent, and the others thirteen men to a tent. Native officers will have a tent between four, and men a tent to carry twenty-four. A hospital tent will be provided for 160 Europeans, and among the native troops a tent for every 200. The Viceroy of Egypt is doing all he can to forward the views of the British Government on the Abyssinian expedition. He has placed at the disposal of her Majesty's Government all his war steamers and the Azizie's Company's ships on the Red Sea.

THE MAHARAJAH OF JEYPORE.—It is well-known that his Highness the Maharajah of Jeypore has for years occupied the very foremost rank among the native princes of India in the cause of education and in the carrying out of works of practical utility, which has resulted in making his capital by universal consent the first native city in India, whether as viewed in its architectural decorations, or by the number and extent of its educational and benevolent institutions. That one who had accomplished so much should have, adopting the motto of Earl Russell, "Rest and be thankful!" withdrawn himself from the more active duties of office allowed his successors to add to the structures he had already reared or found others as the necessities of the time might suggest, is what we should not have been the least surprised to hear. That his Highness has not done so, but on the contrary has sought to extend those benefits which accrue from a good government, and personally interest himself in the welfare of each individual in the raj is alike creditable to his head and his heart, and in our opinion worthy of the imitation of more than the native princes of Rajpootana. It is noteworthy that the order convening the Council and the oath administered to the members were first read in English and then in the vernacular.—Delhi Gazette.

SLAVERY OF BRITISH SUBJECTS IN BURMAH.—The Government appears to have paid especial attention of late to the question of slavery. As our readers know, the representations of the British Agent at Khatmandoo resulted in the release of a large number of British subjects held in bondage by the Nepaules. The raids of the Nagas, Kookies, and other tribes bordering in the Eastern districts, have, as a matter of course, led to numbers of British subjects being sold as slaves to the tribes on the north and north-west of the Burmese States. Under instructions from the Supreme Government, Captain Sladen, the Agent at Mandalay, has taken up the cause of these poor creatures, and although he has only up to the present been able to secure the release of one woman, a native of Mymensing, he has hopes that his efforts will be as successful as the Resident's at Nepaul. The visit of Col. Fytche ought to result, among other things, in a more energetic endeavour on the part of the King of Burmah to procure the release of these captives.—Friend of India.

MAJOR J. A. GRANT, C.B.—We notice the approaching retirement of Major J. A. Grant, C.B., of the Bengal Staff Corps, second in command of the 4th Goorkhas. He belonged to the 6th Europeans, and his retirement will promote Lieutenant (Captain in the Staff Corps) R. S. Robertson to his captaincy on the cadre of that regiment. Major Grant served in the Punjab campaign and throughout the operations in its vicinity, including the attack on the Dhurruksala, the action of Soorujkoond, and the siege and surrender of Mooltan, and the battle of Goojerat. It is very strange that England has not recognised this distinguished traveller's services more than to award him a C.B.-ship, when our ally Maun Sing, of Lucknow, has been made a Knight of the Exalted Star of India, for "masterly inactivity." It is thus that heroes are neglected and "nobodies" put to the front; some people have greatness thrust upon them, but the greatness achieved by Major Grant will always be remembered when the discovery of the source of the Nile is spoken of.—Lahore Chronicle, Oct. 2.

MR. C. J. RICHARDES, OF AZIMGHUR.—A gloom was thrown over the station last Monday on the receipt of the information of the death of our magistrate and collector, Mr. C. J. H. Richardes, who was appointed for two months to the Judgeship of Moradabad. He left in the bloom of health, and was expected to return to his duties shortly, when information was suddenly received of his having proceeded to Nynee Tal for change of air. In private life he was ever ready to relieve silently the distresses of the poor, and his purse was never closed to the calls of suffering humanity, if brought to his notice; his charity did not arise from a cold sense of duty, but was the spontaneous emotion of a really benevolent heart. In public life he was a kind master, and always respected the feelings of his subordinates by his mild and courteous behaviour, and his memory will ever be held in grateful veneration. He took a very great interest in the yearly agricultural exhibitions, and always availed himself of every opportunity to attend them. The deceased was a cousin of Sir Richard Temple, C. S. I., Resident of Hyderabad.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 3.

RETURN OF TROOPS TO ENGLAND.—The D, E, F, and G Batteries of the 11th Brigade, Royal Artillery, now under orders to return to England, after ten years' service in India, will embark from Calcutta on the 11th of November, in one of the new steam transports, for Suez. The D Battery landed at Kurrachee in 1857, and marched from thence to Peshawur. The E and F Batteries formed part of the original China force despatched from England early in 1857, and, in consequence of the mutiny, were landed in Calcutta in September, 1857. The E Battery and the F Battery (then known as the 14th Light Field Battery), receiving horses and equipments at Allahabad, were actively engaged at the relief of Lucknow, battle of Cawnpore, siege and capture of Lucknow, and the action at Barree. The F Battery 11th Brigade, in addition, in the pursuit of Scindiah's army from Cawnpore and subsequent action at Serai Ghat, and the actions at Chanda, Umceerpore, and Sultanpore; also in the attack on the Shah Nujet, the Moulvie's Mosque and Moosa Bagh, Lucknow; also the final operations in April, 1859, trans-Gogra, in the attack and defeat of a rebel force at Bungaon. The G Battery 11th Brigade landed at Bombay, and was engaged at Futtayabad, capture of Chhindaree Fort, Central India, siege and capture of Jhansie, under Sir Hugh Rose, action on the Betwa, and capture of Calpee.

NATIVE PHILANTHROPY.—The following is worthy of notice as an instance of native philanthropy. The author of the prospectus is the owner of "the Rohilkund goods train." He kindly offers to convey luggage to the plains without any profits whatsoever, and states that he is urged to undertake this unprofitable (and he might have added thankless) task merely to benefit the public! What a pity he doesn't offer to do the job for nothing at all! The English used in the prospectus is, to say the very least of it, highly classical.—"Notice.—The undermentioned begs to inform the public that he is prepared to carry goods at the cheapest rates below mentioned, within the shortest period and in the safest way, from Almora, Nynee Tal, &c., to Allypore, and thence to forward to their ultimate destination by the Railway Company, the Indian Carrying Company, or in any other manner requested. He brings it to the notice of the public that the rates now offered are barely capable of affording the real transit expenses, leaving him no profits. The frugality at which he aims will only be thus secured, that the same servants of this train who are now engaged in conveying goods only from this side, will also be required to bring any goods delivered for despatch on that side. The object of undertaking this task, evidently unprofitable to the Train, is merely to benefit the public, and thus to deserve its support to a larger extent than heretofore, (I fear, however, that he won't succeed in this unless he uses greater despatch than formerly) meanwhile forming a distant future hope of some substantial gain to the Train. The very profitable rates now offered are, however, only allowed for the prepaid goods, while for the bearing the rates will be as heretofore."—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 3.

A NEGLIGENT STATION MASTER.—A few days ago a serious collision was nearly occurring on the Eastern Bengal line of Railway, owing to gross negligence on the part of the station master of Sealdah, who overlooked a telegram advising despatch of the down goods' train from Kooshtea. A sad possible calamity was averted by a remarkable degree of vigilance on the part of the engine drivers of the respective trains. Subsequently it was stated that the station master was suspended from office; but beyond this intimation nothing further was elicited as to the ultimate issue of the case. Under these circumstances a very reasonable expectation was entertained that a searching investigation into so serious a matter would have taken place, and a due measure of punishment awarded to the party whose negligence so nearly resulted in a sacrifice of life. Rumours prevail, which, it is to be hoped, are without foundation, that the railway employee in question, after having undergone his probation of suspension, has been provided with an appointment, which, if not of equal importance and responsibility, at least attaches to it a salary equivalent or nearly so to that which the recipient drew in his former capacity. To enable the station-master to fill his present post, it was, of course, necessary to remove him from that which he formerly occupied; and this sentence of dismissal, it may be urged, was deemed a sufficient punishment. It is, indeed, difficult to conceive how such a sentence could possibly satisfy the ends of justice if the guilt of the party were established. That the station-master should be fortunate in obtaining another appointment cannot possibly be a matter of complaint; but that he should be at all recognised by the railway company, after having so signally failed in the execution of his duty while in their employ, and obtain another situation on their recommendation, or something akin to it, is somewhat surprising. In justice to the public at large, the results of the investigation of the case, if any has been made, and the nature of the punishment to which the station-master was subjected, if found guilty, should be made known. If he is guilty, it is not possible to conceive in what the punishment consists, if it implies simply at first a suspension from duty, and finally terminates in being provided with a comfortable appointment.—Indian Daily News.

INFANTICIDE AND ADULT MURDER AMONGST THE LUMBADIES.

A short time ago we gave some particulars on this subject. The following is further information obtained by the Madras Government regarding the same:—

tendent and assistant-superintendent of police of the Kistna district as to the practice of infanticide and of adult murder of suspected sorcerers by the Lumbadies, who are engaged in the carriage of salt and grain in this presidency, and whose homes are chiefly in the Central Provinces and in the Hyderabad country. These alleged criminal practices were recently brought to the notice of Government by Mr. Thornhill, lately collector of the Kistna district, who had received his information from the district moonsiff of Karempudy. It was not to be expected that the district moonsiff could substantiate the information which was given him at second-hand, and the police officers of the district discredit the information furnished by the moonsiff, but the inspector-general of police considers that it is not improbable that the practices described above may prevail among the Lumbadies. Mr. Robinson observes that their customs as regards marriages are expensive, which would afford the usual temptation, and that they are a lawless race. The information, given by the Moonsiff of Karempudy, is supported by a report recently submitted to the Inspector-General of the Medical Department by Dr. Shortt, a most competent observer, who has given a very interesting account of this tribe. Dr. Shortt says: "In some districts they are addicted to thieving and Thuggee. These vices are chiefly confined to travellers, but they never attempt a similar practice in any station; they more frequently fraternise, but never molest each other. They have certain signs by which one tribe can distinguish another. Their code of laws prescribes punishments for all crimes, the verdict of which, when carried out, is never disputed. Their priests exercise the power of life and death over the community as the most absolute sovereign, but this is masked under the cloak of religion and supernatural agency; and, as a tribe, they are bound to secrecy whenever the extreme penalties of their laws are carried into effect. Unchastity is strictly punished with death; frequently, both the woman and man suffer when detected, and their corpses are buried or burned together, and neither the justice nor execution is ever complained of. Their social system is entirely distinct from other natives of India; they recognise no authority, keep aloof from mankind generally, interfere with no one, and allow of no interference among them regarding their laws or customs, &c." I have every reason to believe, from personal inquiry in Orissa, Nagpore, Hyderabad, South Arcot, Vizagapatam, Jeypore, &c., that sorcery, witchcraft, human sacrifice, and infanticide prevail among different communities of the tribe. Their religious tenets combine all the superstition of the Hindoos with the fatalism of Mahomedans, and their religion partakes of both these creeds. Each community is localised by the term of "Tanda," having its own priest, who is said to lead a peculiarly holy life; and the monastic lives and habits of these priests greatly influence the minds of the people composing the community. They are looked up to with much veneration and great awe, and their edicts, notwithstanding their severity or cruelty, are implicitly obeyed. Their religion and laws demand this implicit obedience, combined with the utmost secrecy in all matters connected with themselves personally, or the community to which they belong, as their priests are supposed to know all their actions by supernatural agency. So strict and binding do they consider all matters connected with themselves, community, or tribe, that they would rather forfeit life than divulge any single act concerning either their social habits and customs or their deeds of rapine and plunder. On all occasions the priest is first consulted as to the success or otherwise of their undertakings, whether it be as regards domestic or social ceremonies, or acts of plunder, robbery, or murder. The priests lead a life of celibacy, and from their monastic habits their wants are few and simple, each community providing them; but it does not appear clear whether the office of priesthood is hereditary in certain families or elective. On occasions of sickness among themselves, or murrain among their cattle, the priest is consulted, and should he attribute such visitations to sorcery, the priest fixes the guilt on some individual belonging to the community, when the supposed evil-doer is immediately ruthlessly seized and murdered, in the manner dictated by the priest, to abate the evil. The execution is coolly and deliberately carried out in the most summary manner, and the dead is buried in oblivion. The practice of infanticide is in vogue among them, in consequence, it is said, of the large sums of money required to ornament their girls, in addition to a large dowry which they have to bestow on marriage.—Indian Daily News.

SAD OCCURRENCE AT TRICHINOPOLY.

The quiet of this usually dull station was suddenly disturbed early on the afternoon of Sunday last, the 29th September, by the startling intelligence, which spread like wild fire in the town, that the Quartermaster Sergeant of the 23rd Regiment, quartered at Pootoor, who had only recently taken charge of his duties here, had committed a most shocking and horrible murder; and a shocking and horrible murder it was—the victim being his own wife. The electrical effect which this intelligence naturally produced was felt not only among their friends and acquaintances, but almost among the whole neighbourhood. For reasons which must be apparent enough, we refrain from entering too minutely into the particulars relating to this painful affair. The following, however, are some of the facts connected with it:—

At about three o'clock on the Sunday afternoon in question, Mr. Dalton, the quarter-master Sergeant, bolted the door of the room in which his wife, his eldest daughter, and himself were at the time. Mrs. Dalton, who appears to have been sitting on a chair, had a suckling infant in her arms. After bolting the door, Mr. Dalton walked about the room for a time, and all of a sudden took hold of a hammer which was about the place and struck the unfortunate woman three blows on the head with such brutal violence that he at once smashed the head, destroying every trace of the human feature. Of course the attack resulted in instantaneous death. Mr. Cox, the fife-major of the regiment, immediately repaired to the scene of the murder, and finding Mr. Dalton with traces of his guilt fresh upon him, suspected something very serious, and at once set off to prepare a guard. But before the guard was ready the horrible culprit, who had by this time got possession of his sword, rushed out of his quarters, and with drawn sword in hand hastily set off in the direction of the European barracks, pursued by a few of the bandmen of his regiment. Determined not to be apprehended by natives, he gave himself up to the men of the 1st Royals, when he was by a clever manœuvre dispossessed of his sword, and at once handcuffed and delivered into the custody of the police. In the meantime, the doctor and the officers of the regiment and others repaired to the scene of the murder, where a most shocking sight presented itself in the corpse of the murdered woman. An inquest was held on the body the same evening; and early the following morning the remains of the deceased were interred at the Roman Catholic Burial Ground. By this unfortunate occurrence three children have been made orphans, and the popular indignation against the murderer is great. All who can judge in the matter agree in pronouncing this to be the most barbarous and cowardly murder ever perpetrated, and one almost unparalleled in the history of crime. A preliminary inquiry into the case was held by the Cantonment Magistrate last Monday, when the deposition of his daughter, a little girl, was taken. The inquiry will be resumed on Saturday next, and we hope to give a report of the case in our next issue. In noticing this sad affair, we cannot help thinking that the 23rd Regiment is peculiarly unfortunate as regards its sergeants. It was only a few months back that we recorded the suicide of Sergeant-Major Lane, the culprit's predecessor, and we understand that five years ago a similar occurrence happened with a former sergeant-major. Another remarkable fact is that all these occurrences have taken place in one and the same building.—Chronicle, Oct. 2.

STORM AT VIZAGAPATAM.

Sunday last, the 29th September, dawned on us with an atmosphere as clear and serene as eye could wish to dwell upon. As the day advanced it became misty, with passing showers, and the evening closed with a bright sunset. No premonitory symptoms of an approaching change were indicated either by the barometer or anything around. At midnight the inhabitants were aroused from their deep slumbers by a mighty howling blast, and a sweeping rain, as though the elements had conspired to wreak their vengeance on the place. The spirit of the storm was upon us, and for four hours our ears were assailed with crashes and sounds, and we were filled with a feeling of awe, which created a longing for the dawn of day. The morning broke to eager and expectant hearts, only to disclose the horrors of the night. On every side huge branches of trees wrenched off from the parent stem were strewed about, and in many a spot mighty monarchs of the glade, torn up by the roots, and shorn of their grandeur, laid prostrate in the mud. Several houses presented a sad spectacle of the ordeal they had passed through; the Poor-house, which claimed the sympathy and aid of many of the residents, here fell in, burying in its ruins eight of the pauper inmates. Of the havoc amongst the winged denizens of the air the gardens gave testimony, and the sea had to pay its tribute also to the awful majesty that ruled the night. There were only two vessels in our roadstead at the time, and it would have been almost a miracle if they escaped a disastrous change by the morning. The apprehensions entertained of their safety were too truly realised. The sun rose on an empty roadstead, both vessels having been driven ashore during the night; one, the bark Gallant Neill, loading for Madras, and the other a native sloop. The former vessel went to pieces at daylight. The beach for more than a mile exhibited a scattered mass of wreck and ruin. Mr. Master, the collector, the superintendent of police, and the inspector of schools, were on the beach at daylight, and rendered all the assistance in their power to save and protect as much of the property as was accessible. The last-named official had one of his tents pitched on the spot to shelter the distressed, and all three went hand and heart to work to alleviate the disaster. The chief mate, Mr. Martin, was indefatigable in his exertions all day in securing as much of the wreck as possible, braving the surf and placing life and limb in jeopardy in clearing away the masts, and yet poor man he has saved nothing of his own but the clothes in which he stood. The captain also was a heavy sufferer by the catastrophe, as his ship was his home. The indirect results of the gale were more fatal, if not more disastrous, than its positive effects. The hills which impart a picturesque charm to the appearance of our little port disgorge their drainage into an armlet of the sea, which forms the western boundary of the town. During heavy rains the volume of water thus received adds so greatly to the force of the ebb-current that the sea becomes discoloured for miles around.

RESIGNATION OF LIEUT. E. B. WARD.

Oct. 1.—The following order received from the Govt. of India in the military dept. is published:—Office memorandum from Col. H. W. Norman, C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department (No. 445, dated Simla, July 26, 1867).

Aug. 2.—With reference to Home Department memorandum No. 2,167, dated July 11, 1867, forwarding correspondence regarding the resignation of his appointment in the police by Lieut. E. B. Ward, late 48th N.I., the military secretary is directed to request that on all occasions on which the resignation of an appointment by a military officer is accepted by the Civil Government, the Government of India, in the Military Department, may be informed of the exact circumstances under which such resignation was tendered and accepted.

2. The object of this information is to enable the C. in C. to judge as to the mode in which the officer reverting to military duty may be best employed, and this H.E. can only do satisfactorily by knowing whether the officer left his civil appointment solely on the ground that regimental or military duty appeared to hold out the best prospects of advancement, or because the conduct of his civil duties has either through incapacity, or want of temper, or idleness, or from whatever cause, failed to give that satisfaction to his superiors as would lead him to hope for success or advancement in that line.

3. Full information on these heads could, it is apprehended, be in all cases afforded by the head of the department, or the immediate superior of the officer resigning, and while its possession would be of great value to the C. in C., the knowledge that it was furnished to H.E. would doubtless have no bad effect on the officers civilly employed, while it would secure the deserving from that suspicion of inefficiency or incompatibility which has a tendency now of attaching alike to all those who abandon the line on which they have once entered.

Sept. 25.—No. 308.—Lieut. G. Nolan (unattached), exec. engr. 4th grade, for 10 days, in addition to that already granted to him (P.W.D. notification, No. 302, dated Sept. 24), prep. to proceeding to Europe on m.c.

Leave of absence:—

Sept. 28.—No. 312.—Mr. E. J. Meara, exec. engr., 4th grade, Bengal, has been allowed, by the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, a further ext. of 3 mo. of the leave, on m.c., already granted him.

No. 313.—Mr. A. J. Hughes, asst. engr., 1st grade, joined the presidency div. Sept. 19, 1867.

THE MAIL SERVICE.—The following important circular has been issued by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company:—"To the Editor.—Sir, I am instructed to inform you that the annual meeting of the company will be held on the 6th of December, but that the operations of the last financial year will not warrant the recommendation of a dividend in the report. The directors are, however, glad to be enabled to state that the terms of a contract for a lengthened period, for the new and increased mail services to and from India and China, have been agreed upon with the Government, and that the contract will be submitted to Parliament for approval in the approaching special Session.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, C. W. HOWELL, Secretary.—Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's Offices, 122, Leadenhall-street, E.C., Nov. 14."

LIEUT.-COLONEL MILWARD, R.A., Assistant-director of Ordnance at the War Department, having been selected by General Sir Robert Napier to command the mountain gun and rocket brigade attached to the Abyssinian expedition, is ordered to hold himself in readiness to embark on board the Indian troopship Crocodile, to sail on the 21st inst. Colonel Milward has been granted six months leave of absence, his duties at the War-office to be carried out in the meantime by Colonel Young-husband, R.A., now in Paris. Lieutenant A. R. Puzey and a detachment of the 10th company of Royal Engineers have left headquarters at Chatham for embarkation on board the mail steamer which conveys them to Massowah, for service with the Abyssinian expedition.

INTERPRETER FOR THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.—At the monthly meeting of the Church Missionary Society, the Rev. Probandary Venn, B.D., the hon. secretary, said that Sir Stafford Northcote having applied to the society, through Captain Eastwick, for any information which could be furnished in respect of interpreters for the Abyssinian expedition, and for such information respecting the country as the journals of missionaries might supply, he had in the interview with Captain Eastwick furnished to him such information as could be obtained from the records of the society's missionary work in Abyssinia; and that Sir Stafford Northcote had invited Dr. Krapf, formerly missionary in Abyssinia, to accompany the expedition as interpreter. Dr. Krapf, by letter, stated that he had accepted the offer of Sir Stafford Northcote, and would join the expedition at Massowah; that for the last two years he had been engaged in Amharic studies, especially in editing for the British and Foreign Bible Society an Amharic New Testament, 10,000 copies, and various small tracts in that language, as well as the four gospels in Tegue; that he had stipulated to have an assistant, who would act as Bible colporteur, and that he anticipated large opportunities of spreading Christian truth in connection with the expedition.

THE CADETS OF THE ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE AT SANDHURST have recently committed a series of outrages upon property and individuals, which have occasioned much alarm in the village of Yorktown, close to the college precincts. These outrages extended over a period of a whole week. Tradesmen's shops were entered, their windows demolished, and personal assaults committed. Mr. Broatman, a jeweller, and member of the Jewish persuasion, was much maltreated, without any adequate provocation. For several succeeding nights the cadets marched in compact bodies, discharging fireworks and creating great alarm. Fireworks were thrown into several shops, amongst others the shops of Messrs. Ham, butcher, and Ferguson, jeweller. Various reasons are assigned for the attack on the Jews' houses, the principal of which in regard to Mr. Broatman is, that in the capacity of money lender he extorted too high a rate of interest. An investigation has since been held, in consequence of which four or five young gentlemen have been summarily dismissed and sent to their homes. The inhabitants of Yorktown, so far as their fears will allow them to speak out, ascribe the proceedings to the imperfect state of discipline which is maintained at Sandhurst. It is averred that the cadets have easy access to spirituous liquors in the college, and come into the village ripe for any kind of mischief.

THE ROYAL SCHOOL FOR DAUGHTERS OF OFFICERS OF THE ARMY.—We observe that the claims of this valuable institution on the support of the military profession have been made the subject of an appeal put forth by Col. J. D. Shakespear, h.p., Royal Artillery, who advocates an open subscription to meet difficulties by which the institution is seriously hampered. It appears that the Royal School stands in need of funds to meet large outlays (about £3,000) incurred in increasing the accommodation of the establishment. These expenses (says the circular) originated "upon the understanding that a large sum which had been collected for a somewhat similar purpose was to be transferred to the committee; the money, however, has been unexpectedly withheld." The income of the Royal School is only sufficient for the current expenditure. A considerable debt, therefore, has to be paid, and as there are more than 20,000 officers serving, or who have served, in the army, it is hoped that by the exertions of so numerous a body the difficulty will be overcome, and an adequate fund raised. The Royal School enjoys the patronage of her Majesty the Queen; it forms alike a home and a place of education for the daughters of officers; the sphere of its operations is capable of great extension; and for these reasons the claims of the institution are paramount. Messrs. Cox and Co., Craig's-court, have consented to receive subscriptions, and those who are desirous of helping are requested to send their donations to them for the "Shakespeare Fund of the Royal School for Daughters of Officers of the Army." Any further information can be obtained from the Secretary (G. W. Forster, Esq.), 22, Cockspur street.

THE NATIVE CHRISTIANS residing in the territory of the Rajah of Chota Nagpore have found it necessary to petition the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal concerning the grievances under which they are labouring, owing to the oppression and tyranny exercised by the Rajah, and the arbitrary proceedings of the Commissioner, Major Dalton. The petitioners, of whom there are fourteen thousand, state that because they "were converted to Christianity by the enlightened missionaries of the Province, the Rajah, who is an orthodox Hindoo, is harassing his Christian ryots by unwarrantable extortions, by unjust demands and by cutting crops. It is to be hoped that Government will cause a searching inquiry to be made into the grievances of the petitioners, and insist upon Colonel Dalton giving a full explanation respecting his alleged "arbitrary proceedings."

LIVES OF INDIAN OFFICERS,

Illustrative of the History of the Civil and Military Services of India.

BY JOHN WILLIAM KAYE,

Author of "The History of the War in Afghanistan," &c.

Contents.

The Rev. HENRY MARTYN.	Sir HENRY LAWRENCE.
Sir CHARLES METCALFE.	General JAMES NAILL.
Sir ALEXANDER BURNES.	Brig.-Gen. JOHN NICHOLSON.
Lord CORNWALLIS.	Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY.
Sir JOHN MALCOLM.	Major ELDRED POTTINGER.
The Hon. MOUNTSTUART ELPHINSTONE.	Major D'ARCY TODD.
	Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. . . . I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history . . . and, unless the ability or the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. . . . I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and, by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune." J. W. KAYE.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. . . . Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employé of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

These exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured. As a Sedative, Nervotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "18 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious in all cases; and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of this morning brings news from Bombay to the 30th October, from Madras and Calcutta to the 23rd of the same month. The London mails of 3rd of October arrived at Bombay on the 26th.

Abyssinia, as usual, furnishes the leading subject for the Indian papers. In another place will be found a list of the officers and troops composing the Sindh Brigade of the Field Force, and of the ships in which they were to leave Kurra- chee at the beginning of November. The 3rd Sindh Horse from Jacobabad would not sail before the 1st of the month following.

The Times of India complains of the despatch of Captain Tryon, R.N., to Bom- bay, with a numerous staff, for what par- ticular purpose no one seems to know. Without doubting his ability, the Times thinks that far more experienced officers might have been found on the spot, if Abyssinia be the goal of his travels.

The 21st Punjab N. I. at Meean Meer was to form part of the Bengal column for Abyssinia. The Rev. C. H. Blumhardt had been allowed by the Church Mission- ary Society to join Sir R. Napier's force as a chaplain. His services will be all the more welcome from his knowledge of Aby- ssinia and the Amharic language, a hand- book of which he has just compiled, by order of the Indian Government. It con- tains parallel sentences in English, Urdu, and Amharic.

The Calcutta papers still whine a little over the anomalous arrangements of the Abyssinian expedition. It now seems strange to them that the Commander-in- Chief in Bengal should have no voice in the formation of Sir R. Napier's army. This is a new note struck on the old string. Let us hope that Sir W. Mansfield bears his trials as resignedly as his civil chief, the Viceroy himself is doing.

Colonel Strachey has published a minute, summarising the conclusions of the various local committees on the present diversity of Indian weights and measures, and coun- selling the adoption of the French decimal system as the base of any reform.

The shoe question is still harassing the public mind. It has even forced its way into official notice. The Indian Govern- ment has issued a circular to all Commis- sioners of Divisions, on the conflicting practices of different courts in this respect. The question seems to have been re-opened by a late decision in the case of a native gentleman of Bengal, who was ordered by the judge presiding to take off his English boots on entering the court. Surely the question can be solved without much waste of ink. Let the native in such cases take off either his turban or his shoes. If he dresses like a native he should follow the native etiquette.

The Oudh Rent Bill was to be again submitted to the Talookdars in its revised form, for the benefit of their opinion on matters not directly concerning their own engagements with the Government. Cer- tainly the Bill will not fail for want of careful supervision; if only it should not get more than enough of it. The English- man fears that this frequent revision will have a bad moral effect both on the Talook- dars and the general native public.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has followed up his tour through Assam by inviting two of the Calcutta associations to name each a member for the commis- sion ordered to report on the tea-fields of Assam and Cachar. It is supposed that the Landholders' Association will elect Mr. W. Fergusson, while Baboo Degumber Mitter is the probable choice of the British India Association. The commission ought to throw some light on the recent failures of Indian tea companies.

Elemental convulsions seem to have been raging of late with unusual violence in many parts of the world. The East Indies, like the West, have had more than their regular share of hurricanes, earthquakes, and such-like catastrophes. We have long accounts of a cyclone in the Bay of Bengal on the 29th September, an unusual time, it seems, for such a visitant. On the same day the pretty station of Vizianagram was turned into a scene of wreck by the worst hurricane ever remembered there. The same cyclone spread havoc far and wide along the Madras coast, damaging a light- house at Santapilly, wrecking many houses at Bimlipatam, and several ships at Viza- gapatam and Calingapatam. At the penul- timate place eight persons were killed by the falling in of the Municipal Poor-house. Chittoor was startled rather than hurt by one of those earthquakes which continually recur in India. Bengal was recovering from the effects of the late heavy floods.

The Indian Furlough Rules are causing general discontent, in Madras as well as the other presidencies. It is complained that events have rendered them obsolete and unjust, and there is a general demand for the placing of Indian officers on the same footing in this respect as their comrades in the line.

The Madras papers comment briefly on the retirement of Sir Thomas Pycroft, senior member of the Madras Civil Service, after about thirty-five years' actual work in India.

The Municipal Bill was to come into force at Madras on the 1st November.

The death of Afzul Khan leaves the affairs of Cabul in a new stage of complication. The Friend of India is very anxious that the Indian Government should throw in its lot with his favourite son and heir, Abdul-Rahman; but Sir J. Lawrence will probably continue his present policy of quiet watchfulness, at least until he sees his way to something better.

The Delhi papers mention the consecration of the Memorial Church of St. Stephen's at that station.

By the latest accounts from the Red Sea the weather there was beginning to cool at the end of last month. Camels were being shipped from Aden in great numbers for Zoola. The reconnoitring party had moved sixteen miles inland from Zoola to the river Waa, which runs down into the open through a low ridge of hills. Water there was good and plentiful. At Zoola the only drinkable water was got from Mulkutta, about a mile from the beach; but the ships would supply any amount of condensed water, not to speak of condensers set up on shore. In the first three days of his reconnaissance, Col. Phayre had already lined out seven miles of road, which would shorten the march inland by two miles.

Government having resolved to send out a scientific party with the field force, it is believed that Mr. H. F. Blandford, of the Indian Geological Survey, will be appointed geologist to the expedition, with special instructions to look for coal.

THE DEATH OF AMEER AFZUL KHAN.

At eight o'clock on the evening of the 10th October Abdool Rahman Khan went to the Balla Hissar Fort to see his father, the Ameer. The latter was at the time insensible. A few minutes after the Ameer's brother, Sirdar Mahomed Azim Khan, entered and sat by the side of his nephew, Abdool Rahman Khan. Azim Khan shook the Ameer's head to try to awaken him from his lethargy; by-and-by the Ameer recovered his senses. He kissed the forehead of his son, burst into tears, and then talked with his brother. After a short time a signal was given that the Ameer's wife, Bee Bee Murwareed, was approaching, and all retired, including Abdool Rahman Khan and Azim Khan, that she might converse alone with her dying husband. He delivered to her his last will and testament, regulating the management of his affairs after his death, after which she was dismissed from his presence. The Khans were again admitted. The Ameer was in great pain, and his strength seemed to be passing from him rapidly. His hands had become perfectly cold, and at eleven o'clock the same evening he expired. The remainder of the night was passed in loud lamentations by all those in the fort, "while great moanings and groanings which almost deafened one's ears continued unceasingly in the seraglio till daybreak." In the morning the first act of Sirdar Mahomed Azim Khan was to send a body of his armed men to stand as guards over the treasury. Abdool Rahman had appointed a guard from among his men for the same purpose, and both guards watched it, each under the belief that they were performing the duty for the benefit of their respective masters. Great agitation prevailed in the city when the death of the Ameer became known, and general distrust as to the future. The funeral of the Ameer was conducted with great pomp, and was attended by immense multitudes, including the Cabul Khans, and having in train all the troops, together with those of Sirdars Azim Khan and Abdool Rahman Khan. After the funeral ceremonies were over the former strengthened the Balla Hissar Fort and the latter the city, each jealous of the other to a degree that if report in Cabul speaks truly has led the brother of the deceased to open communications with the Akoond of Sawah, and the son of the deceased with the Ameer Shere Ali. A hollow reconciliation between the uncle and nephew was brought about by the widow of the deceased, who, in accordance with the will of the late Ameer, decorated Azim Khan with the turban of her late husband, and recognised him as Ameer of Afghanistan. Azim Khan put the turban on the head of Abdool Rahman Khan, saying that he was the eldest son of the late Ameer, and ought to be his heir, and that he willingly recognised Abdool Rahman Khan as the Ameer of Afghanistan. Abdool Rahman Khan put the turban back on his uncle's head, saying that he would never occupy the Cabul musnud in his presence, and that he would regard Azim Khan as a father, and pay him the reverence due by a son. So saying, he congratulated Azim Khan, jumped down and stood in front of him with closed hands in token of respect. Azim Khan then rose and embraced Abdool Rahman Khan, and made him sit by his side. The peace thus patched up between uncle and nephew still continues.

A later telegram, dated Oct. 17, says his son Abdool Rahman Khan and his brother Azim Khan have broken into hostility.

The former has written to the Ameer Shere Ali to expedite his march.

The latter has sought the Akoond's aid.—Bombay Gazette.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THURSDAY, November 21, 1867.

THE PURPOSE OF THE ABYSSINIAN CAMPAIGN.

QUEEN'S Speeches seldom touch on matters directly or indirectly concerning India. But in the speech delivered on the opening of the present session, two days ago, there is one little clause which Indian politicians will greet with praise or censure, according to their special leanings on the Abyssinian question. Her Majesty has "directed an expedition to be sent for that purpose alone;" namely, as the context tells us, to enforce a peremptory demand for the release of our countrymen from unjust imprisonment, and, we presume, to punish Theodore in the event of any misfortune overtaking his captives meanwhile.

This limitation will doubtless cause disappointment to many who foresaw or dreamed of ulterior purposes in the move for which British taxpayers are now being invited to furnish the needful money supplies. We own ourselves unable to share the disappointment. It is cruel enough in all conscience that several millions of public money should have to be expended in the due repairing of past blunders, whose parentage it will now do no good to trace too carefully. A year or two ago it might have been possible to "vindicate British honour" at a lower figure, by less warlike means. But the mischief has been done, the mistakes committed in this or that quarter; and now it is useless weeping over spilt water. We are in for the chances of another little war; the captives must be rescued or their fate avenged. "There is every prospect of success," observes Sir John Lawrence, "if the expedition be well commanded." A fitter leader than Sir Robert Napier it could not have; and, if Anglo-Indians in Bengal growl at the seeming slight to their own Government in the measures concerted between the India-office and the Government of Bombay, their complaints will not awaken much echo in England so long as the measures taken turn out well. If things prosper we shall even be in a mood to forget the preliminary waste of energy and money implied in the unpacking of condemned saddles at Woolwich, and in the sending of officers to Constantinople on a wild-geese chase for mules.

But the campaign over, and Theodore reduced to a becoming level of submissiveness, by all means let us halt there, or rather, in less ambiguous English, come back again without delay. So far as the Government is concerned, Lord Derby's assurance on this point amply confirms the promise of the Royal Speech. Mr. Gladstone, as Liberal leader, was earnest in the same direction. We may therefore take it for granted that when Sir R. Napier has done his present work, the expedition will be recalled, to the disappointment of those who see in such an enterprise either a fresh field of military and political service, or a newly-opened vista of commercial or religious gains. Such persons, however, ask too much in these days of general dislike to schemes of interference that may lead us Heaven knows whither, at a cost immeasurably beyond the conceivable profits. Whether it might pay or not to annex Abyssinia as a counterpoise to Egypt, or a possible barrier to France, certain it is that no Government in its senses would think of doing so in the face of a growing public opinion and a heavy public debt. It may easily be shown that Theodore's kingdom is on the road to India; but so is Constantinople, and so are other places, which no argument would justify us in annexing. We can only trust that, after the purpose of the present undertaking has been accomplished, the blundering that led to it will not be outdone by fresh miscarriages arising from the policy to which it may give birth. Our future relations with Abyssinia should leave no loophole for fresh interferences in the interests of British trade, or even in behalf of British Christianity.

WHO WAS TO BLAME AT NUSSEERABAD?

FATAL marches of European troops in India have lately occurred with disheartening frequency. Without going back to the too memorable march from Mhow, which ought, one fondly hoped, to have precluded like disasters for many years to come, we have during the last few months been shocked with the tidings of three different movements marked by the same sort of blunders which ended in catastrophes of the same kind. From Peshawar, from Gwalior, and last of all from Nusseerabad, European troops were moved out to camping grounds a few miles distant; in one case to make room for less healthy comrades; in the others to make head against the incipient ravages of disease among themselves. On each occasion the process of changing ground was so unhappily managed as to ensure results the very opposite to those apparently designed.

On the main facts in each instance there is no room for rational doubt. Anglo-Indian journalists are neither worse nor better natured than journalists at home. Their province is to give news which may or may not be always of the truest; to criticise more or less fairly all incidents that seem more or less open to public criticism. For their news they are mainly dependent on the volunteer correspondents who form a large proportion of their readers. Englishmen in India are as ready to grumble as Englishmen in other countries; sometimes unreasonably, or over much, but seldom out of ill-will preposse. And in India as in England the criticised can always, and commonly do, revenge themselves on their critics; for every attack, however fairly made, there is sure to stand forward a defence however invalid. Statements that remain unanswered, when some kind of answer might allay the prevalent uneasiness or silence the adverse criticism, naturally suggest that there is no answer to make. With regard, for instance, to the march of the 1st Royals from Nusseerabad, we find an agreement only too general in the accounts that reach this country. Somebody or other is clearly to blame for the circumstances which brought so much death and suffering on a body of soldiers in whose welfare both India and England are, from the mere money point of view, so largely concerned.

One would think that the process of marching a regiment from its quarters into a neighbouring camp would hardly be an intricate one in a country where regiments are continually on the move, or kept ready for moving. The Horse Guards may mismanage a march of cavalry from Hounslow to London; but in India one looks for smarter practice. Yet in this case the blundering seems to have been complete. After the medical officers had done their duty in urging a prompt retreat before an advance of cholera, the delay in acting on their advice may possibly be explained by some special difficulty in finding due carriage at so short a notice. Things, we know, have greatly altered in this respect during the last ten years. Still, forty-eight hours seems a long time in a pressing case, even though administrative economy has cut down the marching establishments of Indian regiments to the lowest possible scale. But, when the Royals set forth at last on a hot September morning, how came the tents to be so unready, or their bearers so ill-informed, that the men had to simmer through a September day without shelter or even food? And how was it that the very same blunder was repeated a few days later in the case of the women and children?

In such circumstances cholera soon made its presence felt within the camp. Men, women, and children died fast; and the regiment, instead of being dispersed to different camping grounds, had to remain "huddled together" in tents that looked out upon the graves of soldiers of another regiment who died of cholera a few years before. To add to the trouble there was a dearth of medical attendants, of medical comforts, and a pressure of hospital room. The doctors were terribly overworked. Much help in the way of carriage was happily rendered by the artillery at the station. But complaints were made that the brigadier commanding kept carefully aloof from the infected regiment, having visited the camp but once only for half-an-hour in the first fifteen days. For the exact truth of this last particular we cannot vouch; but the Delhi Gazette insists on "the stubborn fact" that no heed was given to many urgent applications for help.

Who or what is to blame for this fresh instance of a breakdown under no unusual pressure? Cholera will appear in the healthiest stations, and means of meeting it may not always come to hand in a few hours. But somebody is answerable for sending the soldiers out in one direction and their tents in another, for giving no heed to urgent representations for encamping a disease-stricken regiment among the tokens of a former epidemic, for neglecting any precautions which might have averted or any means which might have lessened the resultant evils. Is all we have been reading true, or false, or exaggerated? And if it be at all near the truth, how comes it that such miscarriages occur so often in these days? Does the fault, if any, rest mainly with individuals, or with this or that department, or with the system that embraces all? An official inquiry is said to have been ordered into the whole business. Let us hope that it will be searching enough to furnish convincing answers for these questions.

Spirit of the Local Press.

GOVERNMENT BY NATIVE AGENCY.

The Delhi Gazette affirms that, as a general rule, the people of India, if the choice were given them, would declare for the complete abolition of native agency in all departments of the State. We could show clearly that our unswerving belief of such being the real state of the case is right, should it ever prove necessary that we do so. Meanwhile we invite attention to the important circumstance known by all who have dealings with natives, that, when they have the choice of a court of law to which to resort for the settlement of a dispute, the righting of a wrong, or the determination of an important issue, it is to that presided over by an Englishman to which they flock in preference to that controlled by a native. This is literally the case throughout the land. Moreover, it is proverbial that where the law requires that the court of first instance should be one having a native officer on the bench, that court is not considered one where justice, as justice is administered, but one merely for a species of preliminary investigation and the arrangement of documents. The court of appeal, where the law permits an appeal, and the funds admit of the luxury, is considered by both parties to a suit the tribunal from which justice pure and simple, without the intervention of partiality, friendship, caste prejudices, or something far worse than either, will be obtained. There, and there alone, they say, if the presiding officer be not blind to the faults and failings of his native subordinates, and be alive to the importance of his decisions, justice may be had without money and without price. As for the unpopularity of our courts of law during the rebellion, was it not due to the fearful oppression practised by native subordinates of European officials, as well as to the venality and tyranny of native officers in purely native courts?

MODEL PRISONS IN INDIA.

The Madras Times strongly objects to laying out large sums of money on feeding, clothing, and educating the dregs of the Indian population in model prisons, while the honest millions are left to struggle as they can with poverty, famine, disease, and unlettered ignorance. The deaths from cholera among prisoners are far below those among Sepoys. Then, as to the education and improvement of criminals. May we ask what is being done about the education of the honest millions, who are required to pay their hard earned money to send thieves and murderers to school? If Government is blessed with a spare million or two, why is it not spent upon the education of the people? That would bear some good fruit; and when we have a vernacular school in every village, it will be quite time enough to think about spending honest people's money to educate criminals of every degree in the jails. The munificent sum of thirty-four pounds sterling was spent by Government last year for the promotion of female education throughout the whole of the Bombay Presidency. How much has been spent on the rest of India to promote education, female, or other? Then Sir Robert Napier tells us that not a single brick or stone has yet been laid in the presidency he commands for the improved barracks and workshops which the enlightened authorities of the day have destined for the British soldiers' accommodation. Of course, because there is no money. Military authorities are recommended to profit by the example of the jail department, and to render European barracks as free from cholera as the jails are. But, of course, no money can be found for the purpose. Hospitals, barracks, railways, canals, irrigation works, Lawrence asylums, schools, and public works of every kind, are all crying out for money, and all at a stand still, because no money can be found. Surely, we may ask that these things may be considered before more money is squandered upon the luxury, refinement, and education of the denizens of our jails.

FURLOUGH RULES.

The Madras Times remarks that the burdens, restrictions, and penalties of the Indian Furlough Rules would long ago have become intolerable but for the one safety-valve of sick leave to Europe. Hundreds would have been doomed to almost a life-long exile in India but for the liberal consideration shown by the medical officers of the army to their brother officers. But it cannot be doubted that this is a false position, both for the medical officer and the military man. On what principle is the enormous difference in the rules which affect private leave and sick leave kept up? If a man has served his prescribed period of five years or ten years, or whatever the number may be, in India, why is he not entitled to take his leave at the end of that time, whether well or ill? The Queen's regulations for the army authorise every general officer commanding on a foreign station to grant furlough to England to officers for two years, where it can be done without injury to the public service. Let the officers of the staff corps ask that this plain rule shall be made applicable to them. It is absurd to suppose that every conceivable artificial restriction requires to be placed on furlough to England to prevent the whole army rushing away at once. The restrictions which must always exist are quite sufficient, without heaping up penalties and punishments which are the barbarous relics of a former age, when the avowed object was to keep every public servant in India for life.

OLD TANKS AND RESERVOIRS.

The Madras Athenæum calls attention to a growing evil connected with the system of repairing the bunds of tanks at an immense expenditure of public money, for the purposes of securing as large a supply of water in the rainy season as can be retained in the dry season. The space in the beds of the tanks left exposed by the receding of the waters is annually let out for agricultural purposes. Now, nothing could be more ruinous than this, and nothing more destructive to the tanks themselves, which year by year, from being ploughed up to their foundations, become so loose and sandy that when the heavy falls of rain from neighbouring hills come down they are filled up by washing from their sides and by rubbish from the bases of the hills which surround them. Such a state of things must eventually tend to fill the tanks up entirely, and nullify the object for which they were originally intended.

The annual deprivation of a paltry sum on account of tank-lands leased bears no comparison whatever to the gradual, but certain, destruction of valuable tanks, which were originally constructed at an immense cost, and to put which into a perfect and efficient state of repair, when the mischief has once been done, would saddle the Public Works Budget with a far heavier expense than the additional revenue would compensate for for years to come.

HURDWAR AND ITS LESSON.

The Friend of India, commenting on the failure of sanitary science to prevent or arrest that outburst of cholera from which North-Western India has not yet ceased to suffer, disputes the theory that where there is no smell there is no danger. The investigation carried on last year by Dr. Fawcus at Alipore shows that, in a mixture which was perfectly inodorous, the fecal matter remained chemically in act, and was subsequently drawn from its hiding-place by a chemical solvent complete in its offensiveness and form.

Natives, as Mr. Robertson tells us, are shrewd observers. The hakeems at Hurdwar attributed the outbreak to the smoke from the furnaces used for burning the filth from the latrines. The mass of the people, however, attributed it to the circumstance that we buried the filth from the latter in trenches close to their tents. They assert that this answered admirably while the weather continued dry, but that the extremely heavy fall of rain on the night of the 11th saturated these trenches, raising a miasma that affected the whole people. This opinion Mr. Williams criticises with some severity. He again mistakes the absence of smell for the absence of miasma, and ascribes the hypothesis to "Native antipathy to conservancy." He might perhaps have said, in a different spirit, that the natives were not reconciled to the conservation of filth by the absence of stench—that they were unfettered by fashionable dogmas, and at liberty to make free use of their simple senses, and draw crude connections between events that passed before their eyes.

OFFICIAL CORRUPTION IN INDIA.

The Delhi Gazette laments the want in India of a powerful public opinion, that might check the growing prevalence of corrupt practices in high places. English officials invite the discredit in which they are involved with the natives by remaining wilfully blind to the corruption of their subordinates. Probably no part of India affords such a terrible illustration of this as the political agencies in Rajpootana, Central India, and elsewhere. But how can it be otherwise when, from top to bottom, the whole system of the administration is a matted network of intrigue?

Is there a single contract ever let out in the Commissariat or Public Works Department, or any department that has the expenditure of money, and the letting out of contracts to a native, that is not paid for? Not one.

Is there a single post held by a native in any Government office in the whole country, in any court of justice, in any cutchery, that is not paid for by the recipient? Not one.

Is there a single instance of any man who conscientiously set himself to work the stream of corruption into a purer channel—a single contractor, for instance, who boldly refused to give the accustomed dues—who was not brought to grief, or ruined by a cabal and clique in the office whence the contract issued? We do not believe there is one.

We are not implying that the money always finds its way into the pockets of the European official at the head of the office or department. Among the masses of the natives the idea that it does in all cases is so deeply rooted that no persuasion, or denial, or argument will eradicate it.

NON-OFFICIAL MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

The Englishman points out the need for some reform connected with the non-official members of the Legislative Council:—

The non-official members are supposed to be independent, and to represent the interests of commerce and of trade. This would be the case if they were appointed by the Chambers of Commerce and the Trades Associations, but at present they are appointed by the Governor-General of India, the Governors of Bombay and Madras, and the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. The result is that the members appointed are selected on account of their being what is called safe men, and their readiness to support any measures that the Government may bring forward. Have we ever seen anything like independent action in the non-official members of the different Councils of India? Has any one of them ever opposed the Government or penned a minute of dissent to any Government measure? We cannot call to memory one single instance of such opposition. A Grey and a Durand have written some very spirited dissents from the action of the Governor-General, but we have never seen one from a Cowie or a Hamilton. In fact the appointment of non-official members by Governors only adds more to the power of the latter, and swamps the little independence that does exist among the official members. It has been remarked to us that the appointment of a Peterson to the Bengal Council is an exception to the general practice, and that he at least does not exhibit any subserviency to Government. But we are not of that opinion. The remedy for this is to confer the power of selecting the members of the different Councils on the Chambers of Commerce and the Trades Associations. We trust some such reform will be made by the Secretary of State in Council or by Parliament when they come to make changes in the present Government of India. To maintain the present mode of appointing non-official members is to present us with the shadow of independence, while we are denied the substance.

THE DETACHMENT OF H.M.'S 93RD SUTHERLAND HIGHLANDERS, now at Seepree, leaves that station for Jhansi on the 21st of October.

BENGAL.

GOING TO LAW IN INDIA.

Having a little money to invest, I foolishly spent it in the purchase of a house in the bazaar of the city of Budgepore. I did not live there, of course, or intend living there, but I let the house for a very decent rent. I had not been in possession long before a rich bunya built a brick wall up within two feet in front of the door of the house. This, as you may easily see, was inconvenient to my tenants (one of whom was rather stout), and who all immediately vacated. I was obliged to bring an action against the bunya. It was filed in the Principal Sudder Ameen's court, of course. It was numbered thirty-five, and a day fixed for first hearing. Well, I went there on the day fixed, and then found I was mistaken; the number of the suit was 135, and not 35, and another day was fixed. I went, and to my astonishment found the suit was not numbered 135 at all, but 235. Again a postponement. But I cannot tell you how many times I went only to have to go away again. At last I did what I ought to have done at first, inquired into the cause, when I found that the rich bunya was a creditor of the Principal Sudder Ameen's serishtadar, who owed him Rs. 1,000.

I then applied and had the suit brought into the Judge's court. But here I was destined to no better success. I engaged a vakeel, to whom I entrusted all the papers in the case. Well, as a matter of course, the bunya easily bought him over, and he lost all the papers, and I had the trouble and expense of getting fresh ones. At last the case came on for settlement of the issues, when what was my astonishment to hear the vakeel for the defendant suggest in the first issue whether there was any door at all. I lost my temper and got very angry, but I found sure enough that their first plea was that there was no door at all. It reminded me of the American case about the kettle which the plaintiff alleged the defendant had borrowed and returned without the spout. "I shall prove," said the counsel to the jury. "that in the first place the kettle had no spout when it was borrowed; secondly, that it never was borrowed, and thirdly, that there was no kettle at all."

As soon as the day's business was over I got into my buggy, and drove down to look at the premises, and to see what the man could possibly mean by saying there was no door when I had seen it scores of times. To my utter astonishment I found he was correct; there was no door, and to all appearance never had been one. No vestige of such a thing could be traced anywhere on the wall, so adroitly had it been built in and the place concealed. I got in through one of the windows, and examined the inside wall, and found that that exhibited no more trace than the outside wall. I asked the neighbours if they could not swear there had been a door there, but they all denied ever having seen one. I went to the kotwal, and he said he had already promised the defendant to depose to the fact that the house never had had a door. In despair I went to the man from whom I purchased the house, and he calmly assured me that this was the very reason why he had sold the house, because it had no door, and he had found residence there inconvenient in consequence. That is the state of my case; and now tell me, for you have had some experience in these matters, what do you think of it?

"Well, Old Mortality," said we, "your chance of a decree is not worth much. Why didn't you get proper legal assistance in the first instance? Why didn't you get a barrister from Calcutta?"

I did try, but I found the expense too great. My attorneys, in reply to my letter asking what Mr. — would take up the case for, intimated it would be necessary for me to pay the fees beforehand—that, of course, I knew;

but when they said that — would not come for less than ten thousand rupees down, and a thousand rupees an hour from the time he left till the time he returned to Calcutta, I thought it was too much. But now I am all right, I have been, and am still, studying the decisions of the Sudder Dewany from 1857, and I shall conduct the case myself, and when the Chief Justice comes down from the hills, I shall petition to have the case transferred to the High Court.—Delhi Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE FALL OF RAIN IN CALCUTTA from 1st January to 7th October was 60.20 inches against 59.55 inches in the corresponding period of last year.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR OF BENGAL will leave Roorkee on the 1st of November, arrive at Delhi on the 22nd, and at Allypore on the 6th of December.

THE RAIL.—The sections of the Delhi Railway between Umritsur and the Beas River, and Meerut and Ghazeeabad, will be opened for traffic on the 1st of November.

THE PUNJAB FRONTIER FORCE.—The Government have at last sanctioned the arming of the Punjab Frontier Force with the short Enfield rifle—their present weapon not being at all adapted for hill warfare.

THE 3RD LIGHT INFANTRY has marched from Kohat to Peshawur. The 21st Punjab Infantry under command of Major Thelwall, C.B., left Meeran Meer en route for Abyssinia on the 15th of October. This regiment marches to Delhi and thence proceeds by rail to Calcutta.

DR. LEITNER AGAIN.—A commission, consisting of Messrs. Egerton and Aitchison, with Mr. Baden Powell as secretary, sat yesterday, for the first time, to enquire into the conduct of Dr. Leitner, and whether he has neglected his official duties or not.—Chronicle, Oct. 16.

CHEERAT, Oct. 8.—With the middle of October Cheerat will cease to be a sanitarium. Active preparations are being made for the departure of the troops, which is expected about the 15th of October, when the several detachments will join their respective regiments and batteries, and the 42nd Regiment will proceed to Bombay en route to England.

ACCIDENT TO LIEUT. TAYLOR.—We regret to hear that Lieutenant G. Taylor, her Majesty's 14th Hussars, met with a severe accident by the upsetting of a dog cart he was driving on the 17th of October at Meerut. He has sustained a simple fracture of the thigh bone. The leg has been set, however, and we hear he is doing well.

THE 6TH BENGAL CAVALRY will be at Amritsur on the 28th of October, Umballa on the 13th of November, Allypore on the 4th of December. The right wing of the regiment goes to Cawnpore, the left to Jhansi, which stations they will reach respectively on the 22nd and 24th of December.

PART OF A GUINEA WORM, three feet four inches in length, was yesterday taken out of the foot of a Jew by Dr. Fayer, at the Medical College Hospital. It was twice broken in attempting to remove it on previous occasions, and it was only after the exercise of great skill and patience that Dr. Fayer succeeded in getting the remainder.—Hurkaru, Oct. 17.

THE BENGAL CAVALRY FOR SERVICE IN ABYSSINIA.—The Governor-General, in desiring the Commander-in-Chief to select two regiments of Bengal cavalry for service in Abyssinia, desired that the strength of each should be brought up to 450 sabres of all ranks, and that care should be taken to render their equipment in all respects as complete and efficient as possible. Orders have also been issued that such equipment for mule carriage is to be provided for the 5-25 Royal Artillery as can be at once got ready.

RETURN OF TRAFFIC OF THE E. I. RAILWAY.—For week ending 29th September, 1867. Miles open, 1,131. Coaching Receipts, £10,884. 3s. 9d. Goods Receipts, £22,580. 10s. 10d. Total, £33,464. 14s. 7d. Per mile of Railway, £29. 11s. 9d.

PROPOSED SANITARIUM FOR BURMAH.—We mentioned last week Mountjoy, in the Arracan Hills, as a proposed sanitarium for British Burma. The altitude of the mountain on which it is situated is 3,000 feet. It is distant from the Burman village Myoungkedouk thirteen miles, and may be considered as midway between the valley of the Irawaddy and the sea coast of Arracan.—Friend of India.

THE DOORGA POOJAH was celebrated with great éclat at Simla by the numerous Hindoo officials there. They had the idol made, but the decorations were obtained from Calcutta. Most of the big Government officials witnessed the celebration, and were supposed to be pleased! It is said that many Europeans assisted the Bengalees with funds for this Poojah! As the Simla season is nigh over, the Bengalees of the several India offices express great joy, as their exile is nearly at an end.

ASIATIC CHOLERA IN CALCUTTA.—Several cases of cholera of the Asiatic type have been admitted into the Chandney Hospital within the last few days. The majority of the cases terminated fatally. A remarkable feature in the sudden development of this disease is, that all the cases were brought in from Bepareetollah, in the neighbourhood of Wellington-square, where excavations have been and are being made.—Indian Daily News.

EMEUTE AT AHMADPORE.—On the night of 25th September an émeute took place at Ahmadpore, among the troops of the Bhawalpore State, which we are administering during the minority of the Nawab. It was speedily quelled with the loss of only one life. Captain Minchin, the Superintendent, at once proceeded to the spot, and on the 27th all was settled. The disturbance was caused by the machinations of some of the State officials who have been superseded by our management.

THE LATE FLOODS.—We are now in a position to form an opinion of the effect of the late floods in Lower Bengal, and are glad to state that they have not caused any serious suffering or loss, and that, on the whole, both landlords and tenants will benefit from them. The inundation was highest in the neighbourhood of the upper part of the Matabhangah, and as far down that river as Kanaghat. We are glad to learn the damage done to the Eastern Bengal Railway has been made good, and that the trains run through as usual.—Englishman, Oct. 21.

MR. T. H. THORNTON, C.S., Secretary to Government, Punjab, is about to apply for leave for three months. Mr. Aitchison, now Officiating Commissioner of the Lahore division, will, in all probability, be appointed to officiate for Mr. Thornton during his absence, which may be prolonged beyond the period about to be applied for. Mr. L. Griffin, for his successful aid in setting all Lahore on fire, is appointed magistrate of the camp of his Honor the Lieutenant Governor during Sir D. McLeod's approaching peregrinations.

THE MINT APPOINTMENTS.—The Government of India, we learn, has lately ruled that as the Mint establishments in the three presidencies are at the immediate disposal of the India Government, all appointments in the Assay Departments of the Mints should be made by that Government. The Government has also directed that in future when any vacancy occurs in the Assay Department the assaymasters or their deputies should send their applications direct to the Supreme Government through the Mintmasters.—Indian Daily News and Bengal Hurkaru, Oct. 21.

REWARDS TO NATIVES.—The title of Rai Bahadur, as a personal distinction, has been conferred by the Viceroy on Pundit Vincut Rao, of the Central Provinces, and Meg Raj Oswal, merchant of Gawalparah, Assam; on the former, in recognition of the satisfactory administration of the Burwani State, in Central India; and on the latter, in consideration of the useful service he rendered to the State during the Bhootan Campaign.—Indian Daily News.

APPOINTMENT OF UNCOVENANTED ASSISTANT SECRETARY.—We understand that the Governor-General in Council has sanctioned the appointment of an Uncovenanted Assistant Secretary in the Home Department, on a salary of Rs. 1,000 a month, progressively rising to Rs. 1,250 by an annual increase of Rs. 50, and also an increase to the existing establishment of that department at an additional cost of about Rs. 1,000 per mensem. By the proposed arrangements the salary of the Registrar of the Home Secretariat is to be raised from Rs. 600 to Rs. 800 a month.

THE 36TH N.I.—We regret to learn that Colonel Carey, commanding the 36th Regiment N.I., who has been on sick leave at Simla all the hot season, will be compelled to visit England on account of his health, as his medical advisers consider that an entire change of climate is absolutely necessary. Lieutenant-Colonel Scott, who has lately lost his appointment as second in command in Colonel Carey's regiment, owing to the fact of his not being a Staff Corps officer and of his being promoted to a regimental lieutenant-colonelcy, is spoken of as the probable successor to Lieutenant-Colonel Carey during that officer's absence. Major Fowle has succeeded to the appointment of second in command vacated by Lieutenant-Colonel Scott.

GOVERNMENT DESPATCHES.—It has hitherto been the practice with some of the local Governments to send separate despatches direct to the State Secretary, reporting petty and ordinary cases, and soliciting his orders thereon, without previous intimation being made to the Government of India. The Secretary of State, in a recent despatch addressed to the Governor-General, has now requested his Excellency to have this practice discontinued, and has ruled, that in all emergent military cases only, in which delay in sending the despatches through the proper channel would be detrimental to the interests of the State, the local Governments should be empowered to send separate despatches direct to her Majesty's Secretary of State.

LOSS OF THE "SURAT."—A correspondent of the Madras Athenæum gives an account of the stranding of the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Surat below Suez, on the 5th of Sept. She left Suez with about 100 passengers on the afternoon of the 4th, and next morning at two o'clock ran on the coral reef called Charbul Kossah, two miles off the Arabian Coast and ninety below Suez. It was a fine clear night, the pilot and second mate were both on the bridge, and the breakers were making a loud noise. Nevertheless the engines were not eased until the vessel ran up the reef. The Nubia came to her relief on the 7th, but could give no assistance on account of the high sea until the 8th, when she took the passengers back to Suez. Two young officers in the Nubia fell victims to the violent heat in the Red Sea.

BENGAL TROOPS FOR ABYSSINIA.—Colonel D. M. Stewart, Dep. Adj. General Head Quarters, has been appointed Brigadier General of the 2nd Class, to command the Brigade of Bengal troops ordered to Abyssinia. Captain H. Fellowes, Brigade Major, Umballa, to be Brigade Major; and Major F. Roberts, V.C., Assistant Quartermaster General at Allahabad, to be Deputy Assistant Quartermaster General to the troops under Colonel Stewart. The troops ordered from Bengal are No. 5 Battery 25th Brigade, R.A., with the Mountain Train attached; the 10th and 12th Regiments Bengal Cavalry, and the 23rd Native Infantry. Lieutenant-Colonel T. F. Wilson is to be Deputy Adjutant General at Head Quarters in the room of Colonel Stewart, whose tenure of five years has expired; and Lieutenant-Colonel G. E. Holmes, Assistant General of Meerut Division, is to be 1st Assistant Adjutant General at Head Quarters, vice Colonel Wilson.—Indian Daily News.

GAOL SUPERINTENDENTS.—In consequence of the laxity of supervision and control by native darogahs attached to the several gaols in the Central Provinces, which appears evident from the report of those gaols, the Government of India has sanctioned the appointment of European superintendents in all the local prisons throughout those provinces, as proposed by the Chief Commissioner. In one instance, in a certain gaol, a number of prisoners were ordered to work outside the gaol, and near a thick jungle, under charge of two prisoner warders only. In the course of the day all the prisoners, together with the two warders, managed to escape by breaking their irons. In another gaol a prisoner escaped by scaling the walls of the prison with a ladder. In a third, a female prisoner, after remaining in gaol for several months, was discovered to be in an interesting state. Under such circumstances, a more strict supervision by European agency appears to be absolutely necessary.—Indian Daily News.

A GALLANT SPORTSMAN.—Captain Fraser, District Superintendent of Police, has been transferred from Bhundara to Nimar. As a successful and experienced sportsman the gallant captain had no rival in these provinces. The deadly warfare he has waged against tigers in particular has so thinned the jungle of those formidable brutes, that you may now wander miles and miles without meeting even one in places that were formerly infested with them. Now as tigers abound in the jungles of Nimar, we would suggest that the Government hunting elephant, hitherto used to such good purpose by Captain Fraser, be permitted to accompany him to Nimar. Once that officer leaves Bhundaru the Government may as well dispose of the animal as keep it there, for there will be then no tigricide like Captain Fraser, to give it its accustomed exercise, and the sagacious brute must rust out for want of the tiger's familiar roar to put it on its mettle and summon up its blood.—Central India Times, Oct. 12.

COFFEE IN CEYLON.—From Ceylon we learn that the coffee crop this year, although not a failure, has fallen considerably below the estimate. It is about 6,000 cwts. less than the out-turn of the previous year, 837,231 cwts., although the season opened with every anticipation of a crop exceeding by 100,000 cwts. the largest ever exported from the island. One of the Ceylon papers gives the following information regarding the exports. Not a berry of coffee has been sent during the past season to Mauritius, which for a long series of years has generally taken a few thousand cwts. The quantity sent to America shows a great decrease on that of last year, but France took during this season 17,571 cwts., against nil in 1865-66. But for all practical purposes, it may be said that the entire coffee crop finds its way to the British metropolis, thence to be distributed not only over the mother country, but over the continent of Europe. Out of 585,000 cwts. in 1861-62 only 40,000 were diverted from England; 62,000 out of 787,000 in 1862-63; 36,000 out of 657,000 in 1863-64; 53,000 out of 884,000 in 1864-65; and in consequence of the increased exports to the United States and Australia, 91,000 in 1865-66 out of 844,740; while in 1866-67, but 48,000 cwts. out of 837,000 were diverted from England.—Indian Daily News.

PAYMASTER HEWSON.—A correspondent favours us with an account of a farewell dinner given to Paymaster Hewson at Mooltan, on the 30th ultimo:—"Colonel Walter proposed the toast of the evening with his usual fluency and eloquence. He dwelt at great length, and in a most affecting strain of eulogy, on the many virtues, both social and public, of their guest, and held up Major Hewson's life as an example to this and future generations. Without having by any means exhausted his mine of eloquence in gracefully commenting upon the many sterling qualities of the worthy Paymaster, but in obedience only to the pressure of time, Colonel Walter resumed his seat amidst vociferous applause. Major Hewson rose to respond amidst a storm of cheering and a hammering of tables fatal to the simkin glasses; the Major attempted to say 'Brother officers,' but his emotion prevailed and he became inarticulate. All sobbed with sympathy, and had not the band come to the rescue with 'Cheer, boys, cheer,' a deep gloom must inevitably have enveloped the conviviality of the occasion. The inspiring strains of the band and divers encouraging cheers, with cries of 'Go it, Buxahie,' operated favourably, and a response of Gladstonian eloquence and very considerable length gave expression to the sentiments of the paymaster. Major Hewson leaves with the affectionate regret of all ranks for his urbanity, condescension, and unwearying efforts for the harmony of the regiment have endeared him to every one. In him Colonel Walter loses a sincere friend and an able adviser, and nothing short of the demise of the colonel himself could add to the sorrow which is felt by every one who is alive to the irreparable loss the regiment is about to sustain."—Chronicle, Oct. 9.

ANOTHER FEARFUL DISASTER ON THE ANDAMANS.—We (Maulmain Advertiser) have had some painful intelligence on this subject placed at our disposal by one of the surviving party, which we shall narrate briefly. The brig Nineveh left Negapatam for Rangoon on the 10th Sept., with 86 emigrants and a crew of 20 hands. She experienced such violent weather that on the night of the 16th, becoming unmanageable, she drifted on to a reef on the Andaman group—one of the smaller islands, says our informant. Finding no hope of getting the vessel off, the parties on board went on shore, where they remained two days unmolested and seeing no one. On the third day while the boat had gone to the ship for provisions, the party were surprised suddenly by a posse of savages, who commenced an attack on them with bows and arrows; upon this some took to the sea—the Nacodah and nine succeeded in getting off in the ship's boat, which had returned; some took to the jungle, others made a slight raft and put to sea. This had not since been seen or heard of. The party in the ship's boat were picked up by a Coringa brig, which arrived here yesterday. About 80 persons are supposed to have been left on the island, of whom the Nacodah relates that he saw several struck down by the savages' arrows.

THE CRIMEAN DINNER AT SIMLA.—A correspondent writing from Simla informs us that a Crimean dinner, composed principally of officers who were not in the Crimea, came off a few days since at the club, at which his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief was present. Some twenty officers sat down to dinner, after which the usual loyal toasts were drunk, when Gen. Beaton rose and proposed the health of Sir William Mansfield, and upset an immense quantity of butter over the chief's antecedents, up to the date of his assuming command of the Indian army, at which point he deemed it advisable to say no more, as the regulations of the service would not admit of it. In returning thanks, Sir William proposed the "Indian army," coupled with the name of his distinguished and much esteemed friend General Beaton. After eulogising the army which he had the honour to command, and which he naturally took the profoundest interest in, he retaliated upon the general by de-ing him by the same amount of butter. His Excellency spoke at some length, and with that masterly display of subtle oratory and free use of pseudonymous expressions for which he is so remarkable; after which the party broke up.—Lahore Chronicle, Oct. 9.

A SUTTEE PREVENTED.—An attempted suttee was lately reported to the Governor-General's agent in Rajpootana, in the prevention of which several natives took an active part. It appears that on the 23rd July last a Bullaie, named Rooru, of the village of Soorlea, in the Puchpahar district, died; his wife at once prepared to perform suttee. On this becoming known, the watchman of the place informed the Billahdar of Puchpahar and Bohora, Nathoo Lall, in charge of affairs at Jhallawar. The latter, without loss of time, despatched a body of horse to prevent the occurrence, and addressed the Billahdar in strong terms regarding its prevention. The latter forthwith proceeded to the scene and stopped the suttee, but not without an altercation of nine hours with the Hindoo population of the village, who contended that it was a serious sin to interfere with a person thus prepared to commit herself to the flames. The orders of Bohora Nathoo Lall, however, being very strict, the woman was locked up, and a guard placed over her until the corpse was consumed; and, further, ten people, who were aiding and abetting her in the act, were seized and imprisoned. All the native officials concerned, as well as the Maharaja Rana of Jhallawar, the State in which this occurred, have been congratulated by the Viceroy on the great credit the proceedings reflect on them.

JUBBULPORE.—The wise rule promulgated by the Viceroy, requiring all correspondence with native princes to be in English is bearing fruit in a manner somewhat unexpected. The Maharajah of Rewah has come to the conclusion that a knowledge of English is to be highly desired, and has, with a view to its being properly acquired by his chiefs and sirdars, established an English school at his capital. We are glad to hear that Mr. G. M. Tagore, barrister of the Calcutta High Court, has been requested by his Highness the Maharajah of Rewah to become either his Minister of Justice at Rewah or his Law Manager in Calcutta. Mr. Tagore is likely to take the latter appointment at Rs. 1,000 a month. He will also be engaged in preparing a Civil Code for the Maharajah's subjects.—Commercial Advertiser, Oct. 9.

THE EUSUFZAI COUNTRY.—"A Mountaineer," writing in the Pioneer, gives a shocking account of the condition of the Eusufzai districts on the east of the Loondah river. The country is without vegetation, except a saline plant known as "sujee," and a stunted species of thorny plum tree. A description of rot had lately broken out among the sheep and goats; and from the carcasses of its victims arose a concentration of all foul essences; "no lazar-house or Naples death-pit could be worse." At the doors of the village huts, and moving about among them as unconcerned as though in pleasant fields of flowers, were the villagers, male and female, going about their daily avocations. The most disgusting scene of all was the villagers killing the infected sheep and cutting off and piling up in a heap portions for eating.

COAL IN CHINDWARA.—Major J. Ashburner, Deputy-Commissioner of Chindwarra, in the Central Provinces, has recently explored the fine coal-field of that district. He has now been able to trace coal southward to the crest of, or to some spot below, the southern slopes of the Sautpooras. The great extent and richness of the Chindwarra coal field has been made clear. The discovery of excellent coal—one seam being 18 feet thick—in the upper valley of the Towa, about fifty miles from the Railway Station of Etarsee on the main line, is most important. Mr. Blandford, of the Geological Survey, will visit the district this season. The Government of India has instructed the Bengal Government to carry on most of the Orissa roads and improvements at False Point Harbour recommended by the Famine Commission. The irrigation works recommended are under consideration by Colonel Strachey and the local irrigation department. Admitting the importance of collecting agricultural statistics and registering meteorological phenomena the Government of India has asked the Secretary of State to send out Professor Tyndall on a visit of a year to India. We trust this arrangement will be carried out.—Friend of India.

THE ORISSA FAMINE.—The Gazette of India of the 12th instant contains a list of the projects recommended to be undertaken by the commissioners appointed to enquire into the circumstances attending the Orissa famine. These are divided into three heads, consisting of 1st, measures relating to Orissa specially; 2nd, projects beyond Orissa; 3rd, irrigation generally; 4th, meteorology and agriculture; 5th, works of relief in times of famine; and 6th, general suggestions. Under the fourth head it is suggested that Professor Tyndall should be consulted as to whether he could be of use to Government in investigating on the spot the meteorology of India during a visit for a year or so. And if there be any prospect of usefulness, the Secretary of State will be requested to arrange the necessary preliminaries. In the project connected with the department of public works, which comprises chiefly the extension of irrigation canals and roads, we do not see that the very necessary and highly expedient measure of embankments finds a place. In a recent issue we pointed out the advantages to be derived from a good system of embankments, and drew attention to Mr. Logan's suggestions and recommendations on this head. The recent inundation in Bengal will be the strongest argument that can be urged in favour of the proposed measure.

DREADFUL CRIME REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN COMMITTED IN LUCKNOW.—A frightful crime was reported to have been committed a few days ago in the Zenana of the Shazada Soliman Kudr, one of the ex-royal family of Oude, in the shape of the murder or homicide of a poor child about four years of age from the most barbarous ill-treatment. It is no longer of any use to attempt to hush up this matter, for we are determined to vindicate the Indian press in Oude by asking for a full explanation why and wherefore this Shazada has not yet been called to account for what took place in the private apartments of his palace. It is in vain for him or any of his family to plead ignorance of a deed which in England would consign him to prison at once until a jury decided his fate. Here, because he is a Prince, we suppose he must go free at present for fear of offending the ex-royal family of Oude!—Shame on the land if such be permitted! We cannot help giving the matter full publicity; and as the Honourable Mr. Strachey will be here in the course of to-day, we beg to call his attention to the necessity of having the whole business officially and thoroughly sifted to the bottom, also that condign punishment, impartially administered, should follow the commission of such a cruel and heartless deed, for it can be called nothing else. As the case is before the Criminal Court for investigation we shall say no more at present. Our readers must also excuse our reporting the details of the evidence, as they are too revolting for repetition, and quite unfit for publication.—Lucknow Times, Oct. 16.

A GROWL FROM AGRA.—The left wing of the 26th P. I., under command of Major Williamson, arrived at Agra from Calcutta by rail on Thursday morning, the 17th, the right wing, under Major Longmore, having arrived on the 15th. This regiment is to be divided, one wing to be stationed at Mehidpore, with head-quarters, the other at Augur. Really, the organisation of the native army, a matter utterly beneath the notice of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, has come to be a perfect farce. This regiment is a specimen. It has three officers with it, two majors and a lieutenant. For a wonder, it does not happen that the lieutenant is in command, and the two majors his subalterns. But the lieutenant of course is the adjutant, and when the regiment is divided, one major and the adjutant will go with the one wing and head-quarters to Mehidpore, and the other major with the other wing to Augur, where at any rate he is not likely to be drawn away from his regimental duties by too frequent calls on his time from society. We don't know what the medical establishment of the corps is, but we suppose it consists of one assistant-surgeon, who, on equitable principles, ought to go with the Augur wing. The doctor might, perhaps, be made to do the work of adjutant and quartermaster to the left wing in addition to his own, especially if on the system now generally recognised of proportioning medical officers' pay to their duties he was to be cut a hundred a month or so in consideration of the extra work. Should the major commanding the Augur wing find it necessary to put himself on the sick list, or to order himself under arrest for insubordination or disobedience of orders, a question will be raised almost as difficult to settle as the identity of the postman's knife, that had had six new blades and five new handles.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 19.

MISGOVERNMENT IN CASHMERE.—Purbhoo Shah was at one time a wealthy merchant, living at Leh, where he traded partly on his own account, partly as agent for the Maharajah of Cashmere and his ministers, with the neighbouring countries of Yarkund, Khoten, and Thibet. Royal traders, we find, are not above seeking good interest for their money, and their ministers take good care not to be behind their masters in the matter of profit, so that it is not surprising to find that Purbhoo Shah paid to the Wuzer Zorawar a neat little interest of 18 per cent. Still, with this clog upon his exertions, trade with Yarkund proved so profitable that Purbhoo Shah acquired a large fortune, large enough to excite the cupidity of his principal, who adopted the orthodox oriental plan of allowing his victim to fatten sufficiently, and then sacrificing him. Ramjee Shah, or, as Lucullus calls him, Ramjee Mull, is beyond all question an agent and instrument of Wuzer Zorawar, who had another very active agent in the Thanadar of Leh, the notorious Labhjie. When the fitting time arrived, which was when Purbhoo Shah's money and property were all profitably employed in the Yarkund market, these men suddenly pounced upon the unfortunate merchant, and demanded an immediate settlement of accounts. It was in vain for him to pray for delay, and to point to the richly-laden caravans then wending their way over the Karakorum Pass. They seized the whole of his property at Leh, and, holding a mock auction, divided the spoil. In the language of an official document which we have seen, "he was simply looted by official authority." The poor man was so affected by all this that he lost his reason, allowing the creditors to help themselves without keeping any account. The man who three years ago was the richest, most successful, and most influential of all the Central Asian merchants, is now a raving madman in his wretched home near Jummo, under the eyes almost of the Maharajah and of Wuzer Zorawar, the chief author of his ruin.—Delhi Gazette.

OFFICERS' QUARTERS.—In a recent issue we noticed a report that the Commander-in-Chief had on foot a scheme for providing officers with quarters. Meantime Government have sanctioned advances to officers on the formation of new cantonments, or when suitable accommodation is not obtainable at existing stations, to build. The limit is fixed at a calculation of three years' tentage of regimental rank, or to colonel 7,200, lieutenant-colonel 5,400, major 4,320, captain 2,700, subaltern 1,800. There are various rules published as to the mode in which the advance is to be made, and what is to be done in the event of an officer quitting the service before the advance has been paid back. Government secures itself by a mortgage on the property. Medical officers are with unprecedented liberality allowed the same privilege as other officers, according to rank.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 22.

THE EX-KING OF OUDE'S DEBTS.—Government have been obliged to legislate specially about the wretched ex-King of Oude's debts. A draft of a Bill has been published, the object of which is to authorise a commission to investigate the debts of the potentate, which the Gazette naively observes, "notwithstanding his Majesty's allowance of one lac a month are rapidly increasing," and said to amount to not less than three quarters of a million sterling! On the report of the commission the Government will probably make arrangements for paying so far as practicable out of the moiety of the King's allowance, the debts which are proved. The Bill provides against the accumulation of further debts by rendering the King (it seems rather a farce using the word "King" "in this connection" as an American would say) unable to enter into any contract involving him in pecuniary liability.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 22.

A PLEA FOR MEDICAL OFFICERS' CLAIMS TO HONORARY DISTINCTIONS.—The only doctors tardily admitted to the Order of the Star of India are Dr. Hare of the Bengal and Dr. Stovell of the Bombay establishment, and they receive only the lowest class of Companions. Yet, not to allude to Bombay and Madras, we believe Dr. Forsyth, the last of the distinguished Inspectors-General of the Bengal Medical Department, is still alive. The department still contains sanitarians of such experience as Dr. Murray and of such ability as Dr. Chevers; surgeons of unequalled skill and service in the field like Dr. Fayrer, in whose arms Sir Henry Lawrence died, and Dr. Brougham; and men of such varied administrative service as Dr. Mouat. It is virtually declared, by each successive investiture, that not one of these is worthy of an Order expressly created to reward merit in the East, and that at a time when the Order is made by the Horse Guards, the refuge for officers like Colonel Wetherell, c.b., and Colonel Turner, c.b., because it would be inconvenient to make them Knight-Companions of the Bath.—Friend of India, Oct. 17.

APPOINTMENTS.—Of the following batch of appointments some have appeared in the last orders and others have not:—Colonel P. W. Luard, Bengal Staff Corps, Commandant 25th N.I., has been appointed Assistant Adjutant-General, Meerut Division, vice Lieutenant Colonel G. Holmes, who left Meerut on the 19th instant to take up his appointment as first Assistant Adjutant-General at head quarters. Lieutenant Colonel Drew, late Officiating Commandant, 40th N.I. and Officiating Assistant Adjutant-General of division, has been appointed permanently to the department, vice Colonel Holmes. Colonel Drew is in the Commander-in-Chief's orders to officiate as Assistant Adjutant-General at Lahore, vice Brevet-Major Hudson, who goes to Abyssinia with the 21st N.I. Captain Fortescue, Brigade-Major, is transferred from Mooltan to Umballa, vice Major Fellowes, appointed to the Abyssinian expedition. Dr. Beaton is appointed medical storekeeper at Umballa, vice Dr. Scott, deceased. Major G. L. Fraser, Staff Corps, late 1st Assistant Adjutant-General at head-quarters, obtains the command of the 25th N.I., vacated by Lieutenant-Colonel Luard. This regiment is under orders to march from Delhi to Peshawur in course of relief.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 22.

SINGRAM SINGH.—A few particulars of the capture and death of Singram Singh, the notorious Jounpore rebel and outlaw, have reached us since our last issue. Our readers will remember that ever since the mutiny he has been at large in the districts of Jounpore and Benares, and succeeded in baffling every attempt of the police to effect his capture, no matter how well or how secretly planned. There is reason to suppose that he had spies in every village, and that his intelligence department was largely recruited from time to time from the ranks of the village watchmen, who reported to him or his emissaries every plan set on foot for his capture. A few days ago, however, he went to hold a conversation with a gorait, and consult with him as to the best means of evading pursuit. The gorait (village watchman) recommended him to take refuge in a neighbouring jungle, which was safe and unfrequented. Singram, confiding in the fidelity of the gorait, did so; but as soon as he was safely lodged there, the gorait gave information to the thanadar of a neighbouring village named Chandwak. A chief constable and a party of police were at once despatched to the place; they surprised the rebel and his small party of followers; but in the struggle which ensued, Singram received a slight wound in the thigh. It so happened that he was without ammunition at the time, for had it been otherwise, being desperate, the consequences might have been somewhat different to the police. He managed to escape, however, to the hut of a chumar, which was close by. The police surrounded the hut, and are stated to have set fire to it; and when Singram and his followers issued therefrom to escape the conflagration, shots were fired, one of which took effect in the rebel's temple, and so put an end to his life. Two or three of his followers were also shot, and the remainder were captured.—Pioneer.

THE HINDU DESSARAH FESTIVAL.

KURNOOL, Oct. 14.—The Hindu Dessarah festival was marked by a rather swell entertainment, given to the whole station on the night of the 5th instant, by the native officers of the 28th N. I. It commenced about 9 P.M., in a house situated near the lines. The room was nicely fitted up, and well lighted. In the centre was a table, spread with what was thought likely to be acceptable to the European visitors, and what with candelabras, glasses, fruits, &c., it presented a very nice appearance. The guests, among whom was a good sprinkling of ladies, were duly decorated with garlands, presented with limes, and besprinkled with perfume, after which the fun commenced with a nautch. Half an hour of this made the room tolerably hot, notwithstanding the immense fans that were kept waving, and the signal to move outside was obeyed with alacrity. Refreshments in the shape of coffee, lemonade, soda-water, and wine were handed round, and then commenced a kind of dramatic performance by torch-light. If one may regard this as representing the courtly fashions of ages gone by, it would seem that the sweeper with his basket, broom, and chatty—broken, by-the-bye—was an important adjunct to royalty, was on familiar terms with the princes and princesses of the blood royal, and only kept in order by an occasional tap on the head from the truncheon of an idiotic looking monster, who, with a patriarchal beard and a stomach of most portentous size, acted, I suppose, the part of a court fool. From the movements of the various performers one would have thought them under the influence of the disorder known by the name of St. Vitus. The get-up was good and well deserving of the applause bestowed upon it. Next the Sepoys favoured the company with specimens of the sword and quarter-staff, and how to use them. The sword was admirably manipulated. Limes were divided, and cucumbers, or something very like them—were sliced on men's bodies with a dexterity truly marvellous. The whole was wound up with what theatrical managers would term a grand pyrotechnical display, not the least noticeable part of which was a triangular shaped box about ten feet long, covered with paper, and suspended from a couple of bamboos, and which, upon being fired, unfolded several rows of pictures with lights between each. With the exception of one or two ill-regulated rockets, which obstinately refused to go off in a becoming manner, there were no failures. The crowd of natives was of course great, and they were only kept back by an occasional squib let off in their midst. The whole terminated just before midnight. Every one appeared well pleased with the entertainment, and the Native officers deserve great praise for the spirited manner in which it was carried out.—Correspondent of Madras Times.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR THOMAS PYCROFT.—We understand that Sir Thomas Pycroft retires on the 29th inst. from the service. The Hon. A. J. Arbuthnot will be sworn in as Senior Member of Council, in the room of Sir Thomas, while the Hon. R. S. Ellis, C.B., becomes permanently Chief Secretary to Government.—Madras Times, Oct. 14.

COLONEL PRIMROSE, Adjutant General of the army, vacates his appointment in April next, after five years' tenure of service as adjutant general. His successor will, it is understood, either be Colonel Fordyce, Military Secretary to his Excellency the Governor, or Colonel Roe, commanding H.M.'s 3rd Battalion 60th Rifles.—Madras Times, Oct. 8.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts for the week ending 5th October, 1867, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 5,960-8 and for luggage, goods, &c., to Rs. 7,410-8, making together Rs. 13,371 or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 92-14. During the corresponding week in 1866, the receipts were Rs. 9,008, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 114.

THE SERVICES OF A FEW OFFICERS of this Presidency being urgently needed by the Bombay Government, it has been arranged to send Major G. R. F. Bardin, Assistant Commissary General; Capt. H. P. Hawkes, Deputy Assistant Commissary General; and Capt. B. F. Heysham, Deputy Assistant Commissary General, by the Bengal and Bombay steamer Mutlah, which will leave Madras to-morrow morning.—Athenæum and Daily News, Oct. 8.

THE PIER AND SHIPPING.—We may be now said to be fairly in for the North-East monsoon. On Wednesday night, a little before eight o'clock, we had our first heavy downpour, which continued with rare intervals throughout the night and all through the forenoon of yesterday. The first downpour was heralded by vivid flashes of lightning and loud crashes of thunder, the first peal being especially terrific. It was at first feared that the lightning had struck some building in the fort or its neighbourhood, but on enquiry we find that no such accident occurred. The roadstead is almost bare, there being but three or four large English vessels and a few native craft riding at anchor anything but easily. The pier appears deserted. So early as Wednesday almost all applications for the export of goods ceased. A few coolies only might have been seen between one and two o'clock on that day trundling along a truck half full of some unimportant bales of merchandise.—Madras Times, Oct. 23.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—The Traffic Receipts of the South-West Line for the week ending 28th Sept., 1867, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 30,124-15-4; for goods, &c., to Rs. 44,868-8-7, making together Rs. 74,993-7-11; or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 152-6-10. During the corresponding week in 1866, the receipts were Rs. 90,881-12-3, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 184-11-6. The receipts of the N. W. Line for the same week amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 6,085-4-4; for goods, &c., to Rs. 10,135-3-10, making together Rs. 16,220-8-2, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 106-0-3. During the corresponding week in 1866, the receipts were Rs. 15,650-0-3, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 102-4-7.

SHOCK OF AN EARTHQUAKE AT CHITTOOR.—The Collector of North Arcot, in a letter to Government dated Sept. 4, reports that on Sunday, Sept. 29, at half-past 10 A.M., a slight earthquake was felt at Chittoor. The sound which announced it resembled the noise which would be produced by the explosion of a large gun or powder magazine, if heard at a distance. It continued for upwards of a minute, and seemed to be passing from the north-west in a south-easterly direction. Whilst passing down the south-west and north-west lines of railway on the following morning, Mr. Robinson ascertained that the occurrence had been noticed at all the principal stations, but from the accounts would say that the shock was less perceptible in that part of the district than it had been at Chittoor.

SEARCH FOR COAL AT NAGPORE.—During his examination of the rocks around Nagpore, Mr. Blandford, of the Geological Survey, reported very unfavourably of the prospect of finding any coal near Nagpore itself. More recent researches have, however, led to the discovery that Mr. Blandford has made a mistake, and Dr. Oldham at once pointed out that the rocks belonged to a more recent series, which accounted for the absence of shale and shaly sandstone. The exact character of the coal has not been satisfactorily ascertained. The investigations of the survey are being proceeded with rapidly southwards from Nagpore and the Godavery, and northwards from Madras, Cuddapah and Kurnool, and in a few years more a geological section will be completed from Tibet to the Gulf of Manaar.

SECUNDERABAD.—On Monday week last H.H. the Nizam's Minister, Nawab Salar Jung Bahadur, K.C.S.I., accompanied by the Resident and the Brigadier General Commanding the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, and their respective staffs, visited the Arsenal, over which they were conducted by the Commissary of Ordnance, Major Thomas, R.A., who explained to his distinguished visitors every object of interest under his charge. The inspection lasted about a couple of hours and on its conclusion the party proceeded to the residence of General Grant, C.B., where they were entertained at an elegant dejeuner. It may perhaps be worth mentioning that a few days previous to the visit to the Arsenal the same distinguished party inspected the Public Library, the General Hospital at Trimulgherry, the Soldiers' Reading Room, the Military Prison, the barracks of the gallant North Royal British Fusiliers, and, though last not least, the Entrenchers Post which is now being constructed at Trimulgherry. The Military Prison well repays inspection, and, owing to the admirable system that obtains therein, enough has been saved from the labour of the prisoners to purchase the splendid clock which is now waiting the completion of its final resting-place—a very handsome tower in the centre of the principal building. The chief warder is Mr. Cole, formerly of the Royals, a most deserving man, and who has lately been promoted to the rank of a Warrant Officer for the efficiency he has displayed in his responsible appointment. Rope and mat-making are extensively carried on and are a source of great profit.—Madras Times, Oct. 23.

PROSPECTS OF A LAW OF DIVORCE FOR INDIA.—The very important subject of a Divorce Court for the Madras Presidency is now engaging the attention of the Government of India, and it is intended that when the Court is established it shall have jurisdiction over marriages contracted out of India, England included. The previous history of the proposed measure is briefly stated. It is said that in 1863 "a Bill was submitted to the Imperial Council, having for its object the establishment of a branch of the High Court in each Presidency, with jurisdiction corresponding to that vested in the English Divorce Court. Doubts, however, arose whether a tribunal thus constituted could act on the powers derived exclusively from Indian Legislation, and the Secretary of State suggested "the postponement of the measure with a view to legislation in the English Parliament." A Commission appointed in the meantime "to inquire into the Law of Marriage and Divorce in India and the Colonies" has at length declared its inability to go into the inquiry at present, and this announcement, in connection with the absence of any immediate prospect of Parliamentary legislation, has induced the Governor-General in Council to meet the difficulty by adopting local measures. The scheme proposed is composed of three alternatives:—1. A Divorce Court, composed of a branch of the High Court, with jurisdiction over the whole Presidency. 2. District or other Local Courts, with jurisdiction conferred to try issues not only connected with the fact of adultery, but issues in which the defence shall be condonation or cruelty. 3. Local Commissioners, specially selected, with all or a part of the jurisdiction of the High Court delegated to them.—Neilgherry Excelsior, Oct. 12.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NATIONAL FINANCIAL BANKING COMPANY.—A call of £10 per share on the shareholders of the National Financial Banking Company has been sanctioned by the Bombay High Court.

THE GRANT BUILDINGS.—The two blocks of buildings, known as the Grant Buildings, Bombay, were recently put up for sale by public auction, and were bought in for Rs. 2,50,000.

MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—A marriage is announced to take place in January between Captain Lowndes Randal, A.D.C. to his Excellency the Governor-general of India, and Miss Lawrence, his Excellency's eldest daughter.

COLONEL SIR H. GREEN has telegraphed from Jacobabad that the account of the raid on the British frontier by the Murrees is without foundation. The tribe has not approached within thirty miles of the frontier, and there was no probability of their doing so.

MR. HOPE AT SURAT.—Mr. Hope, the Collector of Surat, has commenced a raid against the liquor shops of the town. For a population of 90,000 there are no less than 78. He accordingly closed 13, and has of course raised an outcry among those who live by demoralising others. Nothing is more wanted than that magistrates should exercise their powers of closing liquor shops, beyond a certain small number, whatever be the result to the excise revenue. Only by removing temptation will the present rapid spread of drunkenness among a people, abstemious by nature and creed, be arrested.

EXPORT OF COTTON.—We learn that 143,696 lbs. of cotton, valued at Rs. 50,550, were shipped from Kurrachee during the month of September last.

WRECK.—News has been received of the total loss of the Bombay and Bengal Company's steamer Yamuna in the Red Sea. The only details at present received state that the captain, passengers, and nineteen of the crew were saved.

SIX MONTHS' BILLS.—Under instructions from home, the Bombay agents for the Comptoir d'Escompte and the Delhi and London Banks have returned to the six months' usance for bills drawn on England.

DECREASE IN COTTON CULTIVATION.—The Government returns show an expected decrease in the area of land cultivated for cotton in the Bombay presidency (exclusive of native States) in 1867-68 of 86,401 acres, as compared with that of 1866-67.

THE NEW BANK OF BOMBAY.—The Secretary of State for India has expressed himself satisfied with a paid-up capital of £500,000 for starting the new Bank of Bombay. Government is to hold no shares, but will appoint an official auditor as security for transferring its cash balance to the new bank.

AN INQUEST was held yesterday before Dr. Hewlett, coroner, touching the death of Mr. Dillon, who, it is stated, was lately an officer in the Nizam's army. Deceased had been staying for a few days past at the Clarendon Hotel, Mazagon, and appears to have been in embarrassed circumstances. On Sunday evening, after retiring to his room, he took a large dose of narcotic poison, and was afterwards found lying dead. A verdict to the effect that he died from the effects of poison administered by his own hands was returned.—Times of India, Oct. 15.

ZANZIBAR.—Mr. H. A. Churchill, C.B., our Political Agent and Consul at Zanzibar, does not seem to have an easy time of it with our ally, the Sultan. That little potentate is brother of the late Sultan Thoweynee, of Muscat, to whom by Lord Canning's arbitration he is bound to pay an annual subsidy of 40,000 dollars. As the present Sultan killed Thoweynee, his father, the Zanzibar chief declines to pay the subsidy any longer, using these words: "We will not help the man who has killed his father, nor will we enter into any sort of communion with him. By our laws the parricide loses his right of inheritance." As we have acknowledged Syud Selim the money must be paid. Mr. Churchill, we are glad to see, declares that the liberation of all slaves in the hands of Kutchee subjects will be one of the first things to which he will devote his attention after establishing on a proper footing the Consular Court of Zanzibar. The Sultan enjoys by treaty the exclusive privilege of carrying on the slave trade by sea.

CABUL.—The recent defeat of the ex-Ameer Shere Ali's troops by those of his brother and rival Afzul Khan, and the death of his best general, Fyz Mahomed, seemed at one time to alter so materially the position of the contending chieftains, that the struggle might be considered all but over. But Afzul Khan himself was grappling with a more fell opponent than even Fyz Mahomed; the "last enemy" had laid firm hold upon him, and for several weeks he was on the threshold of death. The successes of his son, Abdool Rahman Khan, inspired his closing days with little hope, for he feared further disaffection and treachery among his own party; and now his death has made the end as far off as ever. His brother Azim Khan, who had proved faithful hitherto, was believed, and rightly, to have designs of his own on the tapis. He was believed to regard with but slight favour the likelihood of Abdool Rahman Khan succeeding his father Afzul Khan, to the exclusion of himself, the said Afzul's brother. This Afzul Khan knew well, and recommended his son Abdool Rahman Khan to make terms with his rival Shere Ali, unless he could make perfectly sure of his uncle's co-operation. Ere this piece of wise counsel had well been indited by him, he was dead. Azim Khan took possession of Cabul, Shere Ali continued to retire before the forces of the late Afzul Khan, yet, having, as he had, the aid of an able general like Ibrahim Khan, it is impossible to believe him finally disposed of. That the struggle will continue yet awhile there is no room to doubt, though the past has shown the folly of speculating on what may be the result of it.—Times of India.

COMMISSARIAT OFFICERS FOR ABYSSINIA.—The following is, we believe, a correct list of the officers who will form the Commissariat Department of the force:—Controller of Supply and Transport: Lieutenant-Colonel H. W. Holland, Bombay Staff Corps. Deputy Commissary General: Lieutenant-Colonel A. W. Lucas, Bombay Staff Corps. Director of Land Transport: Major R. P. Warden, Bombay Staff Corps. NEW CANTONMENTS.

No. 985.—With the sanction of the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, H.E. the G. G. in C. is pleased to notify that in future, on the formation of new cantonments, or when suitable accommodation is not obtainable in existing military stations at reasonable rents, advances will be made by Govt. to enable officers to erect or purchase houses for their own accommodation, under the following conditions:—

2. All such advances must be bona fide required for the purpose of building or purchasing suitable houses for the personal residence of the officers concerned; and if more is advanced than shall be actually expended for the purpose, the surplus shall be refunded to Govt.

3. The limits of such advances will not exceed three years' tentage of regimental rank, viz.:—

For a Colonel	Rs. 7,200
„ Lieutenant colonel	5,400
„ Major	4,320
„ Captain	2,700
„ Subaltern	1,800

Medical and other commissioned officers, according to their relative rank.

4. Re-payment of such advances will be made by regimental or circle paymasters deducting monthly instalments equal to the amount of the officer's tentage, the higher rate being deducted on promotion; such instalments to commence from the second issue of pay after the receipt of the advance.

5. In order to secure Government from loss consequent on an officer dying or quitting the service prior to complete re-payment of the advance, the house so built or purchased must be mortgaged to Government, by whom the mortgage will be released when the full amount of the advance has been liquidated.

6. In the event of an officer quitting the service, or of his decease, before the whole advance has been liquidated, the house so built or purchased will become the property of Government, except in the cases following:—The officer may, within one month after his retirement in India, or within six months after his retirement in Europe, or his executors or administrators, in the event of his decease in the service, may, within six months after his death, submit a request that the house may be put up for sale at an upset price sufficient to cover the balance due. Thereupon the house will be put up for sale, the amount required being specified in the advertisement of sale. The officer or his representatives must undertake to bear all the expenses of sale, advertisement, &c. Any proceeds realised over the amount remaining due will be paid to the officer or his representatives.

7. Any officer quitting, or removed from, the station where he has built or purchased a house before the whole amount of the advance has been liquidated, will continue liable to the deduction of his monthly instalment until the advance has been repaid; but, with the special sanction of Govt., he may be allowed to dispose of the house, provided he is thereby enabled to clear off the whole amount due at once, or to transfer it to any officer of his own or higher rank. The future deductions will be made from the tentage of such officer.

8. No officer will, under any circumstances, be allowed a second advance whilst any amount remains due on a previous one.

9. All applications for such advances must be made through the officer commanding the station, who will record his opinion as to the necessity for the assistance solicited. The officer must certify that the sum is to be expended in building or purchasing only, and that, should there be any surplus funds after the house is completed or purchased, they will be at once refunded to Govt.; and the application must be countersigned by the commanding officer of the regiment, or the head of the department to which the applicant may belong.

10. Two officers of the grade of captain or subaltern may each obtain the advance of their rank for the purpose of building or purchasing a house for their bona fide joint occupation, on condition of their being jointly and severally responsible to Government for the whole amount of their joint advances.

11. The last pay certificate granted to officers under advances must specify the original amount of such advance, the amount repaid, and the balance remaining due.

12. A form of mortgage bond, with necessary instructions for executing it, will be issued to officers who may wish to avail themselves of the advance.

RAILWAY EXTENSION.—Mr. Bulkeley, C.E., projects the construction of a branch line of railway from Nerriad via Muhoonda to Kupperwunj in Guzerat. The proposed line will traverse an important cotton district, and will be 26 miles long with three stations and telegraphic communications. Estimated by the traffic return of three years ago—which, however, cannot be accepted as a just estimate,—a profit might be calculated on of upwards of six per cent. on the outlay of capital, which will be Rs. 1,454,656 or £5,000 per mile. Mr. Bulkeley assures Government that the traders of the town of Kupperwunj, who are chiefly of the industrious class known as the Borahs, have expressed their desire to contribute a portion of the required capital. Guzerat is ill adapted for canals, and there is therefore the greater need for opening up the country with branch railways. In the height of Bombay's prosperity, in 1864, Mr. John Fleming wished to make branch railways, but the trunk line was so badly made and managed that he would not risk the undertaking.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Nov. 19.

Parliament was opened on the 19th November to consider questions connected with the Abyssinian expedition. After the reading of the Queen's speech, the two Houses proceeded to business.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

Earl BROWNLOW moved the address in reply to the Queen's speech. He said he regretted the necessity for the Abyssinian expedition, but he thought their lordships would confirm the decision the Government had arrived at.

Lord HYLTON seconded. He believed that the Abyssinian expedition had been fitted out with the greatest care and forethought, and he looked forward to its success with the utmost confidence.

Earl RUSSELL said the conduct of the Emperor of Abyssinia had been so outrageous, and he had shown such an utter violation of all international usages, that the Government could have pursued no other course than to send the expedition.

The Earl of HARDWICKE approved of the Abyssinian expedition.

The Earl of CARNARVON pointed out the dangers of the Abyssinian expedition, and remarked that, instead of the expedition, an Indian officer should have been sent with a mission, and greater dignity than that of Mr. Rassam, and he should have been escorted by a retinue of Indian cavalry sufficient to protect him. It would be gross injustice to charge the cost of it on the Indian revenue, and impolitic to throw it upon posterity.

The Earl of DERBY ridiculed the suggestions of the Earl of Carnarvon, and regretted that the noble earl had not volunteered for the duty with a handful of yeomanry, and tried his eloquence on the Emperor. There was not the slightest idea of charging any of the extra expense on the Indian revenue, and the sole object of the Government was to release the prisoners.

The motion was then agreed to, and the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Nov. 19.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

The address in answer to the Speech from the Throne was moved by Mr. HART DYKE, who observed with regard to the Abyssinian expedition that it was undertaken, not in order to obtain an accession of territory, but vindicate the national honour.

Colonel HOGG, in seconding, said he hoped that the Abyssinian expedition would not become an Abyssinian war, but he expressed the utmost confidence in Sir Robert Napier, the commander of the expedition.

Mr. GLADSTONE remarked that there was nothing in the speech that would induce him to depart from the rule of excluding, as far as possible, controverted matter in the discussion on the address. They could not enter that night on the Abyssinian question, but he must observe that the House was not at this moment committed, directly or indirectly, to any proceedings connected with the expedition. He hoped that the expense would not be obtained by adding to the debt of the country.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER characterised the speech of Mr. Gladstone as most fair. He admitted that the House was not pledged on the Abyssinian question, but said it was premature to discuss that question now.

The address was agreed to, and the House adjourned.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

We select from the Blue-book on Abyssinia just issued the following despatch of Sir Stafford Northcote. It will be found to best explain the means employed to supply the expedition against all possible contingencies:—

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA TO THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY IN COUNCIL.
Military, No. 145.

India-office, Oct. 31.

1. In continuation of my despatch dated the 15th of October, 1867, No. 131, I proceed to inform you of the measures which have been adopted in this country since that date in connection with the expedition to Abyssinia.

2. In the first place I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 14th of September, No. 70, forwarding further correspondence between your Government and those of India and Madras relative to the preparations for the expedition, and also of your letter dated the 28th of September, No. 75, in which you reply to my despatch of the 3rd of that month, No. 107.

3. It is unnecessary to remark at length on the various points to which you refer, but I desire in general terms to communicate to you the approval of her Majesty's Government of the measures adopted by you and the several departments under your Government for the furtherance of the object in view.

4. An extract of your letter relating to the co-operation of Commodore Heath, and the arrangements made respecting the superintendence of the transport service under Captain Tryon, has been communicated to the Admiralty.

5. You will have learned from my previous despatches that the wish of Sir Robert Napier to be furnished with a second mountain battery has been complied with, and that one battery was forwarded to Egypt by the Serpis on the 16th of October. The remainder of the guns and equipment will be placed on board the Mendoza, which will leave England on the 4th of November for Alexandria.

6. Copies of a report by Colonel Wray on the mountain batteries were forwarded to you in the packet by a previous mail, and copies of a further paper respecting the equipment are now enclosed for your information. Other copies have been transmitted to Sir Robert Napier at Aden.

7. The Lords of the Admiralty have been informed of the desire of Sir Robert Napier that a rocket brigade should be formed from the seamen of the squadron under the command of Commodore Heath, and on the receipt of your telegram dated the 18th inst. instructions were given for the provision of the tubes and ammunition therein requested. On application to the War-office, however, it was found that there were no 12-pounder rockets in store, and that it was impossible to manufacture the requisite quantity before the time at which they would be needed. It has therefore been determined to send for the use of the force 1,800 of the 6-pounder rockets (weighing 9lb. each) similar to those already sent out, and 12 machines with special friction tubes, but only 826 of the rockets will be ready for despatch on board the Mendoza.

8. This steam vessel has been engaged for the conveyance of the telegraph stores, mountain battery and equipment, pack-saddles, &c., to Egypt, and for the passage of the medical officers and the detachments of Royal Engineers who are proceeding from this country to Abyssinia, for the duties connected with the telegraph, signalling, photography, and working of the tube wells. This arrangement is found to be considerably less expensive than it would have been to engage passages on board the mail steamers for the officers and men, and to have paid freight for the tonnage of stores which were ready for shipment, while the additional advantage has been gained of sending the telegraph stores in the immediate charge of the party appointed for the working of the line.

9. My telegram of the 30th of September will have prepared you for the receipt of the greater part of these stores by a vessel leaving England on the 25th of October, and in the 7th paragraph of my despatch No. 181 you were informed that circumstances had delayed the despatch of the stores for a few days. It is now determined that the Mendoza shall start on the 4th of November, and she may be expected to arrive at Alexandria in about sixteen days from the date of sailing.

10. As you have been informed by my telegram of the 24th inst., thirteen medical officers of the British army will proceed to Egypt on board this vessel, the other three, to complete the number asked for in your telegram of the 24th of September, being directed to join the force from Gibraltar, Malta, and Aden respectively, where they are at present stationed.

11. The medical officers of the Bombay army who were in England on leave of absence were directed, on the receipt of your message, to hold themselves in readiness to proceed to Suez for duty with the expedition should Sir Robert Napier require their services. Only four, however—namely, Surgeons Niven and Plampre, and Assistant-Surgeons Lalor and Barrie—have been found available for such service. Letters from the several officers named in the margin (Surgeon-Majors J. R. Miller, W. Campbell, J. C. Trestrail, H. Giraud, F. W. Harris, C. J. Sylvester, J. Daubeny, J. Bean, Surgeons G. F. Brown, W. G. Hunter, W. E. Wood, A. Fox, C. Thomson, J. Glen, J. M. Barnett, C. G. H. Ross, E. R. Butler, W. D. T. Ticehurst; Assistant-Surgeons G. C. Bell, C. K. Colston, R. Byramjee), on reports of the Medical Board on the state of their health, are enclosed. Surgeon Butler, having been reported to be unfit for field service, has been permitted to return to his duty in Bombay, and Surgeon Ticehurst has also been permitted to return at the expiration of his leave, under the special circumstances mentioned in his letter.

12. All the officers proceeding in the Mendoza, whether belonging to the Royal Engineers or Medical Staff (a nominal list of whom is enclosed), have been directed to await instructions at Suez from the Commander-in-Chief of the expeditionary force. They will be brought upon the strength of the Abyssinian force from the date of their arrival at Suez, and will be available for any duty on which his Excellency may desire to employ them.

13. A copy of a letter from the War-office, dated the 14th of October, with its enclosures, detailing the names of the medical officers of the British Army selected for this service, and containing certain suggestions respecting the employment of Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals S. Currie, C.M., is forwarded for your information, together with an extract of the reply thereto, dated on the 17th of October.

14. With reference to the papers which accompanied the 21st paragraph of my despatch of the 15th inst., respecting the establishments placed on board the hospital ships, I have to apprise you that, as it appeared from your demand for medical officers from this country that no reserve would be sent from India, I have concurred in a suggestion of the Secretary of State for War that three extra assistant-surgeons should be sent out for duty with the hospital ships. These officers will proceed to Egypt by the Mendoza.

15. The thirty sets of apparatus for treatment of fractures and reduction of dislocations which were indented for in your despatch of the 26th of March last had been shipped on board a steamer at Liverpool for despatch to Bombay via Egypt before the receipt of your telegram of the 11th inst. They have, however, been re-landed, and will be forwarded with the other stores which are being sent for the Abyssinian expedition.

16. A copy of a letter dated the 28th inst., from the War-office, with the accompanying memoranda of instructions to the sanitary officer who may be appointed by your Government to attend to the general measures requisite for the health of the force, is herewith transmitted, and another copy will be forwarded direct to Sir Robert Napier, at Aden, by the present mail.

17. I also enclose a letter which has been received from Staff Assistant-Surgeon A. Neill, giving many useful suggestions, derived from experience acquired during his residence in Abyssinia, respecting measures which should be adopted for the preservation of the health of the troops. Copies will be forwarded to Sir Robert Napier, for distribution to the commanding officers and medical officers of the force.

18. Your telegram of the 5th of October, asking for the services of one staff veterinary surgeon and three veterinary surgeons from this country, having been transmitted to the War-office, I have been informed that, after consulting with the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, Sir John Pakington has determined on meeting the demand from among the veterinary surgeons who are now employed in the East in the purchase of mules; and Col. Clark Kennedy will be instructed to select that number of officers for service in Abyssinia so soon as he shall be enabled to do so by the delivery of mules at Alexandria by the transports.

19. The number of men of the Royal Engineers who are about to be sent for duty in Abyssinia being in the aggregate greater than it appeared desirable to the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief to place under the charge of a subaltern, his Royal Highness has caused the several detachments to be reorganised and formed into the 10th company of Royal Engineers, under the command of Brevet-Major Pritchard, Royal Engineers. The duties devolving upon this officer will not, however, interfere with the special employment for which Lieutenants St. John and Le Mesurier have been selected. A copy of the correspondence on this subject which has passed between this office and the War-office and Horse Guards is forwarded for your information.

20. In the 24th paragraph of my despatch, No. 181, I stated that I had sanctioned the provision of 50 of Norton's tube wells for use in Abyssinia. The number has since been increased to 100, in accordance with the recommendation of the director of the Engineer establishment at Chatham.

21. In the 15th paragraph of the above-mentioned despatch, which was written the day before the receipt of your telegram of the 15th inst., you were informed that Colonel Clark Kennedy had been instructed to extend his purchases of mules to the number of 8,000, provided that they could be ready within the specified time. In connection with this subject I telegraphed to you on the 22nd to inquire whether you could manage with the 5,000 pack-saddles already under provision. To this I have, as yet, received no reply.

22. At the suggestion of his Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, I have sanctioned, as an experiment, the construction of five pack-saddles on the principle invented by Lieutenant M'Mahon, Royal Engineers, which will be sent for trial with the force, and I shall be glad to receive a report on their efficiency for field service in comparison with the Otago pattern.

23. Your Secretary's letter, No. 31, enclosed a copy of a telegram asking for the supply of 500 McGwire hammocks, respecting which you were informed in the 12th paragraph of my despatch No. 124, that they were packed and would be forwarded as soon as possible. Your subsequent telegram of the 18th of October has also been received asking for an additional supply of 1,500 hammocks of the same pattern. The 500 first ordered and 850 of the remainder will be sent to Suez by the Mendoza, and the rest, which will be ready on the 18th of November, will be forwarded by an early opportunity after that date. In order to avoid delay a slight deviation from the original pattern has been permitted in the second supply; it is, however, believed that in all essentials they are not inferior to those previously ordered.

24. The telegram, of which a copy was forwarded with your secretary's letter, No. 32, respecting the weight of packages, was noticed in the 18th paragraph of my above-mentioned despatch, No. 124 of 1867.

25. The stores required for the Armstrong guns asked for by a telegram of Sept. 23, of which a copy was received with your secretary's letter of that date, No. 83, were despatched to Aden by the vessel of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company which left Southampton on Oct. 4. Subsequently, your telegram of Oct. 11 correcting your previous demand, was received. The fuzes therein asked for, which had not been previously supplied, were forwarded to Aden by the mail steamer of the 27th inst.

26. A detailed list (No. 5) of the stores ordered up to the present time for the purposes of the expedition forms an enclosure to this despatch.

27. In continuation of the papers which were forwarded with the 13th paragraph of my despatch, No. 431, respecting the aid granted by the Ottoman Government for the purposes of the expedition, I transmit a copy of a letter from the Foreign-office, dated the 19th inst., with its enclosures, respecting the facilities afforded for the passage of the British troops through the Egyptian territory.

28. You were informed, in the last paragraph of my despatch, No. 124, that a request had been made by the Ambassador of the King of Italy that permission might be granted to two officers of the Italian army to accompany the expedition to Abyssinia. Similar applications have been made by the representatives of the Swedish and Netherlands Governments; and I enclose a copy of the reply which the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, with my concurrence, has caused to be addressed to the several Ministers. A similar answer will be given to applications of a like nature in future.

29. A copy of a letter addressed to me, on behalf of the Committee of the Church of Scotland for watching over the interests of her Majesty's Presbyterian soldiers and sailors, is forwarded for your information, together with a copy of the reply which I caused to be sent.

30. The enclosed work on the Falaasha and Kamaants in Abyssinia, with a vocabulary of the Falaasha language, composed by the Rev. Martin Flad, and edited by the Rev. Dr. Krapf, having been brought to my notice, I have obtained 200 copies, which will be forwarded to Sir R. Napier.

81. I forward a copy of a letter from Colonel Claremont giving an interesting account of a conversation which he has held with M. Galinier, one of the authors of a French work on Abyssinia.

82. With reference to your telegrams of the 5th and 15th of October and to my reply of the 18th (of which a copy is enclosed), I am desirous that, as stated in my telegraphic message of the 10th, you should use your own discretion in the matter of the construction of a railway from the coast to the highlands. Should you decide on adopting it I shall be prepared to co-operate with you by the speedy supply of such stores and materials as you may require from this country.

83. In addition to the various papers which have been already transmitted to you on this subject, I forward a letter from Mr. Haddon, C.E., with its enclosures, respecting a pontoon railway which he proposes to lay down. As he states that a copy of the papers was sent to you by the last mail, the drawing, of which only one copy was received, will be forwarded direct to Sir Robert Napier.

84. An extract of a letter from Mr. Manby, which has been forwarded from the War-office, respecting an engineer named Jeffrey Bey, is also enclosed for your information.

85. In continuation of the papers which accompanied the 17th paragraph of my despatch of the 15th of October, I forward a copy of the letters noted in the margin (Oct. 7, 1867, issue to detachment of Royal Artillery; ditto, Military Train; 16th, ditto, Royal Engineers; 18th, ditto, ditto), respecting the issue of articles of clothing, &c., to the detachments proceeding to Abyssinia.

86. The services of Lieutenant-colonel Milward, R.A., the Assistant-director of Ordnance, have been placed at the disposal of Sir Robert Napier by the Secretary of State for War, with the concurrence of the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, for employment with the Abyssinian Expedition, in compliance with the special request made in his Excellency's telegram of the 19th inst.—I have, &c.,

STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—At the meeting of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, on Tuesday, the directors presented a report showing a profit for the half-year of £82,502. An interim dividend of 3 per cent. for the six months ending June last has been paid, and the balance, £600,000, is carried forward.

DESPATCH OF THE CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Nov. 20.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Pera, Capt. Jamieson, sailed hence this afternoon with mails for Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, Egypt, Aden, Ceylon, Calcutta, China, Australia, and New Zealand. She took out 140 passengers, and a general cargo, including £40,300 in sovereigns; £30,807. 5s. 10d. in dollars; and £4,570 in gold thread, plate, jewellery, &c.

THE STRANDING OF THE "SURAT" MAIL STEAMER.—Yesterday an official inquiry, instituted by direction of the Board of Trade, was opened at the Greenwich police-court respecting the circumstances attending the stranding of the Surat—a mail steamer belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Packet Company, on a reef of rocks in the Gulf of Suez. After a few witnesses had been examined the inquiry was adjourned till to-day, in order that the statements of the master and the second officer might be received.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The directors of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company have issued their report in anticipation of the general meeting. It gives details of the progress made in the various works, and states that the final decision of the Madras Government with reference to a guarantee of interest on the capital required for the Bellary sections has not yet been given. The total amount of guaranteed capital received up to the 1st inst. was £999,653, the balance of £347 being due from holders of shares in India, and there had been received, on account of the loan from the Secretary of State, the sum of £53,000.

LONDON, BOMBAY, AND MEDITERRANEAN BANK.—A meeting of the creditors of the London, Bombay, and Mediterranean Bank, which was ordered to be wound up in July, 1866, was held on Tuesday, at the Guildhall Hotel, Sir T. G. A. Parkyns, Bart., one of the liquidators, in the chair, when the report of the committee appointed at the meeting held on 23rd May last was read, and a resolution passed authorising them to continue to act on behalf of the creditors, and assent to such propositions as they may consider desirable to be carried out in order to put a stop to the litigation now going on. Mr. C. E. Lewis, the solicitor, explained the present position of the liquidations. Mr. James Cooper, the other official liquidator, was also in attendance, and referred to the valuable assistance the committee had rendered.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY COMPANY.—The general traffic returns for the last half-year show an increase of £15,039 over the receipts of the corresponding half-year of 1866, of which £1,630 is derived from the passenger traffic, and £13,409 from the goods traffic. The net receipts for the last half-year amount to £44,703. 12s. 7d. Progress had been made with the Goalundo Extension. These works are being pushed on by Mr. Leslie, the engineer officer in charge. Mr. Leith and Major-General Beadle retire by rotation; the former offers himself for re-election, but the latter being about to proceed to India is unable to do so. Colonel Sim, of the Bengal Royal Engineers, is proposed for election as a director of the company. Mr. Cheshire, one of the auditors, retires by rotation, but offers himself for re-election.

THE MAILS TO INDIA.—The Malta Times of the 7th inst. says:—"It is currently reported that, according to the new contract of the postal authorities with the Peninsular and Oriental Company, which now awaits the approval of Parliament, the packets containing the Marseilles portion of the overland will in future proceed direct between Marseilles and Alexandria through the Straits of Messina, without calling at any intermediate port. By adopting that route, which is only forty-nine miles shorter than that by this island, and avoiding the delay of coaling at Malta, it is alleged a certain number of hours will be saved. But, after all, this is a mail for the benefit of the British colonies, for which a heavy subsidy is being paid, and we can hardly suppose that a hypothetical saving of five or even double that number of hours, in the several weeks required for the transmission of mails to and from India, is a justifiable reason to put aside such an important British possession and naval and military station as Malta, especially when the most pressing political, commercial, and social wants concerning India can be made known by the rapid means of communication afforded by the telegraph. We are glad to hear that the matter has been taken up by the Chamber of Commerce; but it must not be lost sight of that this is a question not only affecting local interests but imperial interests also, and should be maturely considered before it is definitely settled."

DR. LIVINGSTON.—Sir Roderick Murchison writes under date Nov. 18:—"I have this day received a letter from Dr. Kirk at Zanzibar, dated the 28th of September, stating that he has seen a native trader who had just returned from the western side of Lake Tanganyika, and who gave him a detailed account of having seen a white man travelling in that very remote region. The letter is long and will not bear abridgment, and as I wish to have the subject thoroughly discussed by those most competent to judge of the value of the information now given by Dr. Kirk, I have merely to announce that the letter will be read on Monday next at the meeting of the Royal Geographical Society."

THE INDIAN ARMY AND CIVIL SERVICE LIST.

(THE PUBLICATION HAS BEEN UNAVOIDABLY DELAYED)

Consequent on the measures adopted by Lord Cranborne to remedy the grievances of the Indian Army—one of which was granting the right of admission to the Staff Corps of all the old officers, unconditionally—a considerable change has been made in the appearance of this volume. Although the old Cadres still exist, nearly all the names are in italics, showing the great number of officers who have availed themselves of the privilege; whilst the Lists of the Staff Corps themselves will show what a great stimulus has been given to promotion, numbers of officers having obtained two steps of substantive (and paying) rank in one day.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

By the Calcutta mail, which arrived last night, we have no later advices from Calcutta, the Upper Provinces, or Bombay, and only three days later from Madras. The amount of fresh matter therefore for our Summary is decidedly limited.

The Madras Athenæum bemoans the departed glories of the old company's service. Not one Madras regiment, it declares, and hardly one officer, has volunteered for African service. Why is this? Because the staff corps and the new system of officering the army have demoralised the old service. Officers no longer have special interest in regiments from which they may be continually shifted to others at short notice, and so forth. It is a sad state of things, but possibly the shadows are laid on too thickly.

The Madras Times complains that no one has been asked whether he would like to serve on the new Municipal Commission, although two or three officials have been deputed to draw up lists of persons qualified for that office.

Dr. Bidie, Professor of Botany of the Madras Medical College, has been ordered to report on the havoc done by the Borer worm in the coffee plantations. Dr. Bidie has already visited Coorg and Mysore, and the present appointment is doubtless owing to the able report of that visit, with which he furnished the Government. Not one estate in Coorg is free from the ravages of this tiny insect; and the crops this year have from various causes been more than ever exposed to its attacks. Plants on dry, barren ridges seem to have suffered the worst. Dr. Bidie recommends higher cultivation, more care and greater judgment in short.

A farewell dinner to Sir Thomas Pycroft, the preparations for supplying the future wants of Madras by the building of another ice-house, and the establishment of a Home for European loafers—now but too numerous in all large Indian stations—are among the salient items of Madras news. We also note that Government has directed all officials connected with the coolie emigration to withhold licences from persons seeking to enlist labourers for the tea districts of Bengal. An explanation of this procedure is needed, but not given.

The new hill station in British Burmah proposed as a sanitarium is about three thousand feet above the sea. Mountjoy, as it is called, lies about forty miles to the south-east of Toungchoo Pass. The telegraph already runs near it, and it would form a convenient half-way stage between Pegu and Arracan.

The Rangoon Times reports an instance of timely promptitude on the part of Major Davies, Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, which led to the saving of a hundred lives of persons shipwrecked among the Andaman Islands. The particulars will be found elsewhere.

Hong Kong advices of October 15 mention another disastrous typhoon in those stormy latitudes. The Spanish mail steamer Malpesina was missing. Terrible floods at Manila had ended in the alleged loss of many lives. At Shanghai business was active, and silk abundant. The treaty between Japan and Belgium was ratified on the 12th of September.

The Government having agreed to provide the necessary outfit and accommodation for a zoologist to accompany the Abyssinian expedition, the Council of the Zoological Society, to whom the nomination was entrusted, have selected for the post Lieut. R. C. Beavan, of the Bengal Staff Corps, a corresponding member of the society, who has distinguished himself by his collections of natural history in various parts of India and Burmah, and have placed the sum of £200 at Lieut. Beavan's disposal, for the purpose of acquiring living specimens of some of the larger mammals of Abyssinia for the society's menagerie. Lieut. Beavan will leave England in a few days.

A telegram of yesterday's date from Cairo reports that more than a hundred villages in the neighbourhood of Massowah have offered their services to Sir R. Napier's force. The Gallas are said to have joined Gobazye, who is said to have captured Magdala.

The next arrival from India will be the Bombay Mail, which may be expected in London on Thursday, the 5th December.

From Annesley Bay a letter of the 1st November gives an encouraging account of the harbour, and a discouraging one of the discoveries made by Colonel Phayre's pioneer force. The former, sheltered on the west by the Geedan Hills, which throw out long spurs towards the water, is also largely protected by lower hills on the south and east. There is great depth of water, studded with an archipelago of rock-bound islets. The health of the troops already landed—10th N.I., 3rd Native Cavalry, and six companies of Sappers—was remarkably good, the heat bearable, and camp followers very numerous and wonderfully miscellaneous. Camels, mules, oxen, might be counted by hundreds. A line of rail and a stone pier were building fast. Heaps of stores were lying everywhere about, some of them damaged under the rough handling of careless natives. The water-tanks had been landed ready for use. Sheds were in course of building, to shelter some of the stores from the coming rains. Want of water and bad water were the chief drawbacks. For many miles round nothing could be got but a brackish, "dusty white" apology for the pure liquid, and that was selling at two annas a pint. Without the distilled water there would have been great distress.

The inland explorations have hitherto revealed only rough mountain passes, blocked up in places with huge boulders. The most practicable roads are also the most roundabout. Of the disposition of the natives the accounts are far more satisfactory. They move about armed, but are perfectly peaceable.

Last night a vote was taken in the Commons regarding the preliminary expenses of the Abyssinian campaign. Of the spirited debate on the whole subject a summary will be found elsewhere. The general result was that the steps taken by the Government, if legally open to objection, were practically right on the whole.

TRAGEDY AT KHELAT.—The Sindian gives an account of the tragic murder by the Khan of Khehat of his father-in-law, Taj Mahomed Khan, one of the most powerful of the Brahoe chiefs. Although an ally of the Khan, the chief was independent of him, and was in possession of large estates acquired by the sword. Alarmed at his increasing power the Khan invited the chief alone to a banquet, and there treacherously butchered him. The Brahoes are indignant at the murder of their chief, and wait only an opportunity to avenge his death. The Khan's army is mutinous, and he is afraid since the murder to stir beyond his palace. The entire country, with the hostile Murrees and Booghrees on the one side and the enraged Brahoes on the other, is unsettled. The Khan, who is almost imbecile, and but for Sir H. Green would have long ago ceased to rule, first gained power by a similar act of treachery. He was lately expelled by his nobles for a time, but adversity seems to have taught him nothing.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, November 27, 1867.

A BRACE OF ADMINISTRATIVE REFORMS.

Two noticeable State Papers have recently been issued by the head of the Indian Government in India. One of them fore-shadows a long-needed reform in the Indian police, while the other opens the way to issues yet more important for natives seeking advancement in public offices.

To begin with the police: the Governor-General in Council points out the salient drawbacks of the system introduced after the mutinies, and the likeliest way of overcoming them. Organised almost wholly by military officers, the police of India has naturally become more of a military than a civil force. Military drill was the first thing considered; after which, at a long interval, came the duties and the talents specially needed for the guardians of public order. The consequences have been such as anyone might have foreseen; an excellent body of trained irregulars, but a poor set of men for tracking and catching criminals. Sir John Lawrence would find the remedy in the direction of Oude, whose Chief Commissioner has lately reorganised his own police in accordance with the example originally set by the Punjab—in the reign, we imagine, of Chief Commissioner John Lawrence himself.

The remodelled force should consist, he says, of two sections, the largest for purely civil, the other for semi-military purposes. He would let the local authorities decide, according to circumstances, the exact proportion between the two; a frontier police, for instance, needing more of military training and equipment to fit it for dealing with wild tribes or bands of highway-men. But the whole force should be in effect "one body under one responsible head, and at the entire disposal of the civil authorities."

With the loss of its present military character, the force would naturally cease to be officered mainly by military men. The proportion of military to uncovenanted officers will henceforth vary according to special needs, and the relative strength of the two elements in each district. At present the army furnishes about four of its own officers to every three from the civil service. This has doubtless given a higher social tone to the police department. But late changes have rendered the service less attractive to army officers than of yore, and besides, "the exigencies of the military service render it no longer possible that it should continue to furnish anywhere even the majority of the officers of the police." How comes this? Cannot some light be thrown on this passage, by the fact of additional officers having been sent out to Abyssinia, to do duty with regiments for which their regular or irregular complement of six officers a-piece has been found too small in the hour of trial?

Besides urging the need of making much in the future of the Uncovenanted Service, Native and European, the Governor-General points out above all things the expediency of strengthening the native element in the higher ranks of the police. In thus advising, he acts up to the full spirit of the second document to which reference has been made; in which, enlarging on the text supplied by Sir Stafford Northcote, he seeks to open out new and nobler official careers to the native millions under his rule.

Showing how much has lately been done to improve the standing of the Uncovenanted Service, Sir J. Lawrence finds that few natives have gained anything by such reforms. No native has yet risen above the grade of Extra Assistant Commissioner. In the Regulation Provinces there is less room for native advancement, save by duly qualifying for admission to the Covenanted Service, which enjoys the legal monopoly of all the higher appointments. It is rather to the Non-Regulation Provinces that Sir J. Lawrence would look for the means of satisfying native ambition, and the demands, let us add, of ordinary justice. In Oudh, the Punjab, British Burmah, and some other provinces, the posts of Assistant-Commissioner and Small Cause Court Judge will henceforth be open, if Sir John means what he says, to a certain admixture of native claimants. In Mysore and Berar, the proportion of native to European officials will be larger, in the former greatly larger, than elsewhere.

It only remains for the Indian Government to see its orders fairly carried out. Prejudice and fear of prejudice will combine as before to render them a dead letter. English pride invariably rebels against black officials. But English pride is not always reasonable; and Sir John pays it sufficient homage by directing the appointment of English officials wherever European settlers or travellers abound.

WHAT CAME OF THE LAST FAIR AT HURDWAR.

NEVER did the proverb, "Man proposes, but God disposes," receive a more telling illustration than it did this year, during and after the great Hurdwar fair of April. On that occasion a crowd of pilgrims, equal in number to the present population of London, was gathered together for several days—more than half of it for about a fortnight—on a space of nearly twenty-five square miles of bare sandy plain beside the Upper Ganges, at the foot of the hills that guard its holy source. To all seeming, every wise precaution had been and was daily taken against the perilous consequences of so vast a gathering. The tents and grass-huts of the pilgrims were arranged in regular streets; ample food was supplied by a fair intermixture of shops and stores; a strict system of health conservancy provided for the daily burial of all noisome and noxious matter. That huge encampment was as free from bad smells as the best-drained part of the best-drained English town. With the adjacent Ganges to cleanse their bodies, and dry-earth latrines to purify their excretions, it seemed as if the pilgrims were sufficiently assured from the worst types of epidemic disease.

But the controlling powers set too much store on the absence of stenches, and gave too little heed to the effects of sudden and excessive moisture on buried filth. "Up to the 11th of April," says Inspector-general Murray, on the strength of uniform evidence from every quarter, "the health of the great crowd was remarkably good." There had been no cases of unusual sickness; not one of cholera. Slight squalls of rain and wind had kept the temperature pleasantly cool in comparison with the heat of March. But on the night of the 11th a severe thunderstorm set in, with heavy rain which lasted to the following noon, causing a fall in the temperature of fourteen degrees in one day. About noon on the 12th the great bathing-rite of the year took place, marking at once the culmination and the close of that vast pilgrimage. After that came a sudden dispersion of the crowd. By the morning of the 15th the ground so lately covered with human dwellings was once more a bare silent plain.

But the evil against which so many precautions had been taken was already at work. After the bathing cholera broke out in the camp. Eight men were brought into hospital the next morning. From that time the dread disease followed the different roads taken by the pilgrims on their homeward journey. At each of the first halting places on the four main lines of road leading from Hurdwar cases of cholera were recorded on the 13th. Each stage was crowded with a continuous stream of returning pilgrims for nearly a week; a fact for which Dr. Murray himself could vouch in the case of Meerut, where he stayed to watch the course of the disease. "This pilgrim stream carried with it cholera, which lined the road with victims, whose funeral pyres studded the surrounding fields, or whose bodies were thrown into the canal or collected by the police and buried. The disease was communicated to the neighbouring towns and villages, and the pilgrims carried it with them to their homes, over the whole of Hindostan." Improved modes of travelling helped to introduce the epidemic into places formerly free from its attack. At Mooltan, for instance, where cholera had been unknown for nearly a quarter of a century, pilgrims returning by rail from Lahore began spreading the disease from the last days of April. By whatever means the taint was imparted from one to another, the course of the pestilence was as clearly traceable as the march of the pilgrims themselves. In spite of efforts well-contrived, if too often fruitless, on the part of Government officers to arrest or abate the evil, its vitality showed itself to the end of the rains. Of the number of actual victims there is no trustworthy reckoning. Dr. Murray had received reports of more than 42,557 deaths, "a number doubtless far short of the truth."

Here is an interesting case for the great European Sanitary Commission to consider. One thing at least seems clearly established—that the cholera which this year ravaged India was born, or at any rate fostered, among the pilgrims at the Hurdwar fair. At Hurdwar the disease first showed itself; from Hurdwar it was borne by the homeward-bound pilgrims to one place after another along their several lines of travel, and from these places fresh sufferers passed on the taint elsewhere. It was not the usual time of year for cholera. There were no proofs of its existence before the 12th April in any part of Upper India, save "a belt of land skirting the Terai at the foot of the Himalayas," where the plague, starting in February from the neighbourhood of Nainie-Tal, travelled westward, till in April it had reached a place sixty miles east of Hurdwar. But the pilgrims from the Terai, if any, were encamped on the 12th on one side of the Ganges, while the cholera broke out on the other; and its sudden prevalence on the 13th in all directions seems to preclude the notion of its arising from one solitary source, whether at Bazpore or the far more distant Benares.

Hardly, if at all less certain, is the direct connection between the outbreak and the storm that preceded it. The unseasonable weather was the virtual author of the unseasonable plague. Several like instances are quoted by Dr. Murray, in which a sudden burst of cholera was ushered in by a heavy fall of rain. On this particular occasion the heavy rainfall of the 11th "was evidently the exciting cause, bringing into action the germs of the specific poison of cholera, for the growth of which the dense mass of shivering pilgrims formed a rich soil." It must have stirred into fatal activity the poisonous matter hid away somewhere near the surface of the ground, whether amidst the carefully-buried excretions of the latest or the forgotten relics of some earlier fair. It seems at first sight fatal to the latter solution to say that no outbreak of cholera had occurred at Hurdwar for the last ten years. Still we know too little about the cholera poison to venture on defining the limits of its action. Enough to acknowledge that the latent mischief re-appeared in the guise of noxious exhalations, or else found its way into the nearest wells, at which the unhappy pilgrims drank and sickened.

The system of dry-earth conservancy, which got rid of all bad smells, may even in this case have enhanced the evil it sought to avert. Absence of smell is no sure guarantee for lack of poisoning power. The natives at any rate demurred to this part only of the official precautions. They complained that the filth from the latrines was buried too near the tents; that it remained moist under the surface of the ground, instead of being dried as formerly in the sun; and that the heavy rain soaking through the outer covering released the noxious gases imprisoned below. Whether this theory be sound or no, it is worth considering in a different spirit from that of the school which sees in it only another instance of "native dislike to all conservancy." Common experience, we think, is rather on the native side.

How the taint was communicated from one to another is a separate question, on which more light has yet to shine. A mass of pertinent facts, however, must now be garnered up somewhere in the records of the Indian Government. The typical instances quoted by Dr. Murray all show how easily and stealthily the disease may be caught and carried on from person to person, from place to place. A pilgrim at a well is taken ill, and his soiled clothes washed in a neighbouring pond. Others presently visit the well for drinking water or the pond for bathing, and are attacked by the same disease. This form of infection seems to be the commonest. A Hakim, attending a cholera patient, somehow transmits the infection to his own son and daughter, who pass it on in their turn to others in the same village. At Ferozepore the first sufferer was a man who had merely travelled thither in a dawk-gharris filled with pilgrims returning from Hurdwar. At a village near Roopur a party of pilgrims cook and eat their dinner under some trees. After their departure two sweepers come and eat part of the food they left, and are stricken with cholera twelve hours afterwards. A woman at Delhi catches the disease from a friend whose body she had laid out two hours before. Facts like these need no comment.

Spirit of the Local Press.

RESTRICTIONS ON THE SALE OF ANCESTRAL PROPERTY IN LAND.

The Bombay Gazette demurs loudly to that clause in the coming Oude Rent Act which forbids the sale of ancestral landed property in satisfaction of a decree, without leave from the Divisional Commissioner. It would bring to the notice of the powers that be the danger of entrusting such an authority as this, of interference with the process of the courts, in the hands of any man, be he judicial or only a divisional commissioner, without restriction as to the nature of the cases in which his interference may be exercised. What is ancestral property, to commence with? Without any further definition of the term, it must be taken simply to mean property inherited from an ancestor, it may be a father, or it may be a great-great-grandfather. Why should the Judicial Commissioner have the power to prevent the sale of such property, if it is equitably saleable in satisfaction of the incumbent's debts and is really his sole property? Is the Judicial Commissioner at his discretion to create a fancy law of entail, or to discover imaginary political reasons why a man who may have obtained money on the security of such property should not be sold up? We imagine that what is meant is to give an opportunity for ascertaining whether by prudent management of a landed estate it may not be possible so to arrange matters as to liquidate the decreed debt by degrees, and save its permanent transfer to the hands of a stranger, with a view to preserve the old landed gentry of the country. A very praiseworthy object, no doubt, but one the value of which is, in our opinion, by no means commensurate with the advantage of maintaining unimpaired the legitimate action of the constituted tribunals of the country. If the sale of an estate in satisfaction of a decree against an individual would in any degree affect the legal rights of others, the law provides ample remedies by which the latter can protect such rights through the instrumentality of the Courts themselves. Surely they may be supposed capable of making use of those remedies, without the necessity of extra-judicial protection of this kind. Where the interests of the individual alone are concerned, would it not be a more reasonable course to adopt to give the Courts passing the decrees the power to direct their execution, not by the sale, but by the attachment and management of the estates with a view to the gradual liquidation of the debts? Even then a creditor who might be in urgent want of money, advanced in full confidence of the sufficiency of the security offered, would have good reason to complain of interference by the action of the Court with stipulations entered into by his debtor knowingly and deliberately; but in such a case the acknowledged injustice of such interference might be mitigated by power being given to the Court to allow a higher rate of interest than usual, or to make compensation in some other shape.

INDIA GOVERNED OUT OF INDIA.

The Friend of India winds up a number of instances illustrating the tendency of the home Government to do away with viceregal powers in India, by declaring that Sir Stafford Northcote has, in the Abyssinian war, ignored the Viceroy altogether, and dealt direct with the Governor of Bombay. When to the position which the Governor-General has thus practically reached we add his absence from the middle of the people for eight months every year, we can only come to the conclusion that there is no government of India in India, and that, for all practical purposes, it would be at once cheaper and more satisfactory to abolish it, and govern India in name as well as in reality from Downing-street. A vigorous policy on any question has been impossible ever since Lord Canning's days. There is no enthusiasm, no life, no broad ideas, no energy even, but the great mill of routine works in its daily round. Of the inactivity in our foreign and feudatory policy we shall say nothing, for that a large party approve of that is evident from its warm support by the Times. But look at all other and internal questions. The problem of taxation, grappled with so long ago as 1860, is unsolved in 1867; yet more discontent has been caused by imbecile attempts to solve it, from the suspension of the income-tax to the imposition of the licence duty, than if Mr. Wilson's rates had been doubled. A treasury without a surplus bars the way of all other reforms. Even the books of the empire are so badly kept, after years of expensive reporting and tinkering, that no Budget is reliable; and it is impossible to discover the cost of so simple a matter as the annual visit to Simla. The Public Works Department remains unreformed—a sink of peculation—except in producing early accounts, to the preparation of which the professional abilities of engineers are sacrificed. Railway extension is stopped, or but feebly encouraged. There is neither foresight nor force in allowing the English army to be reduced so low; in postponing that concession of the price of their commissions which alone will attract a supply of Royal officers as those of India pass away; and in doing nothing to create that body of reliable native commissioned officers which the now universal irregular system demands if it has any meaning. And, finally, the educational departments are allowed to run wild without system, and to waste money without intelligent control. Even works of irrigation have been sacrificed for five years, because there is no Government of India in India.

THE SHOE QUESTION.

The Friend of India contrasts our tolerance of native usages with the insolent demands of the Burmese Court on our own envoys. A Burman, whether British subject or not, was not expected to talk anything but Burmese, to leave off his betel, to take off his head dress, to cover his legs or to do anything he had not been accustomed to. When going into a court of justice or into the house of the highest official, he simply observed his own custom of taking off the shoes. He did not rise, or stand, or doff his head dress, or bow, or pull his forelock, but sat down in his own fashion, and was permitted a laxity even in this that would have met with severe corporal punishment under the Burmese Government. Such being the case of the Burman in British territory, what should have been the natural arrangement for the European in Burmah proper? Would it not be that he should retain his customs for himself, and respect those of the Burmese for them; that he should eat and drink as he chose, take off his hat and not his shoes in entering a court or a house, and raise his hat or bow when a token of respect to the authorities was required? But what was the arrangement? Why, that Europeans of whatever rank or sex are to follow "Burmese custom," to take off their shoes at the outer steps of any court or official's house, to do the same in the presence of any high official anywhere and on entering any Burman house, to alight and sit down on the ground in the streets on any one of the high officials or many princes passing, to address the king and every Burman official with whom a British merchant may have concern, kneeling and with hands folded palm to palm in the attitude of prayer, using the highest appellation in the language (the same, in fact, as to God) in addressing him and the most servile for yourself. One must not have beef, nor wine, nor beer, nor any alcoholic liquor. This is not enough. The British subject must be treated and protected as if he were "a Burman subject." Surely by no one who knows how Burman subjects are treated, how by Burmese law and custom their persons, their wives and daughters, and their property are in the capricious power of not only the king, but the officials who enjoy his delegated power, how utterly incapable is Burmese law of being made to deal justly with Europeans, how incredibly corrupt is their administration of this law—by no one who knows the facts can this clause of the late treaty be regarded as other than a sacrifice of the rights of her Majesty's European subjects.

RUSSIAN ROADS IN CENTRAL ASIA.

The Bombay Gazette remarks that the construction of roads in Central Asia is one of the great undertakings which at present engage the attention of the Russians, if we may credit the statement of our Cabul correspondent. Three roads radiating from the headquarters of the Russians will be carried south-eastward, southward, and south-westward to Kashmeer, Cabul, and Herat, thus establishing a communication between the Amoo and Syr rivers and Afghanistan on the one hand, and India on the other. Should the Russians carry out these important works, a great benefit will no doubt thereby be conferred upon commerce; but, at the same time, the facilities which that Power will thus provide for the march of an army into Afghanistan, or even into North-Western India, will be vastly increased; and hence it is not easy to decide whether we should look upon these projected routes in a favourable light or the contrary. One thing is evident from these undertakings—that the Russians are resolved to establish close communication with Afghanistan, and in all likelihood by the two roads to that region the army of Russians destined hereafter to conquer and occupy definitely the Afghan country will march down upon its two most important cities, Cabul and Herat. Whether the third road to Kashmeer will give passage to an invading Russian army into India is a question which more immediately concerns ourselves. That such is one of the objects of the Russians may safely be concluded, at the same time that the success of such an attempt fortunately rests not wholly with them. By all means let the Russians construct their roads, even down to our frontiers; happen what may hereafter, they will be a gain for commerce and general civilisation; and it is satisfactory to think that the same road which brings down the Russians to us may carry our sepoy into the heart of the Russian settlements in Central Asia, should we find it to our interest to look up our Russian friends in that quarter of the world.

RAILWAY EXTENSION IN NORTH-ERN INDIA.

The Englishman urges the need of a railway from Lahore to Peshawur, whether for strategic or commercial reasons.

If Russian progress need cause no immediate anxiety, there are wild tribes within and without our borders which may again give trouble as they have done before. It is needless to dwell on the advantage of a railway in moving troops and supplies at short notice to any given quarter. Trade, too, would be sure to benefit largely by the growth of railways properly planned. And, lastly, money is just now cheaper in England than it has been for years, or is likely to be again after a few months.

But the expense of the undertaking compels the putting it off to a more favourable season. That is the one objection which Sir John Lawrence and the home Government have found unanswerable. Yet the longer it is put off, the more it is likely to cost. The money that might now be borrowed at 2 or 3 per cent. will by-and-by be hard to procure at double those rates. And work done in a hurry is sure to be dearest, one way or another, in the end. It involves more waste of money with less commensurate return. When the danger without or within grows imminent, we shall regret the failure to forearm ourselves in time against it. Why not at any rate begin by doing a little in that direction now? As the Pull Mall Gazette proposes, why not take a bridge or two in hand at once? Most of us know the trouble and delay involved in crossing our great Indian rivers. What is there to prevent us from throwing over the Indus and the Ravee bridges, which would serve at once to fill up gaps in the Grand Trunk Road, and would by-and-by form connecting links in the line of railway that is to be? A permanent bridge near Attock has long been a crying want, for which engineering science could easily find the remedy. The bridge near Lahore would of course be a work of greater difficulty, therefore of greater cost; but what has been done successfully with the Jumna at Allahabad can surely be done again with the Ravee.

And why not, asks the Englishman, apply to a railway from the plains to Simlah the principle already crowned with success on Mont Cenis? The Mont Cenis principle is the very thing for which we have been waiting these many years. It has now been proved to satisfaction that a railway train can, under certain conditions, be driven easily and safely up zigzags steeper than any on the new Kennedy road to Simla, over a distance hardly less than that from Simla to the foot of the Hills. Let us adapt the new principle of the third rail and the horizontal wheel to the service of the most important of our hill-stations. It would cost but little to widen the Kennedy road, lay down the proper rails, and find the requisite working means for bringing Simla and Dugshaie nearer each other and the Plains. On the advantages of such a scheme there is no need to dwell; but we may point by the way to the relief it would afford at certain seasons to that demand for coolies which officers, magistrates, and coolies themselves have hitherto endured as a necessary evil. About the difficulties of the scheme there cannot be much to say, in view of what has been accomplished among the Alps. The experiment once tried successfully would ere long be extended to other parts of our Indian hills.

HOME-BRED OFFICIALS OR ANGLO-INDIAN FOR INDIAN GOVERNMENTS?

The Indian Daily News regrets the hasty generalisations drawn from the Orissa famine in favour of home-bred governors. The Civil Service of India can, however, afford to smile at one-sided attacks on them as a body. One thing, however, the famine teaches—the need of a separate government with council for Bengal.

On the main question the Daily News opines that while a civilian is on all grounds to be preferred to an English trained official for governing the presidencies, there are many reasons why the post of Viceroy should be filled by a British Statesman, and that if possible by a member of the aristocracy. There are considerations of policy as well as of mental fitness to be had in appointing the latter. He has more to deal with principles than details, with a collective efficiency than a local success; his position approaches more to that of the Queen herself than to that of the Queen's ministers. He may suffer the disadvantage of being unfamiliar with much that his mind has to be applied to, but this is overcome by experience and outweighed by higher considerations. The Governor of a province, by a close study of its people, may succeed in effecting a settlement of the land, in adopting an education scheme, in organising efficient police, or in developing the agricultural industry of the district; but the ability that is thus conspicuous is, so to speak, a localised ability, and it is here that his many-sided experience and study of native character tell in his favour. The imperial function, on the other hand, calls into play another order of talent—the leading qualities associated with statesmanship—imperial instinct—breadth of view, and that ripe intellectual power which, in Canning and Dalhousie, was tempered by caution and freedom from bias. Even with these men, however, the work of governing without a council representing specialities of information would have been simply impossible. Lord Canning, for instance, united to the best qualities of an English statesman the earnestness and research that enabled him to master local subjects presenting complexity. The able manner in which he took up the question of waste lands and elaborated a liberal scheme for their disposal won him golden opinions. But it is well known that the right hand man of his council, the adviser upon whom he relied most, was the late Governor of Bombay.

RAILWAY FROM RANGOON TO CHINA.—The first year's survey by Captain Williams' party within our own territory is fatal to the project of a railway from Rangoon to China. The party surveyed the country for 245 miles to our frontier on the Pak stream, by the Beeling route, which they declare to present fewer engineering obstacles than that by Shongheen, which is ten miles shorter. For the last 45 miles the difficulties would be very severe, and the cost of a railway very great. There is nothing in our own territory to justify the construction of a line of 1,450 miles, and it would seem that there is still less beyond. The Government of India has, therefore, sanctioned the continuation of the survey this cold weather to the Chinese frontier, if the political difficulties created in Western Karennee and the Shan States by the Meingoon Prince, who escaped from our surveillance, do not forbid it. Further prosecution of the project the Government of India deprecates. But the question has now assumed an unobjectionable shape, from the representations about to be made to the Secretary of State by a Committee of the British Association. It is no longer that started by such visionaries as the Messrs. Sprye, of a railway for 1,450 miles, from Rangoon to Western China, but it is one of purely geographical exploration of the main routes between India and China. These are four—the line partially surveyed already, and the survey of which ought to be completed; the old caravan route by the Irrawaddy and Bhamo; the still older route through Cachar and Munnipore by which the Buddhist missionaries penetrated Burmah; and the most dangerous, but shortest, from Suddya and the Brahmapootra to the Yangtze-Kiang. When geographical parties have collected information regarding all these, it will be time to project roads and dream of railways. It is a pity that the Government of India have not suggested this purely scientific exploration, for we rejoice to believe that it will now be forced on them.—Friend of India.

A NEW COMIC PAPER.—We have received the first number of the Bengal Punch, a new Calcutta Weekly. We wish Mr. Punch every success, and hope he will deserve it by improving the tone of his literary matter, as well as the style of his lithographs.

BENGAL.

"NOTHING IN THE PAPERS."

Let us glance cursorily through a late number or two of this journal to illustrate the little foundation which exists for the common cry "Nothing in the Newspapers!" A fearful act is perpetrated in the heart of the Himalayas, when Khoten, seized by villany, saw its principal ladies given to the harems of the traitors. With noble pride those matrons slew their enforced paramours; and, in the act, consigned their chief, an old man of four-score years, his son, and followers, to instant death. An expedition returns to India from the chastisement of the pirates of the Nicobar Islands, bringing with it several English books, keepsakes of dear friends, arms and clothing. Were not the villages rich with the spoil of European vessels? Some of the captured pirates admitted that a woman—how many others perchance?—taken from the French ship Karikal, had been debauched and then murdered. Her little girl still remains in the hands of the savages, carried away and concealed in the jungle. Two Sepoy sentries, mounting guard upon the ramparts of Fort William, are successively frightened into discharging their muskets at a phantom figure, mounted upon a tall steed, who demands the head of their general officer, John Fordyce, of H. M.'s Royal Artillery. After the following fashion the Maharajah of Mysore receives from our envoy, conveyed to the palace in a silver howdah, the letter of the Viceroy. Gold and flowers are twice thrown upon the missive, and whilst the guns peal out their welcome, thousands of rupees are scattered amongst the crowd. A population as numerous as that of London is assembled for a few days to pray and barter upon the banks of the Ganges, and cholera, carried there from many points, acquires a deadly volition which is felt to the further extremity of the land. In village and cantonment, driving our soldiers forth to endure in tents the terrible heats of summer, the angel of death, invoked into being at Hurdwar, has been busy. One Rao Mahiputram is readmitted, rare privilege, to his caste after seven years' exclusion, upon payment of £150, and shaving off his mustaches. Henceforth it is decreed that a Nagur, polluted by a visit to civilised Europe, cannot, upon any conditions, recover his religious and social status. The world may have been created for man, but the Nagur Brahmins for India only. A force collected at Bombay, embarked and embarking; black warriors drawn from Sindh and beyond the Indus, led by white men, under the first soldier in India; destined to climb the Abyssinian steppes and rescue from bondage our countrymen and women. David Marshall, alias Din Mahomed, a convert to Mahomedanism, shop-keeper, married to Maria Woodbridge, alias Mariam, after the rites of Islam, dies in a public hospital of Bombay from excessive drinking. A Nawab, our creature, massacres in cold blood the Thakoor of Lawa and eighteen of his followers. Learning which, the Thakoor's Rajpoot wife upbraids her son for not having avenged his father's death, and plunges a dagger into her heart. From Kooshtea to within a short distance of Calcutta a mighty flood has leaped upon the land; whole villages, swept away by the inundation, have left thousands poverty stricken and homeless. All Cabul a scene of treachery and ceaseless strife, and Burmah saved from a similar fate, not before blood had flown, by our weight. These are a few gleanings, taken at random from "nothing in the papers!"—Friend of India.

NEWS FROM LUCKNOW.

LUCKNOW, Oct. 22.—It seems that even as yet we have not done with the rains. Yesterday clouds were gathering around, and this morning we are having repeated showers much to the injury of the work going on preparatory to the Viceroyal visit. All the buildings of the place are in the hands of the municipal engineer, who, with no time to spare, has a myriad of men engaged in doing up our numerous palaces and public offices, which work, owing to the lateness of the rains, could not be undertaken earlier. It is quite comical to see how, in the last few days, such buildings as the Kaiser Bagh, the Chutter Munzil, and Saadut Ali Khan's tomb have, on their highest portions, come out clean and decorated, while all below is dark, dingy, and dirty. The last heavy shower we had played sad havoc with the Kaiser Pussund, which has to be done up again, and should the present threatening weather result in another downpour, the gentlemen engaged in directing the carrying out of the improvements will be at their wits' end. Bent as we are on appearing at our best, the preparations going on are very extensive and general. The higher officials have no easy time of it just now. Committees assemble at daylight every morning, now a Kaiser Bagh committee, and then Bailey Guard Museum, illumination and procession committees. To such an extent have these gentlemen worked themselves, that out of office hours, nothing else has been thought of or done for the last month but committees and sitting on them. It is not every day or every year that a durbar is held at Lucknow, and we must be excused any little vanity we may show in making the most of our fair city when we are about to be visited by the magnates of the land and personal friends without number.

Major Chamberlain, city magistrate, has been temporarily relieved of his magisterial duties, and is to devote his time to superintending the decorations and arrangements. With his heart in the work, a good deal of experience, and any amount of energy, a better selection could not have been made. Lieutenant Hastings, from cantonments, will officiate as city magistrate.

Two or three journals have recently given out that Lady Lawrence proceeds direct from Simla to Calcutta. This is not correct. Lady Lawrence accompanies the Viceroy to Lucknow, and has already signified her intention of holding a reception.

Our city Nawabs are becoming notorious for dark deeds and high crimes. It is only a few months ago that an individual, styling himself a Nawab, was transported for life for an attempted murder and suicide, and now we have a Shahzada, a prince of the Royal blood, implicated in a most mysterious murder recently perpetrated in his zenana. The affair, at present, is involved in much mystery, but so much seems certain that in the Shahzada's establishment a girl, four years old, was so beaten, bruised, dashed about and burnt that death was the result. Burns of a most appalling and horrifying nature were found on her head, stomach, and back. The why and the wherefore of this mal-treatment has not transpired. It is said that the child was the Shahzada's, the mother being the wife of a sowar of a cavalry regiment, whom the Shahzada wished to introduce into his harem. In explanation it was alleged the child died from injuries done to her by a goat, but Dr. Cannon's post mortem examination upset this story entirely, and left no doubt as to the cause of death. The mother, grandmother, Shahzada and others are suspected, but the mother alone is at present in custody, she having at first declared herself the murderess. When, however, she discovered it would be a matter of life and death she altered her tale and charged the Shahzada. The friends of this gentleman have lost no time in securing the services of the ablest of our local bar to look after his interests; in fact, it is pretty generally understood that the whole of the bar, European and native, has been engaged. This, however, will not prevent the ends of justice being secured. The transported Nawab thought money would carry him through, but Mr. Capper showed him his mistake; and although this murder has been committed in the depths of a zenana of nearly two hundred people, and though the Nawab disburses his last cownie, the mystery will be revealed and justice will be done.

Mr. Fraser, Civil Judge, has returned from Mussoorie much better in health than his many friends were led to expect from the numerous reports recently in circulation. He, however, is still too weak to undertake his judicial duties, and will temporarily be relieved by Mr. Quinton, late Deputy Commissioner, who from to-day presides in the Civil Court. —Delhi Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LORD LORN.—The Marquis of Lorn, eldest son of the Duke of Argyll, is on a tour in Turkey, and will visit India. He lately published an account of his travels in the West Indies.

ACCIDENT TO CAPTAIN JERVIS.—We regret to hear that Captain Jervis, of the 101st Fusiliers, travelling by dak garry from Rajpore to Dehra, has met with a severe accident. The pony, it appears, ran away with the carriage, and Captain Jervis, in trying to jump out, got his leg caught in the spokes of the wheel. A fracture and severe wrench have been the result. —Mofussilite, Oct. 15.

SILLIDAR CAVALRY FOR SERVICE AT ADEN.—The Government of India has sanctioned the organisation of a troop of Sillidar Cavalry for service at Aden. This troop will be placed specially under the orders of the Resident, and will be designated the "Aden Troop." It will be under the same conditions of service as the men of Sillidar cavalry regiments, being subject to the Articles of War, and receiving the same rates of pension.

HOOGLHY FEVER.—We hear that a malarious fever has again attacked the villages in the interior of the Hooghly district. The sickness is so general and so fatal that many respectable families have left the district. The Government set on foot, some years ago, an inquiry into the causes of this fever, but the result would appear to have been nil. No steps have, at present, been taken to ascertain the real causes of the epidemic, or to afford that medical assistance which the people require. —Englishman, Oct. 22.

FAILURE OF THE LICENSE DUTY.—As a tax the license duty promises to be a failure. The amount raised in all Bengal up to this time is only Rs. 10,11,610. The Englishman points out that 51,283 licenses granted in the Mofussil yielded only Rs. 1,12,199 more than the 13,322 licenses granted at the Presidency—another proof of the unfair incidence of the tax. At Calcutta there have been refunds to the extent of Rs. 8,256, or 2½ per cent. of the sum collected. A license in Calcutta produces on the average a little over Rs. 30, whilst in the Mofussil the average is not quite Rs. 9-6.

MR. BROUGHTON, the quinologist or quinine chemist employed by Government at the Neilgherry Plantations, has produced pure sulphate of quinine from the Crispa variety of the C. Officinalis. From his analysis it appears that, although the grey barks do not contain quinine, they are, among the richest in their yield of alkaloids. Mr. Broughton is conducting experiments for the determination of the best season for cropping the bark on a large scale, the various methods of drying the bark for exportation, the influence of soil, the physiology of the alkaloids, and the effects of mossaing the barks. The question of a ready means of utilising the barks in the form of some simple preparation for therapeutical purposes in India is also receiving his best attention.

DR. LEITNER.—You seem not to have heard that the Railway Commission positively closed their public sittings more than a fortnight ago, having first examined Mr. G. Finch as soon as he was sufficiently recovered to appear. It may be remembered that this gentleman resigned his appointment of assistant agent some time in March, and when asked by the agent for his reasons for such a step, refused to or did not give any. When asked amongst other items of inquiry why he would assign no reason, replied that he was never asked to do so! The letter of inquiry was put in, and then he turned round and declared that being a private letter he was not bound to reply! Colonel Elphinstone's general answer to the allegations brought against him was put in on Monday, September 30, but not concluded, owing to his counsel taking time to consider whether he should put in a letter from Dr.

Leitner which had been so repeatedly alluded to that, although marked private and confidential, the writer said he would greatly prefer its production to its being constantly held over him "in terrorem." When, however, Mr. Plowden was on the point of reading this paper, in compliance with the implied acquiescence of the writer, the latter objected personally to its production as relating wholly and solely to his own affairs, (the letter, according to common report, was one asking Colonel Elphinstone to write Dr. Leitner up with the view of his obtaining the office of Director of Public Instruction, and the decoration of the Star of India,) and as I observed above, Mr. Plowden took time to consider, and finally determined not to produce it. The remainder of the reply was sent in to the Commissioner instead of being read in public, Colonel Elphinstone reserving to himself the right of putting in a final answer to the whole affair, when the report of the Commissioner should appear. As one of the members went to Jullundhur and another is sick or was, it is probable delay will have taken place in the final preparation of the document, which will, it is said, appear in the Gazette of India after it has received the full, and it is to be hoped, the fair consideration of the Governor-General in Council. Whether that august body intend to take any notice of the very serious questions you have mooted remains to be seen, but the general impression was, that one man may steal a horse while another may not look over a hedge.—Delhi Gazette.

SAUGOR.—We have had more rain here lately, but the weather has again turned out pleasant and fine. Fever prevails here to a great extent among the troops: H.M.'s 107th Regiment are suffering from its effects. The men are, I hear, struck off duty and marched to the hospital every morning to receive a dose of quinine each. It is to be hoped, now that the cold weather is setting in, they may soon recover. A man of the corps shot himself, a short time ago, in a fit of despondency. The cause was, I believe, the loss of two good-conduct badges. Such is the supposition, but there may have been some other cause of which nothing appears to be known.—Delhi Gazette.

THE GOVERNMENT BEGINNING TO AWAKE TO THE VALUE OF THEIR FORESTS IN BURMAH.—In revising the working plan of the Forests in British Burmah a good opportunity was afforded for completing the lists of trees in the province with the necessary botanical descriptions. As this work required the services of a specially qualified officer, application was made to the Government of Bengal, and the services of Mr. Kurz, the curator of the herbarium at the Botanical Gardens, Calcutta, were placed for four months at the disposal of the Government of India. Mr. Kurz is, therefore, to accompany the Inspector-General of Forests to Burmah, and will be employed under his orders, and after Dr. Brandis's departure under the orders of the Conservator, and will prepare descriptive lists, with drawings whenever necessary, of the forest trees, shrubs, and other plants of importance in the forests of Burmah, which it is intended should be published for the use of the forest officers generally. Mr. Kurz will also prepare a duplicate set of botanical specimens of forest trees and shrubs, one for the Botanical Gardens at Calcutta, the other for the Government of India, to be kept in the office of the Inspector-General of Forests, and while thus employed will draw Rs. 100 per mensem, as deputation allowance, in addition to his bona fide travelling expenses. These charges, the Governor-General is of opinion, should be borne by the Forest Department of British Burmah.

THE CONSECRATION OF ST. STEPHEN'S MEMORIAL CHURCH AT DELHI.—This beautiful little church was consecrated by the Bishop of Calcutta on the morning of the 17th October. description of the building was given on a previous occasion, when the church was first opened, and it will not be necessary to repeat it here. Suffice it to say it is admirably adapted for its purpose. It is a striking building, its proportions and architecture rendering it pleasing to the eye. It is situated in one of the most populous thoroughfares in the City of Delhi, immediately facing the Queen's Garden. The interior is prettily decorated, and the walls, instead of presenting that bare blank space of too often dirty whitewash, so great a favourite with the Anglo-Indian, are covered with prettily executed scrolls, symbols, and texts, illustrating the prominent truths of our religion, and some of the most prominent events in the history of our Lord and of his apostles. The inscriptions are in Persian character as well as in English. Accommodation has been provided in this church for the attendance of those who do not wish to do more than to look on. It is thought that during the hours of divine service many of the Mahomedan and heathen passers by might be induced out of curiosity to stay and witness the method of conducting divine worship among the Christians. The whole of the service was of course conducted in Oordoo, translations of the service in that language as well as in English being provided for the use of the congregation. It speaks well for the energy and the enthusiasm of our present bishop in his new and extensive field of duty, that after so short a residence in the country he should have qualified himself for reading and even preaching in the vernacular, for his sermon also was delivered in Oordoo, as were the addresses he made the day previous to the candidates for confirmation. The memorial church erected in commemoration of the mutiny and its suppression is dedicated to St. Stephen the Martyr. At the consecration there was a very fair attendance of native converts, both men and women, and by far the largest number of native communicants it has ever been my lot to witness at the celebration of that service.—Delhi Gazette.

AGRA, Oct. 18.—An accident occurred to the night train (down) coming from Toondla to Agra, on the 17th, which might have been attended with great inconvenience. When the train reached the spot where the engine is uncoupled from the front and put at the rear of the train (a miserably clumsy arrangement, to say the best of it), she proved herself to be little better than a cracked tin kettle in guise of a locomotive. She first of all began fizzing and spluttering, like a squib that has got wet and wont go off properly; by-and-by she began to wheeze and heave long-drawn sighs, that were quite painful to listen to. The only thing my imagination could compare it to was a broken-winded elephant, completely exhausted by running up hill. However, there we were, a long train full of passengers, several hundred yards from the station. Had there been any coolies to carry our traps, we might have easily walked in, for it was a beautifully moonlight night, but it was an awkward trip for invalids, ladies, and young children. By-and-by the engine moved at a pace of one mile an hour, put itself in position in rear of the train, and the impetus of its approach actually moved us a yard nearer our destination, but there we stuck. In vain those heart-breaking sighs, in vain those wheezing, panting fits; she could scarcely move herself when there was nothing in front of her, what prospect was there of her pushing a train? Under the circumstances, of course, the guard was appealed to. What was to be done? "Send in for coolies," I suggested, "to carry the traps, and let the passengers complete the journey on their legs." The guard, however, could think of nothing better than to send for the station master, and it would have been a very excellent suggestion if the station master had been an elephant or a camel, because then he might have dragged in the luggage van and taken one or two people on his back. As the station master was probably not so useful as one of these quadrupeds would have been at this juncture, I wondered what was the good of sending for him! "Oh! he can take the tickets here," said the guard, his railway mind running on tickets while mine was running on the chance of getting to bed that night. At last, they got some crowbars, and, by dint of perseverance, moving the train ever so little, and allowing the engine to bring her wheezing force to bear upon it while in motion, we succeeded in progressing, by a series of small jerks, and at less than a snail's pace, up as far as the platform.—Delhi Gazette.

ARREST OF CHUGGUN LALL.—Some of our readers may be a little amused to hear that that protégé of Government, Chuggun Lall, who is really a remarkably clever man, and who made use of Mr. Pollock to climb to eminence in Agra and Calcutta in 1866, and sold a large number of his photographs in the latter place, being one of the lions of the day, as he was the principal evidence against Captain Harward, has been apprehended in the Goruckpore district upon some charges, one of which, at least, has peculiar features. The following is the account sent us by a correspondent:—"It appears that at Cawnpore he met the Rajah of Gopalpore, a man who did excellent service during the mutiny, for which he was suitably rewarded by the British Government, and having initiated himself, by a fascination peculiar to himself, into the good graces of the Rajah, advised him to set up a distinct raj, taking care, of course, to instal himself as the 'second man in the kingdom.' Will it, then, be credited that in an evil moment the Rajah having listened to his persuasions, this man actually set about settling the preliminaries for the establishment of a raj by the appointment of tehsildars, thannahdars, &c., and arranging all the business incident to such a formation, and that only when he had carried his tomfoolery a little too far, by sentencing a man to imprisonment, that the whole affair was brought to the notice of the authorities, and the district superintendent of police received instructions to arrest him? All this farce might have continued a little longer had not prime minister Chuggun Lall's obstinate adherence to some tyrannical rule, when opposed by arguments of reason and equity, have aggravated discontentment, and at length produced alienations, which eventually made themselves felt by a full and complete disclosure of his doings at Gopalpore. He now awaits trial, and on his petitioning the Court a fortnight's time has been granted to enable him to procure professional assistance from Calcutta."—Delhi Gazette.

THE MOUNTJOY SANITARIUM.—On referring to the map of Pegu, compiled by Capt. F. C. L. Williams, of the R.E., and at present Asst. Secretary to the Government of India in the Public Works Department, we find that the situation of the new hill station proposed as a sanitarium of British Burmah is in latitude 18 deg. 38 min. north, and longitude 94 deg. 55 min. east. The altitude of the mountain above sea level is said to be three thousand feet. Nyoungkedouk is a Burmese village which is passed in proceeding to the ghaut, and is about thirteen miles distant from the proposed station. On the south, a few miles distant, is another village, shown on a map of Tobangyoung. To the west is a third village of Kyoutzeekan. The Touncoop Pass lies about forty miles to the north-west of Mountjoy. If the proposed station is approved by Government, there would be very little difficulty felt in bringing it within the range of the existing telegraph. The present wire runs very near the place, and it would be most desirable to establish a telegraph station on the mountain, for it would be a good half-way house between Pegu on the east and Arracan on the west. In fact it might be called the midway mountain station between the valley of the Irrawaddy and the sea coast of Arracan.

Being thus within speaking distance of Theyemyo and Rangoon would be a grand thing.—Rangoon Times, Oct. 10.

NOBLE CONDUCT.—We have great pleasure in informing the public that we believe at least a hundred lives have been saved by the prompt action taken by Major H. Nelson Davies, the Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, upon the information, which was communicated to him by the Master Attendant, of the wreck of the brig Nineveh, on one of the Andaman Islands. Immediately on ascertaining the particulars of the case, Major Davies engaged the services of the steamer Defiance to proceed to Port Blair with the news. The vessel was got ready in an almost incredibly short time, and was despatched. A few hours after her arrival at Port Blair with the despatches, she was sent off with the steamer Kwang Tung in search of the wrecked passengers and crew. Before she had been long out the Defiance fell in with a raft, from which she rescued thirteen men, and they reported that some seventy more were on an island not very far off. They had left those on the island the previous morning. The Kwang Tung went and saved them, while the Defiance proceeded in search of another raft, said to contain nine men, but this latter search was not successful. When returning the Defiance encountered the same raft, from which Captain Wilcoxon had saved the thirteen men. It was seen washed on shore.—Rangoon Times, Oct. 16.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR THOMAS PYCROFT.—Sir Thomas Pycroft was entertained at dinner last night, at the Madras Club, on the occasion of his retirement from the Civil Service. About eighty gentlemen were present, among whom were the Governor, the Commander-in-Chief, the Bishop, and the Chief Justice. Mr. Justice Holloway presided.

WYNAAD.—A correspondent informs us that the rains in the Wynaad have this year been very favourable to the growing coffee, the crop of which is stated to be promising. It is expected that the whole of the Tamber-cherry Ghaut will shortly be opened for cart traffic. An additional company of sappers and miners is about to be employed on the work.

MADRAS CRICKET CLUB.—The first match of the season will be played on the Chepauk Ground to-day (Saturday, the 26th) between an Eleven of the Madras Club and Eleven of H.M.'s 60th Rifles, commencing at one P.M. We may remind our readers that the new pavilion has been constructed with a private entrance to the roofed gallery, from which ladies may have a good view of the game without exposure to the sun.

COOLIES FOR THE TEA DISTRICTS OF BENGAL.—Owing to the serious mortality which has occurred amongst the Madras coolies in the tea districts of Bengal, the Government have deemed it necessary to direct that the Protector of Emigrants and the several Protectors of Labourers will see that licences are not granted under Act No. 5 of 1866 to contractors or recruiters who may desire to engage labourers for the tea districts in question.

COMMISSARIAT CLERKS FOR THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.—We are informed that the Commissary-General, Bombay, has, in a telegram to the Commissary-General, Madras, applied for the services of four clerks, two on a salary of 200 rupees each, and two others on 100 rupees each, exclusive of free rations and warm clothing, in lieu of the two clerks applied for in a previous telegram, to join the commissariat staff proceeding to Abyssinia.

THE BORER IN MYSORE.—The Government have intimated to the Officiating Commissioner of Mysore that they will be prepared to place the services of Dr. Bidie at his disposal, for the purpose of inquiring into, and reporting on, the devastation caused by the borer insect on the coffee plantations in Coorg and Mysore. Dr. Bidie will be instructed, after completing his inquiries in Coorg and Mysore, to proceed to Wynaad, and report on the ravages of the borer in that district.

BREACH OF TRUST.—Ramanjooloo Chetty, cash-keeper in the traffic department of the Madras Railway, charged under section 408 of the Penal Code with having committed criminal breach of trust as a clerk, was yesterday (Friday, the 25th) discharged at the Town-police. The magistrate, Mr. Clark, was of opinion that there was not sufficient evidence against the defendant, and accordingly dismissed the case. The sum alleged to have been embezzled by the defendant was Rs. 12,000, which is lost to the company in a way which appears quite unaccountable.

THE CIRCUMFERENTOR.—The Superintendent of Revenue Survey having solicited from Government some recognition of the service done to the department by Major Barber, who designed, and at his own expense constructed the Circumferentor, an instrument to take the place of the magnetic compass, Government have directed Colonel Priestly to inform Major Barber that they highly appreciate the talent shown in the invention of the Circumferentor, and the value of the instrument in survey operations, and that they are very sensible of the good service he has rendered to the department by placing it at their disposal. The matter will be brought to the special notice of the Secretary of State.

EUROPEAN VAGRANTS.—The President of the Committee on European Vagrancy having represented to Government that steps are being taken for the temporary relief of vagrants pending the decision of the Legislature on the general question, and that if the Government see fit to assign a grant in aid of this object, as was done in Bombay, the committee will probably have it in their power, not only to put a stop to mendicancy by this class of persons, but also to arrange for the deportation by sea to England or elsewhere of those who are willing to go and to work while on board ship, the Government have directed the sum of Rs. 1,000 to be placed at the disposal of the Committee on European Vagrancy, as a grant in aid of the funds which they are raising for the temporary relief of European vagrants.

TIGERS IN KURNOOL DISTRICT.—The Collector of Kurnool, in reporting to Government the terrible ravages of the tigers in the Nandikanama Ghaut, says:—"Lieutenant Russell, Assistant-Superintendent of Police, has reported that, during this year, up to the 27th September, a man-eating tiger has carried off sixty-four human beings, and has caused such a terror that the post runners and beat constables will not traverse the Ghaut until large numbers of persons collect, accompanied with numerous tom-tom beaters, and that the coolies of the Public Works Department have stopped work, through fear of attack from this tiger. It is a question in my mind whether it is one tiger only that causes this havoc, for the jungles are most dense, and afford remarkable cover for wild beasts of all descriptions; but when I went over the Ghaut in August, on the night after Mr. Russell's bullock-driver was carried off, the chensus and coolies working on the roads told me all the mischief is done by one individual tiger, and that it is known by its foot-marks, which are peculiar, showing an immense growth of one of the claws in one of its fore-feet. On my recommendation, the Board of Revenue have sanctioned the expenditure of Rs. 1,200 towards clearing the dense jungle for a space of 100 yards on each side of the road. This, however, is but a precaution for the future. What appears necessary for the present is the adoption of some measure for the extirpation of the plague. I can think of none better adapted for the purpose than that recommended by Mr. Russell, and that is placing at his disposal two Government elephants for the express purpose of pursuing and hunting down the tigers in the neighbourhood of the Pass. Mr. Russell is placed in a dangerous position, for he has the superintendence of two Taluqs on the east, and one Taluq on the west of the Nalla Malla Hills, and cannot do his work without having constantly to pass over this Ghaut. At Bellary I should think there were several elephants available in the Commissariat Department, and I can hardly see to what better use they can be put than in assisting towards the destruction of the tigers which have spread a fear throughout the hills and their neighbourhood." The Government, in reply, sent the following telegram:—"You are authorised to offer such reward as you deem proper, not exceeding Rs. 300, for the man-eating tiger referred to in your letter of the 9th instant, also to engage skilled Shikarees on daily wages, who will also be eligible to receive reward. If necessary, obtain arms and ammunition for them from Bellary Arsenal. Your proposal to employ elephants has been referred to the Military Department."

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE P. AND O. Co.'s S.S. "CHINA," captain J. D. Steward, arrived in Bombay harbour from Southampton at midnight on the 19th of October, after one of the finest runs ever made, having accomplished the voyage in forty-nine days twelve hours, including thirty hours' stay in St. Vincent. She brings Messrs. Abraham and Withy as passengers, and her cargo consists entirely of machinery for the company.

DIAMONDS.—The Bombay Builder states that the supply of diamonds from Golconda and India generally is failing. Counterfeits, which frequently deceive experts, are now being made in Paris and Birmingham to meet the demand. India has long since ceased to export anything worthy of the name of diamond, and Golconda is merely the fort in which the Nizam keeps his treasure.

A CHANCE LOST.—The Scindian mentions that a speculative genius has been "boring" the authorities of Hyderabad for permission to dig up ground within the fort where, according to tradition, the Ameers buried their treasures shortly before the battle of Meanee. Worn out by his importunity the Collector at last referred the matter to Government, which ordered a search to be made, but the officer in charge of the arsenal would not allow digging, because it would interfere with the stability of the fort.—Scindian.

THE MONSOON.—The total rainfall at the undermentioned places in the Bombay presidency, down to Sept. 30th, was as follows:—Colaba, 60.02 in., Fort, 70.15 in., Byculla, 75.62 in., Tanna, 101.02 in., Bassein, 55.84 in., Rutnagherry, 88.31 in., Dapoolie, 109.35 in., Vingorla, 103.4 in., Carwar, 112.16 in., Coompta, 124.33 in., Honore, 137.83 in., Surat, 33.51 in., Broach, 31.03 in., Ahmedabad, 17.67 in., Kaira, 19.26 in., Baroda, 31.32 in., Rajkote, 20.16 in., Ahmednuggur, 17.99 in., Poona, 7.81 in., Sattara, 26.6 in., Belgaum, 34.15 in., Dharwar, 18.63 in., Kurachee, 3.92 in., Hyderabad (Sind), 7.64 in., Jacobabad, 1.42 in. The most extensive rainfall was at Malcolm Pett, Mahabeshwur, where 205.55 in. were recorded. Up to the 21st Oct. the rainfall at Bombay measured—Colaba, 65.07 in., Fort, 73.57 in., and Byculla, 79.12 in. The average rainfall for 12 years at the latter place has been 77.45.

THE UNIVERSITY OF BOMBAY.—At a meeting of the Senate of the University of Bombay, held on the 4th of October, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—"That the Syndicate be empowered to take steps to obtain the recognition, by the Universities of Great Britain and Ireland, of Degrees in Arts granted by the University of Bombay, and of courses of lectures on medical subjects certified to have been attended at institutions recognised by the University of Bombay." "That the University of Bombay, since its last meeting in Senate, has received intelligence of the sudden removal from life of Edward Irvine Howard, Esq., one of its original Fellows. The University desires to place on record an expression of its great regret at the untimely decease of a most accomplished scholar, whose opinion on all academical questions was felt to be valuable, and who has done the University good service by constantly advocating the maintenance of a high standard for matriculation and degree examinations."

Oct. 9.—No. 24.—The following extract from a letter from the Adjt. gen., Horse Guards, dated Aug. 9, is published for general information:—

"I have it in command to acquaint you that his Royal Highness is of opinion that the duties of subaltern officers of horse and field arty. brigs. render it necessary to exempt them from ordinary garrison duties, but that, where the number of subaltern officers of garrison brigades and batteries is sufficient to admit of their performing garrison duties without detriment to their regimental duties, H.R. Highness sees no objection to their sharing, with officers of other branches of the service, the duties of the garrison in which they may be serving."

distant station, any more than to a regimental officer so situated, whose regt. may happen to be at such a station.

"2. In either case the officer may fairly be expected to proceed, where his duty may be, at his own expense.

"3. In cases, however, in which the officer may be obliged to proceed to the station in question by sea, the Gov. gen. in Council has no objection to the grant of a passage under the provisions of para. 4, G.G.O. HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Nov. 22.

MULES FOR ABYSSINIA.

Captain VIVIAN asked the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether any correspondence had taken place between the War-office and the Foreign-office relating to the conduct of the British consul at Barcelona with regard to the purchase of mules for the Abyssinian expedition; and if so, whether he would lay that correspondence upon the table of the House.

Lord STANLEY said correspondence had taken place between the War-office and the Foreign-office and between the Foreign-office and the consul at Barcelona, on the subject referred to; but as that correspondence was not yet complete he was not in a position to say whether he should be able to lay it on the table of the House.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Nov. 25.

POSTAL COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.

The Duke of MONTROSE, in reply to a question put by Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY relative to the new India mail contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company, explained that no company but that had made a tender, and that the terms were higher than before in consequence of the company giving notice that they could not renew the contract upon the old conditions. The company asked for a payment of £500,000 a year if the contract were renewed for six years. Deeming that too much, he suggested that they should reconsider the matter. They then offered to carry the mails for £400,000, provided the contract was concluded for twelve years, and the Government, thinking the offer advantageous to the public, closed with them on those terms. Additional ships were to be provided, and the service would be much improved. Instead of only a fortnightly mail to Bombay, there would hereafter be a weekly one, whilst the mails to Australia and other places in the East would be accelerated.

After a few words had passed across the table between Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY and the Duke of MONTROSE, the subject dropped.

The House adjourned at ten minutes to six.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

On the motion of Mr. HUNT, for Sir S. Northcote, it was ordered that the House should resolve itself into committee to consider the following resolution:—

"That her Majesty having directed a military expedition to be despatched against Abyssinia, consisting mainly of troops, both European and native, at present maintained out of the revenues of India, the ordinary pay of such troops, as well as the ordinary charges of any vessels belonging to the Government of India, that may be employed in the expedition, which would have been charged upon the revenues of India if such troops or vessels had remained in that country or seas adjacent, shall continue to be so chargeable; provided that, if it shall become necessary to replace the troops or vessels so withdrawn by other European or native forces or vessels, the expense of raising, maintaining, and providing such forces or vessels shall be repaid out of any moneys which may be provided by Parliament for the purposes of the said expedition."

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER brought up and laid upon the table a resolution authorising a vote of credit of £2,000,000 for the purposes of the expedition.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Nov. 26.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

The first discussion of the Abyssinian expedition attracted the largest audience of this preliminary session, but at no period of the evening was the House full, the gaps on the Ministerial side being particularly noticeable.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved the vote of credit of £2,000,000 on account of the Abyssinian expedition, of which he gave notice on Monday. Commencing by a hasty review of the transactions which had rendered the expedition necessary—the detention of Consul Cameron, the mission of Mr. Rassam ending in his detention, the failure of Mr. Flad's mission, and the ultimatum addressed to King Theodore, down to Lord Stanley's speech in July, 1866, when the possibility of recovering the captives by force was first discussed in the House of Commons—Mr. Disraeli said that the Government at that time had reluctantly contemplated the necessity of an expedition, and had begun to make preparations; and he denied that on that occasion Lord Stanley had led the House to believe that there would be no expedition; on the contrary, he undertook to show that Lord Stanley had distinctly announced an expedition, and had courted the responsibility for it. The Government just then was making inquiries, and had not yet received King Theodore's answer to the ultimatum, so that it was impossible for them to make up their minds; but they were very anxious to hold themselves ready for operating this year. Almost simultaneously, immediately after Lord Stanley's speech, the Governor of Bombay reported himself ready to begin at once, and Colonel Merewether reported that our ultimatum had been rejected by King Theodore, and the Government then came to a reluctant decision that as measures of conciliation and magnanimity had failed, it was their duty to resort to force for the recovery of the captives. Dr. Disraeli went on to show how the Government had taken every precaution to secure the success of the expedition, warmly praising the energy and the economical zeal of Mr. Seymour Fitzgerald, the Governor of Bombay, and stated that up to this time no moneys had been spent which had not been voted by Parliament; but it became necessary now that Parliament should provide funds. Assuming that its object would be attained by the end of the healthy season—the end of April—according to a rough but careful and confident estimate, the expedition would cost £3,500,000, to which must be added £300,000 if it were necessary to replace in India the Indian troops now employed in Abyssinia—say, £4,000,000 in all. Only £2,000,000 was asked for now, because only that sum could be spent within this financial year, and also because if luckily King Theodore should surrender the captives without an actual war, £2,000,000 would about represent the cost of placing Sir R. Napier's force in Abyssinia.

Mr. LOWE, passing over altogether the historical causes of the quarrel, charged the Government with a violation of the spirit of the Constitution in commencing this war without notice to Parliament, and maintained that, although they had led the House of Commons to believe that nothing would be done against King Theodore without its knowledge, they were all the time pushing on preparations, and gave no notice of their resolution until the last day of the Session. Lord Stanley's speech of July 25 amounted to a pledge that no steps should be taken to commit Parliament to an expedition until the information (which he was then seeking for) had been laid before them; but now it turned out that the only information he was waiting for was Mr. Fitzgerald's assurance that the expedition could be commenced this year, and King Theodore's rejection of our ultimatum; and that the Government had irrevocably made up its mind at that very moment to employ force. Government had violated the 55th clause of the Act of 1858, by charging on the Indian revenues the expenses of the Indian troops employed on the expedition, and they had broken the pledge Lord Stanley had given that it should not be undertaken without careful inquiry. Admitting that it was impossible now to refuse to vote the money, he asked for further information as to the practicability of the expedition, dwelling forcibly on the supposed difficulties of climate and country. What routes, for instance, he asked, were to be taken? Was the expedition sent on the idea that Theodore had possession of the captives, and how, when we had got into the country, were we to get out?

Lord STANLEY defended, in an elaborate speech, the policy of the expedition, and the conduct of the Government in reference to it, commencing with an emphatic declaration that it was a disagreeable duty, which no Government would have undertaken except under the strongest conviction that it was forced on them in honour and in justice to the public servants. Passing lightly over the original policy of entering into diplomatic relations with these semi-barbarous potentates, and the causes which led to the detention of Consul Cameron, Lord Stanley said that, at any rate, Mr. Rassam had done no wrong, and that King Theodore had never condescended to tell us what he complained of; discussed the different plans which had been suggested for their recovery, to show that there was nothing left but force, though there still remained a chance of a peaceable surrender through the mediation of a mission proposed to be sent by the Viceroy of Egypt to King Theodore. There was but one alternative to the expedition—to leave the captives to their fate, and though this course was justified in the case of Conolly and Stoddart by the physical impossibility of sending an expedition to Bokhara, that could not be pleaded in this case, for though a march into Abyssinia might be difficult, it was not hopeless. But, apart from the difficulties of the expedition, we had to consider what effect the abandonment of our envoys would have on our power in India, which depended so much on prestige; and in enforcing this argument he reminded the House that our supposed breakdown in the Crimea had much to do with the Sepoy revolt, and that the recent Bhootan war had been waged expressly to punish an indignity offered to our envoys. He discussed and dismissed the project of sending out a third mission after two had failed, and of bribing King Theodore; and he maintained that we knew as much of Abyssinia as we did of Burmah, Scinde, or other countries to which we had sent expeditions; that there were no greater obstacles either in the way of geographical difficulties, climate, means of transport, water, &c., than our Indian officers were well accustomed to deal with. Abyssinia, in fact, did not present so many difficulties as Afghanistan, which had been traversed from end to end by an Anglo-Indian force. It was impossible for King Theodore to run away with his captives; for, in the present condition of the country, it was most probable that if he took refuge with the frontier tribes his reign and his life would be very short; and it was a hundred chances to one that the captives would not be murdered; at any rate, they were anxious to run the risk. After repeating explicitly that the expedition would leave the country as soon as ever the captives were recovered, he defended himself from the charge of having misled the House, appealed to the many proofs of public sympathy with his proceedings, and concluded by an emphatic declaration that the course the Government had taken, though least agreeable to their personal convenience, and, in fact, increasing their responsibility, most effectually discharged their duty to Parliament.

Mr. HORSMAN repeated Mr. Lowe's charge, and with frequent reference to the Blue-book, maintained that it showed Lord Stanley to have made up his mind and the departments to be busily engaged in preparations for the expedition on July 25, when Lord Stanley led the House to believe that the matter was open.

Admitting that it was impossible now to refuse the vote, he maintained that the Government had violated the prerogative of Parliament, illustrating his contention by a reference to the debate on the Persian war, and urged Parliament to mark its sense of this dereliction of duty.

After some brief criticisms and questions from Mr. AYTOUN, Captain VIVIAN, and Sir H. VERNY,

Mr. OSBORNE, disclaiming all party motives, attacked, in his usual caustic vein, the "Palmerstonian policy of intervention," and the fear of losing our prestige, which were the original causes of our difficulty, and the proceedings of Consuls Plowden and Cameron, who, by mixing themselves up with the internal affairs of Abyssinia, had brought on this war. He thought that the Government, having made up their minds on the 31st of July that force was necessary, ought to have told the House at once, however inconvenient it might be to those members who had gone away. He strenuously objected, too, to charging any part of the expenses on the Indian Exchequer.

Mr. LAYARD travelled at great length into the history of our connection with Abyssinia, defending the conduct of former Governments in the nomination of consuls to Abyssinia, of Lord Russell and of himself in sending Mr. Rassam's mission, and asserting that both Consul Plowden and Consul Cameron had violated their express instructions in mixing themselves up with the internal affairs of Abyssinia. He approved unreservedly the despatch of the expedition, having regard both to the recovery of the captives and the maintenance of our prestige, on the importance of which last consideration he dwelt with great emphasis.

Sir S. NORTHGOTE defended Lord Stanley against Mr. Horsman's charge of having deceived the House in his speech of the 25th of July. Lord Stanley in that speech, he maintained, distinctly reserved to the Government the fullest liberty to resort to force, giving full notice that such a policy was under consideration; and there was ample opportunity between that and the end of the session for any member who objected to leave such a discretion to the Government to make a motion to that effect. At that time the Government did not expect an answer to the ultimatum until the middle of September, and were under the impression that an expedition could not be despatched until the middle of January, though they were exceedingly anxious to be in such a state of preparation that this year would not be lost. He traced minutely (giving the precise dates) the various stages of opinion through which the Government had passed before arriving at the decision to use force. Three days after Lord Stanley's speech, when they were undecided, the telegram was received from Bombay promising that the expedition could be ready this year if authority were given to commence the collection of transport immediately, and on the 13th of August the rejection of the ultimatum by King Theodore and a minute from Sir R. Napier showing the practicability of the expedition were received. Sir R. Napier had decided not to send his peremptory demand to the King until the advanced force was in the field; and, in fact, he would not receive it until between the 5th and 10th of November, so that we could not actually be said yet to be at war with Abyssinia.

Colonel SYKES insisted that the war was owing to the disobedience of the Consuls Plowden and Cameron; and, while admitting that the House was compelled to "accept the situation," accused the Government of breaking the law in employing Indian troops, or, at least, in taking their pay out of the Indian revenue.

Mr. GLADSTONE (who rose just about midnight) admitted that, though there might have been some errors of judgment, he was not on the whole disposed to join in any censure upon them. Speaking generally, they appeared to have acted with a proper regard for the honour of the country and the safety of our envoys, combined with a laudable desire for peace; nor did any public advantage seem likely to arise from minute military criticisms of an expedition, the success of which all must desire. On the question of constitutional privilege, he urged that when they had decided on the 14th of August to send an expedition they ought to have informed Parliament of it at once, and to have asked for a vote, however inconvenient it might have been to individual members. He argued that the clause of the Act of 1858 prohibiting the charge on the Indian revenues on account of the Indian troops employed, had not been obeyed, and took serious objection to Mr. Disraeli's assertion that no money had been spent which had not been voted by Parliament, pointing out that it involved a grave infraction of the financial privileges of the House of Commons.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER briefly replied, maintaining that, though it might have been preferable to communicate to the House of Commons immediately, the course the Government had taken was most convenient to members, and strictly in accordance with the Constitution. He insisted that the Treasury had the power to use for the expedition the military supplies already voted, though he admitted that it ought only to be done under extraordinary circumstances.

The vote was then agreed to.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PRIZE MONEY.—The prize roll of her Majesty's 42nd Foot for Banda Kirwee have been received, together with the prize rolls for Jhansi, and the notices of distribution will appear in an early Gazette.

A MISSING STEAMER.—The Thunder, a steamer which left Hong Kong in October for Calcutta, had not arrived there on the 20th of November, and it is feared she is lost. She had on board a large amount of specie, which has been insured at Lloyd's at 7s. 6d. per cent., and a declaration of upwards of £50,000 has already been made on the policy. This is another instance of the premium on specie having sunk below a rate commensurate with the risk.

CALCUTTA AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.—In submitting to the proprietors the accounts for the half-year ending 30th June last, the directors regret to have again to report a deficiency in the revenue receipts to cover the working expenses of £1,107. 15s. 9d. Whilst the gross traffic of the half-year is less than it was in the corresponding period of 1866, the falling off is entirely owing to the temporary absence of shipping since the accident to the screw pile jetty belonging to the railway, the traffic in local goods and passengers having considerably increased.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on Friday at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street; Mr. J. F. Leith in the chair. The report was taken as read. The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, congratulated the proprietors on the increased traffic which had enabled them to earn a net receipt for the past half-year equivalent to 5 per cent. per annum on the capital expended on the open line, including rolling stock. Resolutions were passed re-electing Mr. Leith, one of the retiring directors, and electing Colonel Sim a director, in the room of Major-general Beadle, who retired from the board in consequence of being obliged to proceed to India. Mr. Cheshire, the retiring auditor, was also re-elected.

EAST INDIA IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The report of the directors to the meeting on the 30th inst. has been issued. It states that the progress made by the company's staff, upon the main works and upon the dis-tributory channels during the last six months has been very satisfactory, although, in consequence of the effects of the late famine in Orissa, the supply of labour has been more limited than was anticipated. The expectation of an early extension of irrigation and of traffic returns has lately received strong confirmation. The directors announce the resignation, in July last, of their late chief engineer, Colonel Rundall, at the request of the Government of India, who offered to him the appointment of chief engineer of irrigation for Bengal, and joint secretary to the Government of that Presidency. They have appointed as provisional chief engineer, Mr. Levinge, who acted as assistant chief engineer under Colonel Rundall. In consequence of an offer made by the Government of India to the company to advance upon favourable terms during the current year as much money as could be expended upon the works described in the directors' twelfth report, authority was given to the directors to borrow from that Government to the full extent authorised by the company's Act of Parliament, viz., £320,000. By the end of the present year about £120,000 will have been received and expended by the company under this authority; and as the limit of time named by the Governor-General of India in Council will then have been reached, a new loan arrangement will be necessary.

MILITARY ITEMS.—7th Dragoon Guards: The regiment arrived at Portsmouth on Friday last in H.M.S. Crocodile, having been ten years and one month away from England. The following officers who sailed with the headquarters for India in October, 1857, have now returned with them:—Colonel C. W. Thompson, Captains Armstrong and M'Adam, Lieutenant and Adjutant Scotland, and Quartermaster Gillam. 19th Regiment: Ensigns Langford and Carter, of the 1st battalion, have sailed for India, via the Cape, to join head-quarters. 77th Regiment: Captain Waters has sailed for India, via the Cape, to join head-quarters. 79th Highlanders: Ensigns Brown and Daltzell have sailed for India, via the Cape, to join head-quarters. 92nd Highlanders: Major Macbean is on leave till the embarkation of the regiment for India in January. Lieutenant W. P. Blandy has sailed for India, via the Cape, to join head-quarters.

THE WRECK OF THE ABYSSINIAN TRANSPORT "BOSPHORUS."—The statement that we published a few days since, to the effect that the steam transport Bosphorus had foundered in Algoa Bay, has been fully confirmed, and the hopes then entertained as to the safety of the crew have not been realised, as no less than forty-five people have perished with the vessel. A brief telegram from Galle, dated November 16, merely states that when the Bosphorus was lost forty-five of those on board were drowned, but that Captain Alexander was saved. The scene of the wreck of the Bosphorus was twenty-one miles from Port Elizabeth, which lies to the west of Algoa Bay, and it is described as the best sheltered anchoring ground on the coast for 600 miles from Capetown. The ill-fated vessel was one of the fleet of steam transports which were taken up at Liverpool for the Abyssinian transport, and sailed from the Mersey for Bombay, via the Cape de Verdes and the Cape of Good Hope, on the 18th September last. She was almost new, having been constructed of iron at Glasgow in 1864. She was a screw steamer of 2,000 tons burden, and 256 horse-power, and was considered a remarkably fine vessel of her class.

STRANDING OF THE MAIL STEAMER "SURAT."—On Friday last the official inquiry instituted by the Board of Trade into the circumstances attending the stranding of the Surat, a mail steamer belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Packet Company, on a reef of rocks known as the Shab Kosdan, about two miles from Ras Sheeralee, in the Gulf of Suez, was resumed and concluded at the Greenwich Police Court, before Mr. Traill, and Captains Baker and Flight as nautical assessors. The Court found that the stranding of the vessel was caused by the default of the master; but considering the high character he bears, and the very efficient exertions rendered after the stranding of the ship, the Court trusted that the suspension of Captain Dunn's certificate for six calendar months would satisfy the requirements of the case.

ARRIVAL OF THE HEAVY INDIA AND CHINA MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Nov. 22.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Ripon, Captain Rogers, with the heavy portion of the above mails, arrived this afternoon. She brings eighty-two passengers, thirty-four packages specie, value £17,328. 17s. 7d.; also 3,091 packages of cargo, including 1,181 bales raw silk, value £110,000 sterling. The Ripon experienced from Alexandria to Malta strong north-westerly winds, with violent squalls of sand and rain; three days before reaching Gibraltar strong south-westerly winds, with furious squalls; across the Bay and up the Channel north-easterly winds, at times very strong. On the 8th she spoke the British barque Pharamona; 10th, steamer Tanjore; 12th, Ceylon; 14th, her Majesty's ship Serapis; and on the 21st the Pera, off Cape Ushant.

ARRIVAL OF THE HEAVY BOMBAY MAIL.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Nov. 26.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's steamship Tanjore, Captain G. S. Brooks, with the heavy portion of the above mails, arrived here this morning. She brought thirty-eight passengers, including Colonel W. Thompson, 7th Dragoon Guards; Colonel and Mrs. Briggs, Dr. Kane, Major Staples, Major and Mrs. Hawkins, &c.; and on freight £1,500 in specie, 2,780 sacks of wheat and sundries.

The earnings in the first quarter on 3,536½ miles, or 57½ miles less, was £1,503,060, or £113,818 more, the first quarter being the best of the year. In the first quarter the Scinde was above the Eastern Bengal line.

LIVES OF INDIAN OFFICERS,

BY JOHN WILLIAM KAYE,
Author of "The History of the War in Afghanistan," &c.

The Rev. HENRY MARTYN. Sir CHARLES METCALFE. Sir HENRY LAWRENCE.
Sir ALEXANDER BURNES. General JAMES NIELL.
Lord CORNWALLIS. Brig.-Gen. JOHN NICHOLSON.
Sir JOHN MALCOLM. Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY.
The Hon. MOUNTSTUART Major ELDRED POTTINGER.
ELPHINSTONE. Major D'ARCY TODD.
Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. . . . I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who made history. . . . and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. . . . I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and, by their own unaided exertions, carved their way to fame and fortune." J. W. KAYE.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATHENÆUM.
"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. . . . Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.
"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employé of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.
"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

ALEXANDER STRAHAN, 56, LUDGATE-HILL

Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

These exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured. As a Sedative, Nervotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed, with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "118 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 80,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE latest advices by the Bombay mail, which arrived last night, are—from Calcutta, November 8; Delhi, November 9; Madras, November 8; and Bombay, November 14.

Calcutta papers are necessarily full of the great cyclone, regarding which a brief telegram first reached England a month ago. In another page will be found some details of a disaster almost as terrible as the cyclone of 1864. It broke out on the night of Nov. 1, after a day or two of preliminary squalls. From about 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. of the next morning, the hurricane was at its height, dealing sad havoc throughout the city. Strong buildings unroofed; houses stripped of glass, blinds, verandahs, some even utterly wrecked; whole rows of native dwellings levelled with the ground; trees crashing down, walls falling on those beneath them, church steeples overthrown or badly hurt, men, horses, cattle, crushed in heaps, such are some of the main incidents in that dreadful night's work. Happily, the storm blew down the river, while the tide was coming up, and thus one deadly agent in the former cyclone, the storm-wave, was wanting to this. The shipping, therefore, though much knocked about, escaped with far less harm than the city itself and the neighbouring suburbs. But the amount of damage done on the whole was fearful, and the loss of life, as already reported, exceeds a thousand of both sexes, not to speak of many hundreds more or less badly hurt. The cyclone began from the north-east, and gradually blew all round the compass, until it died away in a westerly gale.

More than half of the reported loss of life occurred on the river, where hundreds of native boats of all sizes were sunk or destroyed. One ship only seems to have been quite wrecked, but two others were seriously and many more slightly damaged. Besides nearly 30,000 native huts destroyed, as many as 163 brick-built houses were reduced to the same condition. The telegraph line along the Ganges has been thrown down.

In view of the consequent distress and suffering, the Bengal Government was taking prompt measures of temporary relief. It had called for detailed reports from the districts affected. The Chamber of Commerce and the Famine Relief Committee had appealed for subscriptions, and the Lieutenant-Governor had promised to double the amounts thus obtainable.

The Englishman gives a horrible account of the state of a hospital in Amherst-street for sick Chowkeedars. Condemned by every medical man in Calcutta, it has still been used as an infirmary. The rains that accompanied the storm turned the mud floor of these wretched sheds into a simple bog, nearly two feet deep, into which the patients' beds were gradually sinking. Several of the patients had died during and after the storm from sheer exposure. Yet worse was the mortality in the Sealdah Hospital, where the rain and wind beat down on the hundreds of helpless sick until twenty-seven were found dead in the morning.

The departure of the Bengal Brigade for Abyssinia would not be delayed by the storm.

Colonel Fytche had been received at Mandalay with a magnificence never before known. On the 11th October he made his best bow to his Burmese Majesty, who insisted, it seems, on the Envoy's taking off his shoes. The Chief Commissioner is said to have once more stood upon his rights and dignity as an Englishman, but the King would not let him off, and Britain's plenipotentiary squatted shoeless before an insolent savage and a circle of grinning Burmese. Burman bazaar-talk has made merry with the discomfited Englishman, embellishing the plain facts in a style eminently grateful to Burman pride. The treaty was signed on the 25th October.

The suffering caused by the cyclone will take the place of the interest felt in the Orissa famine reports. The famine there is virtually over. From Balasore, Pooree, Cuttack—even from the districts round the Chilka Lake—the latest tidings were exceedingly hopeful. Everywhere good crops, or cheering promise of such, and a steady decrease in the number of poor relieved.

"Trouble," says the Friend of India, "is brewing in Turkistan." The negotiations between Bokhara and Russia have fallen through. The Ameer himself is plotting busily against the Russian Power. There is also a Dhoonganie revolt in Chinese Turkistan. Russia is acting vigorously in both directions, strengthening her forces alike in the Syr Daria and Western Siberia. Fort Vernoe is to become the base of possible movements against Chinese Turkistan. Russian officials are proposing to stop all trade between Russia and Bokhara, even if Bokharian merchants have to send their caravans round by Peshawar.

News from Yarkand is promising. According to Dr. Cayley, the road from Turkistan was opened again into Northern India. Yakoub Khush Bhegi is entire master of Yarkand and Khoten, rules vigorously, suppressing lawlessness and encouraging trade, so far as an Eastern ruler who keeps up heavy transit duties can be said to do so. Perhaps some coaxing on the part of the Indian Government, with the establishment of a mission in Yarkand, might quicken the Khan's intelligence and ensure the permanence of the new-born trade.

At Bombay progress was making in the despatch of troops and stores to Abyssinia. The Beloochies had sailed from Kurrachee by the 25th November, and a battery of Artillery was to follow the next day.

The Viceroy entered Lucknow punctually on the 9th November, after a two days' sojourn at Delhi. Three days afterwards he invested Maharajah Maun Singh with the order of the Star of India.

It is said that Mootizeem Meerza, a son of the late King of Delhi, has been captured at Nandair, near Hingolee, by a native officer acting on information supplied to Colonel Murray, Commandant of Hingolee.

Lieut.-General McCleverty, the new Commander-in-Chief at Madras, landed from the Candia on the evening of the 8th November. His arrival seemed to cause general delight. The usual ceremony of swearing in took place immediately afterwards.

The next mail from Calcutta will be due on the 12th inst.

The latest telegram from Alexandria informs us that Colonel Merewether had found good camping ground at Jaconda, with plenty of water, but forage scarce. In a letter from Colonel Merewether himself to Sir Stafford Northcote, we learn that the road from Zoola inland had been explored for forty-one miles, up to the neighbourhood of Sinafeh; but the telegraphic news is evidently of later date, for the Colonel mentions his design of going on to Jaconda or Teconda. Which is right? As his visit to this place had depended on the part to be taken by the ruler of Tigri, we may presume that Prince Kassai has openly sided with us.

We think we may congratulate the civil and military services of India on some approaching change for the better in the furlough rules. The Secretary for India has already written out to the Governor-General for information and advice on a question which has too long been left untouched.

THE HURRICANE.

(From the Englishman, Extra, Nov. 2.)

For weeks past the weather has been a foremost topic of conversation. The rains had apparently ceased, when Calcutta was astonished on Oct. 26 at a return of wet weather. During all last week rain seemed threatening, and on Thursday the threat began to be fulfilled. The sky on Friday was overcast and lowering, the pall of cloud was unusually low, and masses of scud were whirled swiftly away to leeward all day long. The gloom of the day was added to by frequent rain-squalls; the day, in fact, was just one of those for which November in England has acquired so unpleasant a reputation. As the day wore on the signs of bad weather increased. About three o'clock the barometer began to show signs of falling, and the wind came down in fiercer gusts. Matters remained in this state till dusk, when it was evident to the most careless that Calcutta was about to be visited by a storm, which would rival the now famous cyclone of Oct. 5, 1864. Men went home from office to hurry through dinner and prepare for the struggle, and, although some daring spirits went to the opera, they were the exception. At ten o'clock the fastenings of doors and windows began to be severely tasked, and the storm rushed over the city with a heavy murmurous roar, like a fierce surf beating on a shingle beach. This roar never lulled until daylight; but every few minutes it swelled up into a thunder of wind and rain, marking the approach of heavier swells. Up to half-past one the storm was content with rattling doors and windows furiously, but now it forced its way into the well-guarded dwellings of the European portion of the city, and tore off here a sash, here a venetian, here a door. The houses shook under the weight of the blows dealt them, and often and anxiously were the timepieces consulted to see how the night wore away. Soon after two, however, there was a sensible abatement of the storm, the gusts were as fierce as ever, but the intervals between them were longer. By half-past three the strength of the gale had greatly abated, and by four the hurricane had become a strong north-eastern gale, and people began to count up the damage they had sustained, and to hope for daybreak, to enable them to ascertain the losses of their neighbours. Few slept last night, and there are few who could wish to pass such another night, or to battle again with a gale which has wrought the city as much if not more injury than even the great cyclone.

THE RIVER.

The hurricane fortunately swept down the river instead of up. It thus had to battle with the tide, instead of bringing with it so dreaded an auxiliary as the storm-wave which in the cyclone did so much damage. Having only to contend against the wind, the ships in harbour, as a rule, were enabled to ride out the storm with far less injury and danger than might have been anticipated.

The steamer Orissa, which was to have left this morning, is a helpless wreck. She seems smashed, her masts are broken, her funnel broken and twisted, her bulwarks stove in, and she has gone down fortunately so near shore as to be on shore, rather than sunk. The Furness Abbey, in the middle of the river, is almost as badly off as the Orissa. The Nile at 1.30 A.M. dragged her anchors, having a number of cargo boats foul of her. Previous to this she had paid out a sufficient quantity of chain to enable her to weather the storm, but she and the India got foul of one another, and both sustained some damage. The tug steamer Sestos is on shore at Bagh Bazaar Canal, where she quite blocks the way to the river. Another steamer, with red funnels, has foundered off Cossipore. Close to Armenian Ghat the Jadel Curreen is on shore by the stern, and has lost her mizen-mast. The Arabia is also on shore near her. The P. and O. Company have lost their tender, the Howrah, and the police hulks have been unroofed.

The following is a list of the damage done to the shipping by the hurricane last night, as far as has at present been ascertained:—

Storm King.—Rails, bulwarks, and rudder a good deal damaged. Bowsprit sprung, jibboom and head gear carried away.

Steamer Orissa.—Almost a wreck off Colvin's Ghat.

Mary Ann Wilson.—On shore, bulwarks, stanchions, and deck injured, and bowsprit gone with jibboom.

City of Calcutta.—Damaged covering boards, stanchions, rails and bulwarks from fore to main rigging. Fore rigging carried away.

Flower of the Forest.—Quarters injured, bowsprit gone, and other slight damage.

Sarah and Emma.—Bulwarks, stanchions, steering apparatus injured.

India.—Trifling damage from collision.

Nile.—Dragged her anchors in the stream and came into collision with the India and Queen of Mersey; is a good deal damaged.

Dallan Tower.—Damage to boats is trifling.

Malabar.—Slightly injured from collision with Dallan Tower.

Queen of Mersey.—On shore off Eden-gardens.

Annie Frost and Emily Augusta.—Very slightly injured.

Genil.—Somewhat chafed, but no serious injury.

Michael Angelo.—At Saugor-roads, not since heard of.

Lake Leman.—Rails, stanchions, and waterways damaged.

Furness Abbey.—Upper plates, bulwarks, and main rail stove in, hawspeeps carried away, besides other small damage.

I. P. Whitney.—Anchored off Saugor on 1st, has not yet been reported.

Benvenue.—Has sustained very trifling damage.

Up-country steamer Delhi sunk; doubtful if she can be recovered.

The following ships are reported to us as having sustained no injury:—

Iron Crown, Durham, Winchester, Middlesex, Simla, Star of Albion, Knight Errant, Vernon, Tiverton, Howrah, Sir Henry Lawrence, Stanhope, Ajax, P. and O. steamers Lord Clyde, Rachel, Remington, Squando, Queen of England, Salisbury, S.S. Oriental, S.S. Clan Alpine, Tantalou Castle, Harold, Ellen Stuart, Gladstone.

St. Lawrence.—Has sustained slight damage from collision.

Thomas Wood.—Had put back from a previous collision, lost mainmast by the board, and sprung foremast, with other damage.

City of Nankin.—Two iron plates started on port quarter. Chain-plates all gone, and other slight damage to stanchions, rail, bulwarks, &c.

Garnet.—Was ashore on mud for three hours, and got off without serious damage. She was chafed, however, a good deal by collision.

Barque Sterling.—Lost main yards, and was aground for a short time without sustaining injury.

Queen of India.—Lost several spars, damaged rigging, and chafed hull.

Bertha.—Lost her bowsprit.

The St. Philbert, Mille Tonnes, and Delphine Melannie, have sustained a good deal of injury; particulars as yet not ascertained.

Irvine, St. Paul, Souvenance, Nestor.—Slightly damaged.

Marian.—Bulwarks crushed in, with other minor damages.

William Fairbairn.—Sustained but unimportant injury, except part of her bulwarks being knocked in by collision.

(Sd.) GLADSTONE WYLLIE CO.

AGENTS TO LLOYDS.

Calcutta, 2nd November, 1867.

We also learn that the Euphrates carried away her moorings at 12.5 last night, and was on shore for four-and-a-half hours. She was got off, but is much strained from bumping. The damage sustained is not as yet known, but she does not leak much. Her boats were stove in, and the saloon deluged with water. We understand that she will not be able to take the troops at the time fixed, and must come here to be refitted. It is reported that had the Euphrates gone a few hundred yards in another direction, she would have sunk and disappeared on Diamond Quick-sands.

THE TOWN.

Garden Reach has been robbed of nearly all the trees spared by the cyclone, a remark which applies generally to the city; the roads are strewn with dead crows, and opposite No. 8 an enormous tree has fallen, and completely blocked up the road.

Reaching the Strand, the Bank of Bengal has lost many shades, and has a good deal of glass broken. The Bengal office has also suffered severely, and, in fact, the ravages of the storm are apparent on every house along the road. At Aheeretollah Ghat several sheds have been gutted, and the engine house has been literally wrecked. Several lives have been lost here. In the native quarter of the town scarcely a hut is standing; several pukka houses have fallen, and at three o'clock the return of natives killed was given at:—

Northern Division ...	63
Middle do. ...	18
Southern do. ...	18
Total ...	99

In the European portion of this city window-frames, venetians, balustrades, and doors have been blown away in nearly every house. Trees have been overthrown in all directions, and the Maidan was converted into a shallow lake. The storm was particularly hard upon our amusements. The Opera got through three acts, but then the gale found its way into the house, and put audience and actors to an ignominious flight. The Opera House has not suffered very severely; a portion of the roof has disappeared, the trappings have been spoilt by the rain, and a few scenes have been injured. Turning to the Maidan, Lewis's Theatre presented at daylight the miserable spectacle of a confused heap of wood and iron, in the midst of scattered sheets of corrugated iron, amongst which several forlorn individuals were seeking after their properties. Four men were sleeping on the stage at the time the theatre collapsed, and fortunately escaped unhurt. The enterprising proprietor has begun to re-erect the structure, which he promises to have ready by Monday week. The Japanese, however, preserving their ill-fortune, had their mats blown all over plain, and their tent carried into the tank at the end of Lindsay-street. At the corner of Hoomayoon-place there was a singular instance of the terrific power of the wind; a sheet of corrugated iron, blown apparently from the roof of the stables of the Calcutta Club, was bent round the corner of the compound wall adjoining the street, and fixed there so firmly as to be moved with difficulty.

In Jaun Bazaar a syce was killed alongside his horse, which was also killed. A little farther west, two persons were crushed; one was killed on the spot, and the other was removed to the hospital. At the back of Rasmoney Dossee's house a mother and daughter were overwhelmed in the fall of their house. The mother died, but the daughter was removed, dangerously wounded, to the hospital. At the back of Hunter and Co.'s stables in Dhurrum-tollah a European woman was killed by the falling of a wall.

No less than 300 gas-lights were blown out, but no damage was done to the Gas-works, and the town will this evening be lighted as usual. Government House suffered in its doors and windows and the railing on its dome; the London had its board and awning blown away; the Great Eastern and Spence's have suffered about equally. Mountain's Hotel has lost its side verandah, and has had several windows blown in. The new Post-office has lost the skeleton of its dome; one of the iron ribs is hanging in a most dangerous position over the parapet. Kidderpore Church has lost its steeple, and the Catholic Church in Middleton Row has been seriously injured. St. James's Church, too, has lost its weather-cock, and the roof of the Municipality workshops at Entally has been blown off into the middle of the road, where the coolies and palkeewallahs have to accomplish the difficult feat of climbing over it.

THE FORT.

In the Fort several of the few trees left after the cyclone of 1864 are thrown down, lying in different directions, chiefly, however, north-west to south-east. The pinnacles on the north-east side of the church are all down. They fell on the outer roof and crushed it in. The pinnacle at the west or rather north-west is also down, and the west (N.W.) window blown completely in. The inner roof remains, and except that a quantity of water has poured into the church, and that the vaulting has been strained, little damage is done to the interior.

Sheets of corrugated iron from the roof lie scattered about, some at a distance of 100 yards on the top of the Staff Barracks. A gharrie left without a horse under the north porch of the church was driven twenty or thirty yards by the wind, and brought up by the shaft striking in soft ground. Shutters and sun-sheds lie scattered about in all directions, but we have heard of no greater damage than that mentioned at present.

THE SUBURBS.

At Sealdah the wind unroofed the station, a feat which even the cyclone failed to accomplish, and drove several carriages off the line. It next attacked the old Sealdah Market, the present Pauper Hospital, and all through the long and bitter night it poured its fury, and hurled clouds of cold and piercing rain over a miserable crowd of 369 sick. The sheds for cooking, &c., attached to this hospital were carried away, and the appearance it presented in the morning was forlorn and wretched beyond conception. From Alipore we hear of five deaths. From Ballygunge there is a report that a pukka house has fallen, and killed a European and his wife. From Entally 31 deaths were reported. All through the suburbs the roads are lined with the well-known, unwieldy, metal-clamped, and low strong boxes in which natives delight, serving on the present occasion as a drying-ground for the wreck of their personal effects.

At Dum-Dum the "great tree" has been overthrown. The Racket-court has been blown down, and the roads are strewn with the dead bodies of cattle and horses. There has also been, we fear, great loss of life amongst the natives.

At Barrackpore the damage done has been even greater than at Dum-Dum or Cossipore.

At Howrah the yards of Messrs. Solague and McLardy have suffered severely, and several goods' sheds have been unroofed. The railway jetties are, however, safe, and the ferry steamers have sustained but little damage. We may here mention that the telegraph wires are reported "down" as far as Burdwan.

GENERAL.

As far as we can learn, the rice crop has not suffered. We have received several communications, giving the readings of the barometer during the gale. In our own office it went down to 28.75, and commenced to rise at about 2.45 A.M. We give the substance of what has reached us.

Yesterday morning the telegraphic report from Saugor showed that the barometer there was falling rapidly. The report from Cuttack showed the same. Upon receipt of these telegrams, Mr. Blandford telegraphed to Saugor for additional observations at half-past twelve. The answer was, that the barometer showed a continued fall, and that the wind was increasing in violence. The latest report from Saugor was at 19 hours, when the barometer unroofed stood at 29.42, the reduced observations showing 29.305; the wind was then blowing violently from the north-east; an attempt was made to get another report from Saugor at 20 hours, but the assistant reported that it was very difficult to reach the barometer, and in a few minutes afterwards (at eight P.M.) the line stopped working altogether. Mr. Blanford states that in all probability the storm formed in the north of the Bay, and the centre passed at no great distance to the eastward of Calcutta, proceeding in a nearly northerly direction. The lowest barometrical record at the Surveyor General's office was at three A.M. on Saturday morning, when it stood at 28 deg. 6 min. No reports have been received as to the pressure of the wind, as the anemometer was blown away at two A.M. Observations were, however, taken on board the Durham.

The following are the readings supplied by a scientific friend:—

5 P.M.—29.90 N.E.	12 P.M.—29.00
6½ P.M.—29.70	12½ P.M.—28.90
10 P.M.—29.40	1 P.M.—28.80
1.20 P.M.—28.70 E.	4 P.M.—29.20
2 P.M.—28.70	6 P.M.—29.60 S.
2.30 P.M.—28.80	8 P.M.—29.80 S.W.

At St. Xavier's College the greatest care was manifested in recording the variations of the storm, as will be seen from the subjoined remarks of the Rev. E. Lafont:—

"From 6 A.M. yesterday I remarked that the barometer sank so rapidly that the daily atmospheric tide, usually so regular in the tropics, was scarcely, if at all discernible. I went over to the Surveyor-General's office in the course of the forenoon to look at the state of the instruments there. Baboo Gopeenauth Sen drew my attention to the fact that the state of the barometer was almost the same as it was just before the great cyclone of 1864.

"Towards 7 P.M. it was evident to me that a hurricane was coming on. I therefore made up my mind to sit up the whole night and watch the barometer closely. It was very interesting to see how sharply the instrument varied with each violent gust of wind—variations which could easily be followed even by a casual glance of the naked eye at the mercurial column. Generally each gust instantly produced a slight but very discernible rise, which was as quickly followed by a depression. Below you will find a table of the variations which I observed in my standard barometer on the Fortin system. A second and equally good instrument was in perfect harmony with the former. But I was not a little surprised to find that a third instrument (an Aneroid barometer) remained perfectly stationary during the whole night, and yet the same appears generally very susceptible of ordinary variations. I should very much wish to know if any owners of this kind of instrument can bear me out in my remark; these metallic barometers having been sanctioned for the use of the French Imperial Navy."

Just as we had written thus far, we received the notification given below from the Post-office:—

Mails per steamer Meinam will be closed at 11 A.M. to-morrow, instead of this even at 6 P.M., as previously notified.

W. H. MCGOWAN, Post Master of Calcutta.
 Calcutta Post-office, 2nd November, 1867.

Such is, in a brief and hasty manner, the account of the great storm of 1st November, 1867. Unlike the cyclone of 1864, it gave us a long warning, and yet we could scarcely have been prepared for the violence with which it raged when at its height. It appears from the Telegraph Gazette to have swept over a line between Purneah and Saugor Island. We wait with anxiety to receive accounts of the shipping in the river, or at its mouth.

Nov. 4.—The River Police report that 622 lives have been lost on the river alone. Two Madras sloops, 16 cargo-boats belonging to the port, 384 up-country cargo-boats, and 37 dinghies are known to have been destroyed. More than half of the up-country boats were laden with jute and grain.

The suburban police officers have received reports of the loss of 103 lives in the Chitpore Division, 107 in Entally, and 35 at Kidderpore, whilst not less than between seven and eight thousand huts have been blown down in the Chitpore Division alone.

At the Bow Bazaar thannah reports have been received of the loss of 24 lives. At the Park-street thannah nineteen lives are reported as lost, and eight brick-built houses and 524 huts are destroyed. In fact, every building in the Park-street Division was more or less damaged. The compound of the thannah was filled with water to the depth of upwards of a foot.

The storm has been particularly disastrous at Howrah.

The loss of life in the Howrah section has been small comparatively with the extent of damage done, only ten people being killed, while it is reported that upwards of 3,000 huts are either entirely blown down, or nearly so, along the line from Seebpore to Goosery. In the Golabarree section the deaths are said to be about as numerous.

The damage to the Presidency Jail consists of three large breaches in the north wall, and one in the south wall, besides a few windows and venetians blown down. No lives were lost, nor was any person injured.

The old Opera House in Tivoli Gardens has been levelled with the ground, and entire native villages along the Theatre-road destroyed.

A storm-wave passed over Port Canning about 5½ feet high. The greater portion of the ballast of the rail is carried away as far as Bursa, 3 miles. The station and a goods shed are blown down. Only the front cylinders of the railway jetty are left. Two wooden jetties are gone. The sea has broken through into the dock by the neglected part of the embankment of the Bydiadhurree. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton and their grown-up son were buried in the ruins of the station, and it is impossible to search for their remains at present for want of labour. Five natives are reported killed in the station, but no other Europeans are known to have been killed at present. Two Chinamen and one mistry were washed away, and it is supposed that numbers of others have been drowned. Every native hut is destroyed, and the people are starving for want of rice and water. Numbers are leaving for Calcutta, and numbers from the outstations are flocking into Canning. The Port Canning Company have ordered 200 maunds of rice to be sent to the sufferers, but want of water is what the natives are at present suffering from more particularly.

The Government hulk Tubal Cain rode the gale out well, but the mooring boat Benares was sunk beside her by the rolling up of the storm-wave; her crew, consisting of six Europeans, escaped by scrambling up the side of the Tubal Cain, but two natives were drowned.

The Busheer, which left for Burmah on Friday afternoon, anchored safely at Budge-Budge, and received no damage beyond the loss of one boat. The lowest readings of the instruments on board her were at one P.M., when the storm was most severe, aneroid, 29.14; barometer, 28.91; sympiesometer, 29.09.

It was remarked that strong flashes of light accompanied several of the heaviest gusts, similar to those noticed in typhoons in the China seas, but unaccompanied by thunder, apparently indicating the presence of powerful electric influence in the atmosphere.

Nov 5.—On Sunday there were no less than 64 admissions into the Sealdah Pauper Hospital, or about 150 per cent. more than the average daily rate of admission. At this hospital the neglect of the Government or municipality to reduce the so-called openings for ventilation resulted in terrible disaster. The sick were drenched with the rain which ran riot in the immense open building, and in the morning 27 dead offered a sickening comment on the influence of red-tape, even in the metropolis. Fortunately, the roof, although fiercely shaken, withstood the wind, or with nearly 400 helpless sick beneath it, there would have been such a catastrophe as would have put all other horrors of the storm in the shade.

One other hospital has also suffered severely. Any one who has seen the sheds in Amherst-street would think of applying them to every purpose but that of a hospital. They have been condemned by, we believe, every medical man in Calcutta, and yet routine and red-tape have converted them into a hospital for sick chowkedars. So great was the misery endured by the patients here that three succumbed to it on Friday night, and several others were reduced to a most pitiable condition. The floors of these dens are of mud, and as the place is surrounded at no great distance by tanks and lies low, the whole neighbourhood on Saturday morning was under water to a depth of nearly two feet. The floors became bogs, and sank nearly a foot, and yesterday afternoon, when our reporter visited the hospital, he was able to thrust his walking stick into the floors for a depth of at least two feet. The beds of the patients were literally bogged, sinking in the mud up to the frame-work, and one chillumchee that happened to fall into the swamp disappeared, and has not yet been recovered. The hurricane will probably convince the municipality and the Government, if it be possible, that such places as the sheds in Amherst-street are not to be converted into hospitals, which of necessity are no better than lazar-houses. The out-houses of the hospital have been of course blown down, and what is of more importance, one year's supply of medicines has also been destroyed.

A small steamer, we are informed, left for Diamond Harbour at 6 A.M., on Saturday, to assist the Euphrates. Another left on Sunday for the purpose of repairing the marks to the James and Mary. A third left yesterday morning, to assist any distressed vessels at the mouth of the river.

From Barrackpore we learn that the cavalry lines have been blown down, and in different parts of the station many animals have been killed. The stables of Mr. W. W. fell upon his well-known stud, but the horses were fortunately got out of the debris uninjured. The station has, as a rule, suffered most severely.

From Port Canning we have received accounts more in detail. The distress amongst the natives both here and at Ellengunge, across the Mutlah, is described as being most severe. Fresh water is urgently required. The Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway, as our readers know, has been thrown out of working order from Buarah onwards, or for a distance of three miles from Canning. All along the line the trucks and engines were overthrown where they stood, but from Buarah the metal of the line has been washed away. It may have some bearing, perhaps on the question of a storm-wave proceeding from the Bay of Bengal to note that the metal has been washed away on the north side of the line only. The khoa along the south side is, comparatively speaking, uninjured. If, therefore, there were a storm-wave, it must have come from the Bidiadhurree.

The Bidiadhurree side of the town presents the worst evidence of the force of the storm. The embankment has given way, and the water of the creek, lifted up and hurled forward by a fierce north east wind, has done a very considerable amount of damage.

For some time past the Port Canning Company, which does not possess the right of the Bidiadhurree foreshore, have been urging Government to take measures to check, or prevent, the eroding action going on to the north-east of their great boat-dock. The negligence of the authorities has, however, resulted in the flooding of the town, a misfortune which might have been rendered exceedingly improbable, if not impossible, in this direction.

Another unfortunate consequence of the storm has been the salting of all the tanks by the storm-wave; this has reduced the coolies to great extremities. There are about 3,000 coolies at Canning, and these all found their way into the Bazaar, where they passed the night, some in the different rooms, some on the roof. Their sufferings from the cold and rain were dreadful, but fortunately few were killed, not more we hear than eight or ten. The Cutchery has also suffered, one wing having been blown down. The station is covered with the dead bodies of cattle, and unless immediate measures be taken for their removal, the consequences will be serious.

Returning to Calcutta and its suburbs, we find the suburban municipality have, with a great show of energy, called a meeting for Thursday next, six days after the storm, to consider whether any relief measures are called for in the suburbs. But even then they will have beaten the town.

HOOGLY.

Nov. 6.—At Hooghly the storm began about 9 P.M. on Friday evening, and increased rapidly in violence until 12 P.M. It reached its height at 2 A.M., and then gradually decreased until 5 A.M. At daylight the station seemed robbed of its trees; the two principal roads, that to the railway and that to the French settlement, were blocked up, but since the storm the energy displayed in clearing away the wreck after the cyclone of October, 1864, seems to have been absent. All over the station the fruit trees have suffered severely; huts have been blown down in clusters, and the lower classes of natives reduced to great straits. The Collectorate has suffered considerable damage, as have several private houses. The college, hospital, officers' quarters, and house of the commanding officer have suffered but slightly. The barracks are uninjured.

JESSORE.

A native correspondent at Jessore, writing on the 3rd Nov., sends us the following:—

Jessore has been swept by the terrible cyclone, unprecedented in the history of this little station. From the evening of the 20th October to 11 P.M. of 1st November, it rained heavily. At half-past eleven, a burning brilliant cloud was first observed in the north-east corner of the station. All thought at first that it was a fire, but it was not so; for the storm soon began, and changed its position, i.e., from north to east, to south, to west—to north-west, whence in the morning it disappeared. It was not a cloud, for clouds were distinctly seen running fast below it. When it was in the north-east, several houses at Jhoonjhoonpoor (a small village north-east of the station) were burnt; when it was in the north-west fire set into some of the houses at Poorono Kusalea (a village north-west of this station); similarly to some houses in another village in the east. I have yet received no news from south and west. The fires may have been accidental, but the brilliant flame which guided the course and direction of the great cyclone deserves inquiry. The spiritualists here attribute it to supernatural agency, but let the materialists, or the so-called scientific world, explain the phenomenon! It was not a delusion, for it was observed by the majority of the residents. I write you to know this, for you have many literary and scientific readers who, I hope, will kindly come forward and explain to us (ignorant men) the mystery of this mysterious flame!

We have also received a statement of the casualties ascertained by the police to have occurred in the city on the night of the storm:—

Men, 49; women, 48; children, 12; brick houses, 101; tiled huts, 2,388.

SUBURBS.—Men, 103; women, 148; children, 89; brick houses, 62; tiled huts, 1,745; thatched huts, 25,148.

RIVER.—Men, 618; women, 1; children, 8; ferry steamers sunk, 2; cargo boats, 67; Madras sloops, 15; up-country boats, 366; green boats, 4; dinghees, 84.

Of the up-country boats 159 sunk on the Goosery Sands, and the remainder along the river from Baugh Bazaar to Hastings. In addition to the boats above enumerated eighty-two country boats were sunk in the Circular Canal. The total loss of life reported is:—

Men, 770; women, 192; children, 54; total, 1,016.

Up to the time of our going to press, the sum collected for the Cyclone Relief Fund amounted to Rs. 9,875.—Englishman, Nov. 8.

ARRIVAL OF THE HEAVY INDIA AND CHINA MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Dec. 3.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Sumatra, with the heavy portion of the above mails, arrived this day. She brings eighty-three passengers and 3,482 packages of cargo, including 2,058 bales of raw silk, value £190,000. She experienced southerly winds across the Bay of Biscay, and north-easterly gales up Channel. Off Cape Finisterre she lost a man overboard, who was blown from aloft during a gale.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL STEWART.—None but very ignorant or prejudiced criticism would call in question the sound discretion which has placed Brigadier-General Donald Stewart at the head of the Bengal portion of the Abyssinian expedition. Colonel Stewart was for many years the smartest regimental adjutant in the Bengal army, at a time when that force had reached its highest discipline. No officer who ever met the old 9th Regiment Bengal Infantry will question this fact. And Donald Stewart was also more than the simple adjutant, carrying out the orders of his superior. His intelligence, through mastery of a soldier's duties and character, made him the virtual commandant as well as the adjutant of the 9th Regiment, and this, too, as a subaltern. When the outburst of 1857 had well nigh swept away every vestige of our power to the north-west, Captain Stewart galloped from Agra to Delhi, through a country in open insurrection, to share in the dangers and the glories of that struggle which was to determine our prestige, if not our fate, in India. Recognised as his talents had been for several years by army head-quarters, Captain Stewart was at once placed in the Adjutant General's department, in which he has continued to serve down to the present time, including the siege of Delhi, capture of Lucknow, and subsequent campaign. His abilities were fully recognised by Sir Hugh Rose, and had the wish of the Commander-in-Chief been complied with, Colonel Stewart would have been nominated Adjutant-General of the army. That Sir William Mansfield entertains views no less flattering is sufficiently established by his selection for the command of the Bengal brigade. The same sterling qualities which made the reputation of the regimental adjutant have raised Donald Stewart to the honourable position he now occupies. Without interest, and of the highest independence, his career is one every officer should lay to heart, as demonstrating how much unswerving devotion to duty, evinced in the field and cantonment, may accomplish.—Friend of India, Oct. 24.

INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF PRISONS N.W.P.—We hear on good authority that the Governor-General in Council has decided on reducing the pay of the Inspector-General of Prisons, North-West Provinces, to Rs. 1,500 per mensem, on the resignation of the present incumbent. The salary attached to the appointment at present is Rs. 1,800.—Pioneer, Oct. 28.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

FRIDAY, December 6, 1867.

THE NEW MAIL SERVICE TO BOMBAY.

IN a later page will be found a brief report of a discussion in the House of Commons, last Friday, on the new contract for the India and China mails. If the motion for affirming that contract was easily carried, the debate itself was all but monopolised by speakers adverse to the Ministerial scheme. Mr. Ayrton began by tearing it to pieces, and the shreds were handled with small courtesy by those who followed him. Even Mr. Samuda qualified his general approval by an occasional tug at the tattered remnants. To hear all the cruel things spoken against it, one would have thought, observed Mr. Hunt, the Ministerial spokesman, that they had been said by persons interested in the Indian trade. The Peninsula and Oriental Company had had an unfair start. Advertisements for fresh tenders had been issued on such terms as to preclude all chance of fair competition. The interval allowed was much too short. The rate of speed specified in the contract was absurdly low. Nothing had been done with regard to the Brindisi route. The virtual partnership between the company and the Government was onesided in fact, and wrong in principle. The yearly payment was extravagantly large, and the duration of the contract much too long. A weekly service to Bombay was a premature undertaking, in view of the incomplete state of the railway from Bombay to Calcutta. No notice had been given touching the Australian service. No proper steps had been taken to develop the services of the Messageries Imperiales. Everything, in short, had been done the wrong way, and the Government had left undone the things which it ought to have done.

After so terrible a list of blunders it is soothing to learn from Mr. Hunt's reply, that "the persons mainly interested were perfectly satisfied with the arrangements of the Government." On the whole we are inclined to agree with those persons. A weekly mail to Bombay is of itself an immense boon to all who have any kind of dealings with India. Of the two, no English statesman could hesitate to choose between an English and a foreign company in a matter of more than commercial moment. More time might perhaps have been given for rival tenders; but then the Peninsula and Oriental was already in the field, and by right of past services had clearly the first claim. The difference between £230,000 and £400,000 may seem at first sight too much of a good thing for the company; but Mr. Scudamore has brains and experience enough to assure the nation against real loss from a bargain which, as Mr. Samuda owned, includes "a very large amount of additional service," upwards of three hundred thousand miles; besides allowing for the greatly increased price of coals. If a contract for twelve years seems over long, we must remember that for a term of six years the company refused to take less than £500,000 a year.

On the question of speed opinions will differ. An average of ten miles an hour on the English, and nine and a-half on the Indian side of Suez, does in these days sound rather slow. But a higher speed would entail larger vessels, greater consumption of coal, and perhaps greater risk of losses from shipwreck or other misadventure. And, after all, ten miles an hour is a good average rate in all weathers—a rate which ought to ensure regularity of arrival within a few hours of the time appointed; and the company, moreover, are bribed to quicken their passages by the promise of £25 for each day saved. With ships of 2,500 tons burden an average rate of twelve miles, or even knots, an hour might easily be attained; but the cost of building those ships would be enormous—perhaps, just now, impossible—for a company barely able to balance income and outlay during the last twelvemonth. Some reference, however, to future improvements on that score might surely have been inserted in the new contract.

The Brindisi route is not forgotten, though the tender of an Italian company for that part of the line has not been accepted. By the terms of the contract express provision is made for the time when Brindisi shall displace Marseilles as a point of departure for Suez. Whenever that happens, the present terms will have to be readjusted by arbitration.

No one who considers the growing importance and virtual centrality of Bombay can reasonably demur to its selection as the Indian terminus of a weekly mail. Calcutta still retains her fortnightly service, and the railway across to Bombay will make up in great measure for the advantages assured to her Western rival. China, however, will hardly remain satisfied with her present allowance of a mail a month.

To some minds the weak point of the contract lies in the virtual partnership between the company and the Government. It seems like a renewal of the faulty legislation, which seeks to limit the profits of London gas companies. If the P. and O. Company make less than 6 per cent. the State will pay up the difference; if more than 8 per cent. the State will share the surplus. This arrangement will send up the company's shares, and at the same time secure for Government sufficient control over the company's proceedings; that is, if Government inspectors do their duty. Nor is the State responsible for more than a hundred thousand a year of contingent loss; and doubtless, after the first year or two, the chances will turn in favour of a balance to the good. But may not the partnership foster carelessness and extravagance on the company's side? Will Government control be carried out to the limits of strict supervision, without trenching on the company's lawful freedom? Would it not have been better to offer a fixed sum of so much a year for so much work done, guarded by fines for shortcomings and rewards for additional services; the company being left to make any profits it pleased, after meeting all requirements on the part of the State?

PARLIAMENT AND THE ABYSSINIAN WAR.

THE recent debates in Parliament on Abyssinian matters have resulted in a general approval of the measures taken by the present Ministry, in consequence of the special trouble bequeathed to it by the last. Criticism, of course, on particular points of conduct was not wanting, nor altogether unfounded. It was not quite without reason that Mr. Lowe led a chorus of complaints about the seeming change in Ministerial purposes, and the long delay in consulting Parliament on the course finally adopted. Nor was Colonel Sykes altogether in the wrong, when he protested against employing Indian troops without leave of Parliament, and still more against saddling the Indian revenue with any part of the cost for troops so employed. On the last-named subject Professor Fawcett afterwards spoke at greater length, with an earnestness worthy of the occasion, as judged from his own point of view. Taken by itself, the demand on the Indian Treasury for any part of the maintenance of troops borrowed from the Indian Government might seem a little unfair. But in this case India's share of the expense, small in itself, will be further lessened by the despatch of fresh regiments thither at England's cost; and as the Secretary for India reminded his hearers, we have to remember that England since the mutiny has borne all the expenses of the work formerly done by the Indian navy. There may be some force, too, in the argument urged both by Sir S. Northcote and Sir H. Rawlinson, that in view of the excitement caused in India by the progress of Russian arms, a little practice with Indian troops in Africa might tend to allay the excitement, by showing how easily the Indian Government could set a strong force in motion at short notice. How far this argument will meet native objections to being taxed for English purposes, is, of course, another question; and, on the whole, it might have been more politic to keep that side of the matter to ourselves.

There is no reckoning, indeed, with the perverseness of the native mind. Some of the speakers talked of maintaining India's prestige, of advancing in some way or other India's interests, by this organised raid into a country of which, as Colonel Sykes truly remarked, not one native in ten thousand has ever heard. It is more likely than not that native gossip, born in the bazaars and spread thence all over India, will see in the withdrawal of Indian garrisons a token of England's weakness rather than her strength. As for the maintenance of Indian prestige, the intelligent native will be sure to laugh at a notion so glaringly absurd. What earthly benefit can India reap from an enterprise designed to punish an African savage for wrong done to an English envoy? British prestige, if you like, is staked on this movement. It is England's honour, not India's, which the Bombay Contingent is going to fight for. It is England's interest, not India's, to see that no official agent of the English Government shall be outraged with impunity by a foreign ruler. It was not the clamour of British-Indian officers and journalists hungry for a new excitement, but the ever-loudening growls of the British Lion himself which brought about the landing of Sir R. Napier's soldiers in Annesley Bay. Sir S. Northcote's very avowal, that the expedition was undertaken with special reference to Indian opinion, proves through all its amazing assumptions the eminently English purport of the move itself. We have sent an army to Abyssinia because the people of India might else imagine—on the strength of reports brought back by some travelled Hajji—that England was too weak to exact vengeance for her envoy's wrongs. Therefore, argues the Indian Secretary, we are right in charging India with a part of the costs.

We may be right in so doing, but certainly not on such grounds. Why cannot our statesmen say out openly the simple truth? To talk of Indian prestige, of reading a wholesome lesson to our Indian subjects or their Russian neighbours, of giving our Indian troops some wholesome exercise, or, as Mr. Laing phrased it,

"keeping them in wind," is manifestly beside the mark. A little common frankness would do our statesmen more credit than all this sophistry. Sir H. Rawlinson struck the right note when he said that those Indian taxpayers who objected to pay towards the coming campaign would equally object to paying for troops in India. We want to punish Theodore for keeping our envoys in confinement. The Indian army was handy for our purpose, ready for the work, and likely, from local circumstances, to do it better than troops fresh from England. That army being maintained in the interests of British rule, we are entitled to use so much of it as the Indian Government can spare for the time being, on the one condition of replacing the troops borrowed with all practicable speed. The great bulk of our Indian subjects will not feel the difference either in respect of men subtracted or money disbursed. They will not have to pay a penny more; and the English Government will see that they lose nothing in the way of material safeguards for the general peace. We are borrowing a part of India's surplus garrison, in return for the calls she makes on the services of the Imperial navy. Of one thing only we should beware—not to go borrowing troops from India too often, or keep them away too long.

If there was any good in dwelling on past blunders, we might agree with those who criticised the sending out of Mr. Rassam with so poor a show of official surroundings. A more imposing embassy might, perhaps, have averted all recourse to arms. There is still more room for questioning the need of employing twelve or fourteen thousand on a mission easier of fulfilment by half that number. A little less fear of responsibility would doubtless have led Sir R. Napier to content himself with the smaller allowance. Perhaps it was hardly fair to leave the whole question of numbers so entirely on his hands. But his presence, combined with the larger equipment, ought to be a sure pledge of ultimate success; and that once achieved and our troops withdrawn in safety, we are not likely as a nation to haggle over a million more or less of actual costs. As Mr. Disraeli remarked, "It is well, perhaps, in an age like the present, that the country should feel there is something more precious than power or wealth."

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE INDUS RAILWAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Your correspondent, "Scindhee," satisfactorily disposed of the objections of Colonel Strachey to the immediate construction of the "missing link" on commercial grounds. He asserted, from personal knowledge and official data, that a traffic of 900,000 tons annually might be counted on, and demonstrated that there are no engineering difficulties on the route of the proposed Indus Valley Railway; but it is not on that ground, or because the line is likely to be a paying one to investors, that I would advocate its immediate construction; for if it abounded in engineering difficulties and promised to the investor no return on the capital embarked, the line must be made on strategic and political grounds.

It is the first and obvious duty of a Government, especially a despotic Government like ours in India, to provide roads for the protection of the State, and for the development of its resources.

And what road or railway in India is comparable to the Indus Railway, either as a ready and instant means of defence from aggression from without our border, or as a means of repressing commotion within? And what territory in India possesses a population comparable to that of the Punjab in courage and enterprise; and yet what country in India is so entirely landlocked, and cut off from communication with the seaboard?

And yet a gallant and meritorious officer is to be found—for such Colonel Strachey is—who prefers additional irrigation in Scinde to the defence of the empire!

The gallant Colonel is evidently a round man in a square hole in his new position as reporter on irrigation works. He is a real objector-general, and magnifies, without being aware of it, every little mouse he meets in his path into a lion. He is honesty itself, but full of crochets; and I never heard him accused of making a practical suggestion.

Colonel Strachey skims along the country, sees one side of the Indus, forms a bad opinion, and declares against both banks of the river, although one side is just as different from the other as ravines and torrents from canals and level plains.

But however ingenious he may be in objections, the question of the safety and wellbeing of an empire appears to have eluded his grasp. The steady advances of Russia towards our North-West frontier in India do not call certainly for our intervention in the wretched politics of Central Asia, but they counsel us to be prepared to meet her either as friend or foe; and in what way can we meet her with such effect in either capacity as by having a railway along the whole Valley of the Indus?

Colonel Strachey is not satisfied with advocating a gigantic scheme for irrigation, which is to cost from £0,000,000 to £14,000,000, and take twenty years to accomplish; but by way of proving that the railway is not required, asserts that the river "Indus" is an "excellent means of transport"! Shades of Alexander and Nearchus! What are we to hear next? The gallant officer is undoubtedly entitled to have his opinion; but I affirm that no sane man who knows the Indus will agree with him.

When we consult the official reports of Messrs. Brunton and Collins, the engineers who, with a large staff, surveyed the Indus route from Kotree to Mooltan, the report of Sir Richard Temple, and the minutes of Sir Bartle Frere and Sir John Lawrence, Colonel Strachey's data as to about, freight and other matters, appear to be equally reliable as his opinion of the Indus.

To do the gallant colonel justice, however, we must remember that he wrote in a hurry, and with no previous knowledge of the country he was traversing; and no doubt, when he has time for reflection, he will see reason to alter his views.

In the meanwhile, before parting from him, and dismissing his preposterous irrigation scheme to the limbo of forgetfulness, I would point out an evident engineering blunder which he commits when he recommends that the railway, in the event of its being made, should be placed along the bank of the canal. Such an arrangement would inevitably lead to the destruction of the canal and the serious damage of the railway. The bank of the canal necessarily being composed of sand, it would be found that the vibration caused by the passing trains would at certain points cause a subsidence, and as a matter of course invite a breach by the water of the canal.

We turn from the views of the objector-general to those of the Governor-general, who, in contrasting the proposed Indus Valley and Rajpootana lines of railway, remarks:—

I consider that the line between Mooltan and Kotree is of more importance than that by Rajpootana, because it will, at a given cost, open up the sea-board to the Punjab and Scinde. It will mainly run through British territory, and benefit our subjects; while the railway through Rajpootana will pass through independent States. Then, again, the former line appears to me of superior importance, as it will run parallel with the Western frontier. Lastly, the Mooltan line is, in my judgment, much more likely to prove remunerative than the other. It is true that we have a great highway in the River Indus running down to the sea, but even with this advantage, I incline to think that this is the most important of the two lines.

I place the Rajpootana line in every respect in the second degree of importance to the Indus Railway. We have not many troops in that country; the chiefs and people are well disposed towards the British Government, and the country is generally poor.

The Hon. Mr. H. S. Maine, Member of Council, expresses his concurrence with the Viceroy in the following words:—

The Mooltan and Kotree line would appear to have, at the same moment, both great military and great commercial importance. It is only second to the Lahore and Peshawur line in the addition it will make to the security of the North-Western frontier, and it will connect with the sea, by an easy line of access, a series of provinces of which some are growing in wealth more rapidly than any other part of India; while nearly all of them, through their exclusive subjection to the British Government, possess a guarantee of progress which is wanting in most of the territory traversed by the railway which is to join Delhi with Guzerat.

In a more recent Minute, dated the 18th December last, Sir John Lawrence, after recording his opinion that the Indus Valley line should be undertaken before either the Rajpootana or Lahore and Peshawur lines, goes on to remark:—

A complete Indus railway would admit of troops being rapidly brought up from Kurrachee to Lahore, or of being similarly concentrated at any spot all along the line opposite to the frontier. This is a point of primary importance. If a railroad from Lahore to Peshawur would produce a beneficial effect at Cabul and in Central Asia, a complete line from Lahore to the sea ought, at least, to have an equal effect, while the additional material strength it would give us would, I submit, be greater in the latter case than in the former.

Sir Bartle Frere, as is well known, has expressed himself in the strongest terms in favour of the Indus Valley Railway. In an official minute on the subject, Sir Bartle, referring to the remunerative prospects of the undertaking, recorded his opinion in the following words:—

When it is considered that 450 miles of railway, from Kotree to Mooltan, along an alluvial country, without a hill a hundred feet high throughout its whole course, would connect twenty millions of cultivating and trading people with their nearest seaport, it seems to me almost superfluous to attempt to prove that such a railway must pay.

And again—

I know few parts of India where the prospects of local traffic are more certain and promising. The line will traverse one uniform plain of the richest alluvial soil, unbroken by anything save large rivers and canals.

On commercial as well as strategic grounds, I would also draw attention to the following extract from Sir Bartle's minute in reference to the port of Kurrachee:—

The Indus Valley line touches the sea at the port of Kurrachee. This port presents at all seasons of the year a roadstead for the largest ships, quite as commodious as any other open roadstead in British India. The holding-ground of the anchorage is good, the tides regular, and the direction of the coast line such as to present little difficulty in getting to sea. The land-locked inner harbour is even now easily accessible at all seasons to all ships under 1,200 tons. I may be allowed to add, that in the opinion of all experienced harbour engineers who have ever seen it, the harbour is easily capable of such certain improvement at moderate cost as shall safely accommodate vessels of 2,000 tons and upwards.

In twenty-two years from 1843-44 the trade of this end of the line, i.e., the sea-borne trade of Sind, rose steadily from £122,000 to four and three-quarter millions sterling in value, and the exports from almost nothing at all (about £1,000 value) to little short of three millions, and there is every prospect of a further steady increase.

Certain military "Red-Tapists" may attach little importance to the views of railway engineers, however experienced, although these may be backed by the highest officers of the Government, including the Viceroy; but I venture to think they will not make light of the opinions of an eminent officer of the Royal Engineers, who surveyed a great portion of the route of the proposed Indus Railway. I therefore beg leave to conclude with an extract from a minute by Major-general Sir Henry Durand, R.E., in which, after recording his preference for the Indus Valley Railway, as compared with the proposed lines through Rajpootana and from Lahore to Peshawur, Sir Henry goes on to say:—

The importance of bringing the Punjab and the whole line of the Indus Frontier into easy communication with the sea-board seems commercially, politically, and militarily, of extreme moment. I think the line of railway should be on the left bank of the Indus; and, having surveyed in 1838 from Ferozepoor to Rooree along the left, I can corroborate Sir Bartle Frere's statement of the comparative absence of difficulties from Buhawalpoor to Rooree. The cost of construction should be moderate, and it would not, in my opinion, be backward as a fairly paying railway. The prosecution of the surveys for the line might at once be sanctioned, and though for obvious reasons I think the left bank or eastern side of the river preferable in many respects, yet, if the result of the survey were to establish a great superiority of advantage by taking the line along the right or western bank of the Indus, it might be adopted; but the advantages must be more weighty than any that I can anticipate that warrant preference being given to the right or western bank of the Indus.

I regard a line of railway from Lahore to Attock, on the left bank of the Indus, as part and parcel of our Indus frontier railway system, and should certainly consider it as only second in importance to the Mooltan and Kotree line. To my mind it is an integral and necessary part of the Punjab railway system, which would be seriously incomplete without it. The whole of these Indus frontier railways should, if possible, be under one management and one company.

However desirable the Delhi and Bombay line through Rajpootana, it is not, in my opinion, of equal importance with the completion of the Indus frontier group; doubtless it would be valuable; but lines passing through our own provinces, and linking these together in an efficient way, have certainly a preferential claim to construction with English capital. When the Indus group was complete, and the existing main lines to Calcutta and Bombay doubled, the Delhi and Bombay line by Rajpootana would be a proper undertaking.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
"PUNJABER."

Spirit of the Local Press.

ADMISSION OF NATIVES TO THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The Calcutta Englishman opines that we are not pursuing the right course in raising the natives to positions of responsibility and power to so large an extent as to open to them that branch of the service which governs the whole country. And what is equally important, we do not think that beyond the precincts of the cities of Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras there is any demand on the part of the natives for such privileges. The demand is confined to a native association, calling itself British, and to a small section of University-educated Bengalees and Mahomedans. The vast masses of the people who inhabit the interior have no such desire, and we fearlessly assert that they prefer their European judges, collectors, and magistrates to the uncovenanted natives who occupy some of these posts. We will freely admit that in the metropolis native judges and magistrates have been found who exercise their functions with as much integrity and impartiality as their English colleagues; but it must be remembered that they are under the surveillance of their English coadjutors, and of a large English population. This would not be the case in the distant isolated districts, and there is not an Englishman in the interior who would not tremble at the idea of having his personal liberty and his property at the mercy of native officials. Our present experience is that English officials exercise their functions with integrity and impartiality, without respect to class or creed, but we have not the same experience of natives. We do not object to a slow and cautious introduction of natives to the Civil Service, but it ought to be only to natives educated in England. A general opening to natives educated in India, as is advocated by a few of their organs, would swamp the Civil Service, and denude the interior of India of Englishmen. It would be the beginning of the end, and in no great space of time would cause the loss of our Indian empire. We do not think it is the business of Englishmen to bring about or accelerate such a catastrophe.

The Indian Daily News argues that Government should do one of two things—either act up to the plain meaning of its words in the Charter Act of 1853, and remove all obstacles to natives obtaining these appointments, or else declare its opinion that natives are not eligible for the posts. If, under the terms of the Charter Act they are eligible, then arises the consideration how far it is consistent with honesty or good faith to impose a condition with which the majority of natives cannot comply, namely, the proceeding to England for examination. If the object of the Home Government is understood to be what the language of the Act imports, namely, to get good and efficient men, then the educational test can be employed as well here as in England; and there is no reason, as far as we can see, to compel native gentlemen to undergo the privation and expense of proceeding to Europe. On the other hand, if the Government are of opinion that it is essentially necessary for a native candidate to reside for a short time in England, a manifesto to that effect should be issued.

It would seem to be apprehended that natives, if the present restrictions were removed, would come in in numbers and swamp the service. Obviously there are many considerations that would induce the Government to restrict the number of native civilians to a certain proportion of the service complement. On looking below the surface in this matter, natives themselves will see that there are strong reasons why this should be so. And as far as reports have reached us, this is all that the East India Association have asked for,—that natives shall be admitted to share the coveted appointments, not to monopolise the service. As long as England shall hold the reins of Government in India, no doubt the bulk of the covenanted service must consist of the element that at the present moment preponderates.

As to the apprehension that natives in these high posts will not be temptation-proof, facts point in the opposite direction. The manner in which the members of the subordinate judicial service of these provinces respect the trust reposed in them belies the apprehension. Why should a native civilian be suspected of collusion any more than a native High Court judge of being open to improper influences? Why should the former not receive the same courtesy from his European colleagues as the native judges—from Ramaprosad Roy to the present talented incumbent of the High Court bench—have invariably met with at the hands of the European benchers?

THE OCCUPATION OF QUETTAH.

The Madras Times strongly approves of Sir H. Green's plan for checking the advance of Russia by occupying Quettah. As a strategic point, about twenty-five miles on the other side of the Bolan Pass, Quettah is admirably adapted, whether for purposes of peace or war. With a railway at Dadur, the communication with Kurrachee would be forty-eight hours, and that port would thus become the centre of the whole of our trade with Central Asia. In the present state of Afghanistan, and all the passes and approaches to that country, trade is languishing and almost extinct. There has been no security for life or property in those regions for years past, and trade with India is therefore almost destroyed.

Then as to our military necessities, Quettah, once joined with the Indian network of telegraphs, would form an admirable advanced outpost on the frontiers of India. Not a movement could occur in Central Asia that might not at once be known in Calcutta and in London; whereas now our position and communications are so imperfect that we must remain in utter ignorance of what takes place at Candahar or Herat until the events have been accomplished. There is no blinking the fact that our prestige is no longer what it once was. The lustre of our power has been dimmed, and men no longer look with awe on what they once believed to be the invincible might of England.

The advance to Quettah will most certainly have to be carried out, and railway communication with Peshawur completed before long. The only mistake, we think, is in not setting about it at once. We shall have to do this work some day, perhaps, in a great hurry, and with an expenditure of men and money from which we might entirely save ourselves. "A stitch in time saves nine" is a good wife's proverb, that might often be followed with advantage in more important matters than mending stockings. But we are probably doomed to show once more our wonderful national alacrity in shutting the stable-door after the steed has been stolen.

CROAKERS.

The Madras Athenæum scoffs at the dismal forebodings of the home press with regard to Abyssinia, and laments the impulse they have given to alarmist tendencies in India. Seriously speaking, we do not ever recollect having seen the croakers in such force. Taking their tone from the home papers, their dogmatic assertions of coming disaster are to be heard throughout the length and breadth of the land. Of course it need scarcely be a matter of surprise that such should be the case. The expedition is so novel in its character, and the difficulties of the campaign are comparatively so great, that men may be excused for investing the unknown with a certain amount of imaginary terrors, on the "omne ignotum pro magifico" principle. We would, however, put in a plea for some regard being paid to the peace of mind of our friend Eusign Robinson. It cannot really be pleasant to be continually reminded by your friends of the perils you are about to undergo. Although there may be very peculiar modes of scalping and other tortures practised upon the persons of their enemies by the Galla tribes, it is not a matter of necessity that they should be perpetually kept before the harassed imagination of the unhappy volunteer. There is no limit to the evils which may be produced in a mind of which the body has been enervated by a long continued course of subsistence on salt beef and pork, diluted with commissariat rum. A man who has had the conviction drummed into him that he must of necessity contract some peculiar form of disease, is already in a fair way of taking it. Of course, no one can expect to go through a campaign on a bed of roses. Hunger and half rations, want of water and thirst, heat, wet, cold, and possibly disease, may each have to be endured in their turn; but there is no reason on earth why all these tortures should be so scientifically and unsparingly inflicted by anticipation on the embryo hero by his bosom friends. Why should the last moments he spends with his legs tucked under the hospitable mahogany of his regimental mess be embittered by such vivid pictures of future woes? After all, the expedition will probably not meet with a tenth of the disasters which have been prophesied for it; and when they do occur, it will be quite time for the croakers to come out strongly. Prophecy can answer no good purpose.

INDIAN RAILWAY CONTRACTORS.

The Bombay Times of India remarks that, were the failures in the embankments, bridges, and viaducts of the Great Indian Peninsula that have been revealed during the last three or four months to be regarded merely as a nine days' wonder—as an unavoidable mischance which, as a matter of course, time and money will repair—there would be ground for serious uneasiness in view of the large extensions of Indian railways now contemplated. Just at present indeed every one immediately concerned with railway extensions is fully aware of all the weak spots in the system; and all who have character to maintain are doubtless now doing their best to prevent a recurrence of disasters, the deep shadow of which yet hangs over the name and professional reputation of everyone responsible for former constructions. Thus in rebuilding the great Bore Ghaut viaducts the present chief engineer of the Great Indian Peninsula, as we are assured, is adopting every precaution that qualified supervision can afford, besides having altered the whole design from that of a long, lofty bridge to that of a substantial viaduct. And yet, on the other hand, so much more pressing is the demand for revenue and rapid returns than is the determination to effect permanent security, that we observe the Bombay Builder finds itself unable to contradict a statement to the effect that pressure has been put upon the contractors to induce them to get that great work out of hand and ready for traffic before February next. It does not require the professional opinion of our contemporary to convince the public that a bad job will again be made of the masonry work of viaducts, if there be "no time given for the work in each course properly to set." When, under the most pressing motives for securing soundness and impregnable durability, we find there is yet some lack of determination with regard to obtaining the essential conditions of strong masonry work in India, it must be of service still to insist upon the old system with all its evils being rooted up.

It will be remembered that some time before the disasters on the Bore Ghaut and the Nagpore extension actually occurred, we pointed out that the essential defects in the construction of railway works on this side of India had arisen from the contractors, the builders of the line having been allowed to emerge from under the professional control of the superintending and district engineers of the company. Professional direction and influence on the Great Indian Peninsula and probably on the Baroda line also, became centralised in the offices at Bombay, and the engineers along the line necessarily lost independence and effectiveness. The only serious attempt to controvert this view has been the statement that the defects in construction are due to faulty plans and absurd or evasive specifications. There is doubtless something to be said under that head, but it only widens the area of preventible and reprehensible neglect, if the plans and specifications, being defective to begin with, had to be executed under circumstances which would have ruined the best designs ever drawn up.

NATIVE STATES AND THEIR GOVERNORS.

The Indian Daily News points to several late examples of the wholesome effect produced by closer contact between European and native rulers in India. Look, for instance, at the improved tone of feeling towards our Government, manifested by those who have been for a time members of the Supreme Council during the past few years. The Maharajah of Vizianagram was notably enlightened and improved by his position in the Council; and though he may not be the ruler of a State, we may see in his case the influence of which we speak. Another instance from an opposite point of the compass is the venerable Rajah Sir Sahab Dyal, who, even under the disadvantage of not being well acquainted with our language, is yet known to have a high appreciation of our civilisation, and to be well affected towards our Government. The State of Jeypore is an instance where a council has been instituted; and if we are not misinformed, many forms of procedure are to be copied from British example. Stamps are to be instituted in judicial and other matters, that will give authenticity to documents and prevent fraud. Now, if men can be led to govern rightly in this way, we conceive that Lord Cranborne is right in suggesting that they should be allowed and encouraged to do so.

In Oude we have evidences of progress, such as could scarcely have been expected within a few years. There are several intelligent native gentlemen there, who have greatly improved by contact with Europeans. Two of them are Knights of the Star of India—his Highness the Maharajah of Bulram-pore, and Rajah Sir Maun Sing. Beyond these, to the north-west, is another State, that had for a brief period a representative in the Supreme Council—his Highness the Nawab of Rampore.

The last-named prince accomplished at one stroke the repeal of a Corn-law. He abolished the tax on grain, thus taking a liberal free trade policy for the good of his people, who, like the poor in England, suffered from a law-made scarcity. He also improved the city "after the manner of the English," thus promoting the health of the inhabitants. Another good feature of the administration of the Nawab is, we hear, that he personally attends to all matters of business, appeals, &c., and devotes to these about eight hours daily. In such leisure as he can command his Highness occupies himself in the study of history, and is said to be an excellent Persian and Arabic scholar, and is well acquainted with the Grecian philosophy.

ECONOMICAL QUARTERS FOR OFFICERS.

The Delhi Gazette analyses and applauds Sir W. Mansfield's scheme for supplying officers with cheap house-room. Sketch plans, attached to the Commander-in-Chief's memorandum, show one large room, twenty-four by eighteen feet in size, an open verandah in front and rear, with bath-room, &c., at the side. This is proposed as the subaltern's quarters. A captain may be allowed two of these rooms, with their adjoining accommodation. A married lieutenant might also have a double quarter, on the condition that he paid rent for the same. "The enclosing of a verandah would give him the necessary accommodation required by the circumstances of a married man of not very large means." Similarly the field officer would be permitted a double or treble quarter, according to his wants. There being generally thirty-nine officers borne on the rolls of a British regiment, it is calculated forty of the quarters proposed would suffice for the wants of the whole present with the corps. Making allowances for officers on leave, on staff employ, or otherwise detached, would give a sufficient balance of rooms to provide double or treble quarters for those requiring the accommodation. The Department of Public Works estimate the expense of each set of quarters at Rs. 4,000; the interest of which, at 8 per cent., is Rs. 320, or Rs. 26-8-0 per month. This, it is proposed, should be the rental payable by each officer for every unit occupied.

Accommodation for five servants is also provided to each unit. But for stabling or coach-house room an additional rental, also at 8 per cent. on the outlay, is to be demanded. This plan having been approved by Government, is ordered to be adopted as an experimental measure, at the stations of Allahabad, Morar, and Nowgong. But we hope soon to find the system adopted throughout India. Inferior house accommodation not only affects the comfort, but also seriously injures the health of many military officers.

PICKED UP AT SEA.—The ship Gladstone, from Newcastle, which arrived off town yesterday morning, whilst out in the bay in lat. 6 deg. 51 min. N., long. 88 deg. 50 min. E., on the 1st Oct., picked up a boat almost half full of water, with thirty-five shipwrecked passengers in her. They were all in a pitiable condition, and had evidently given themselves up as lost; there was no fresh water in the boat, and not even a handful of provisions. From their own statement they were the crew of a country-ship called the Hooree, which left the Maldiv Islands on the 14th ult. After being out for twelve days, the vessel, which was in a very leaky state, suddenly began to sink, and they were obliged to take to the only boat they had. The vessel was so quick in going down that the crew had barely time to take in what was required in the way of provisions and fresh water, and even the supply that they did succeed in throwing over only sufficed for three days. They had to put up with nothing but dried fish, without any fresh water, for three days and three nights, when they were picked up by the Gladstone.—Indian Daily News.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ANOTHER NEW BANK.—We hear that a bank, with a capital of 5 lakhs, will be established at Moradabad in January, 1868, by Kowur Juggut Singh and Chobey Budree Doss.—Mofussilite, Oct. 29.

DOCTOR JOHN INCE has been nominated by the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab to the medical charge of Murree, in succession to Doctor Williams, the present incumbent.

PAPER MANUFACTURED IN CASHMERE.—We see from the Koh-i-Noor that paper of a superior quality is now being manufactured in Cashmere, approaching in consistency, it is said, paper of English manufacture.

MR. R. H. SHOWELL, the second magistrate of police, who received serious bodily injury in the late railway accident near Lanowlee, has, we understand, demanded thirty thousand rupees as compensation from the railway authorities.

UNDER-SECRETARY FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.—We understand that Mr. Auckland Colvin, who we see has returned to India by the last steamer, is to be appointed to succeed Mr. Wyllie as Under-Secretary in the Foreign Department.—Englishman, Nov. 4.

H. E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF will begin his winter tour somewhat earlier than was lately intended. We are informed on good authority that he proposes leaving Simla on the 15th, and proceeding in the direction of Jubbulpore.—Pioneer, Nov. 4.

CAPTAIN CUNNINGHAM, late paymaster 88th Regiment, left Rawul Pindee on the morning of the 2nd inst., en route to England, where he will serve the remainder of his sentence. He was strictly guarded by a party of H.M.'s 42nd Highlanders.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 7.

FEVER RAGING IN THE BURDWAN DISTRICT.—We hear that malarious fever of a virulent type is raging in Amadpore, Nissuncko, Bleejoor, in the vicinity of Mymaree, in the district of Burdwan. The inhabitants are suffering much for want of medical aid. Can nothing be done for these poor people?—Indian Daily News, Nov. 1.

COLONEL TROUP.—We regret to have to announce the death of Colonel R. Troup, of the Bengal Army, which took place at Sim Tolla, near Almorah, on the 21st Oct. The deceased officer entered the army in 1827, his first commission bearing date 24th Oct.; so that at the time of his death he had completed forty years' service all but three days.

ANNUITIES FOR 1867-68 have been allotted to the following members of the medical service by the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund managers, viz.: Deputy Inspector General of Hospitals G. S. Cardew; Surgeon Major H. B. Hinton; Deputy Inspector Generals A. H. Cheke (retired), J. Bowhill (retired), and W. Kartes; Surgeon Majors R. Whittall (retired), and J. Hillard.

PROPOSED ALLIANCE BETWEEN THE HOUSES OF JOUDHPORE AND CASHMERE.—We hear that an alliance is projected between the houses of Joudhpore and Cashmere. Mahomed Murdan Ally Khan has, it is said, been deputed to Cashmere for the purpose of arranging the preliminaries of a marriage between the daughter of the Maharajah of Joudhpore and the Maharajah of Cashmere.—Mofussilite, Oct. 29.

COMMUNICANTS.—We have heard on good authority that in a certain station up the country Dr. Milman, the Protestant Bishop of Calcutta, has ordered future communicants to take Holy Communion fasting; and when the lateness of the ordinary service-hour was adduced as an objection, he ordered a special service at 7.30 or 8 A.M. for the purpose.—Indo-European Correspondence, Nov. 2.

OFFICERS OF GOVERNMENT NOT TO BE CONNECTED WITH NEWSPAPERS.—We learn that a strong letter has been received from the Secretary of State for India in England, reiterating in the most peremptory terms previous orders, to the effect that no servant of Government of any grade is to connect himself in any way with the public press of the country. This letter has been circulated amongst those concerned, and will probably be published.—Delhi Gazette.

SCALE OF PAY FOR THE UNCOVENANTED JUDICIAL SERVICE.—Government, we understand, has, by a retrospective measure, sanctioned the following scale of pay to the Uncovenanted Judicial Service, to take effect from and after the 1st January, 1867:—1st Grade Principal Sudder Ameens, Rs. 800; 2nd Grade Principal Sudder Ameens, Rs. 600; 1st Grade Moonsiffs, Rs. 400; 2nd Grade Moonsiffs, Rs. 350; Last Grade Moonsiffs, Rs. 250.

LIKELY WAR BETWEEN NEPAUL AND CHINA.—A report is current in Nepaul that serious disaster has befallen the embassy which, about a year ago, was despatched from Khatmandoo to Peking. The Nepaulese Durbar have commenced making extensive military preparations. The course followed is the same as that adopted in 1855-56, when the Ghoorkas waged war with Thibet. Large bodies of troops were being assembled with a view to a demonstration on the Thibetan frontier.—Englishman, Nov. 2.

THE DELHI BANK.—Instructions have been issued by the General Manager of the Delhi and London Bank for the closing of the agencies at Jubbulpore and Allahabad. Owing to the heavy losses the bank sustained last year in Bombay and Lucknow it has been considered advisable to close some of the agencies, and concentrate the capital of the institution at a few large centres, where it is expected to be more reproductive.

THE CROPS.—The reports of the crops in Lower Bengal are favourable, except in the inundated districts, and the line of country from Burdwan to Howrah. The amun crop promises remarkably well, and is likely to benefit from the recent showers. In the Jessore division the damage done was due to the sudden rise of the river. The crops about Kulmijole have suffered most severely. It is satisfactory to know that, in spite of the floods, the reports received represent the crop as the best that has been seen in Bengal for many years.

BHOOTAN SUBSIDY.—The time will soon come round for the payment of the third instalment of the subsidy. Before, however, the Government of India gives the necessary instructions for the disbursement of this sum they should, we think, ascertain that the former instalments have been distributed by the Bhootan Durbar, and should insist upon the chiefs coming to some arrangement between themselves for maintaining a more stable government than that which at present exists.—Englishman, Oct. 31.

A GENERAL CENSUS OF INDIA TO BE TAKEN IN 1871.—The Government of India has obtained the sanction of the Secretary of State to take a general census of all India in 1871, when the rest of the British Empire will be undergoing enumeration. So long ago as June, 1865, this census was resolved on in India, and the success of those taken in the North-Western and Central Provinces removes every possible objection. The eight local Governments have accordingly been instructed to familiarise the minds of the people with the idea of a census, and to furnish reports on the best means of taking it. The Statistical Committee have been asked to prepare uniform tables for the purpose. That committee has now been so much reduced by the departure of its most active member, Mr. George Campbell, and others, that its numbers should be recruited.

BERHAMPORE COLLEGE.—The Lieutenant-Governor has cancelled the appointment of the Rev. Lal Behari De to the head mastership of the Berhampore College, which was conferred on him by the Director of Public Instruction. The action of his honour is based on a well-known standing order of the Government, prohibiting the employment of ministers of the Christian religion in the educational service of the State.—Englishman, Oct. 24.

OFFICIAL CHANGES IN CALCUTTA.—We believe that Mr. Hogg, the administrator-general, goes to England on leave by the steamer of the 22nd proximo. Mr. Wilkinson will most probably take his place, and Mr. Sconce be appointed to officiate as the taxing officer. Mr. Branson will revert to his former position as magistrate of the northern division, and Mr. Thompson, expected very soon to return to India, resume his seat as second judge of the Small Cause Court.—Indian Daily News, Oct. 24.

CIVIL MEDICAL STATIONS.—A revised list of civil medical stations in these provinces has received the sanction of the Governor-General in Council. There are to be three first-class stations—Agra, Allahabad, and Benares; twenty-four second-class stations, to which covenanted civil surgeons will be appointed; four stations in which regimental surgeons will also hold civil charge—Roorkee, Almorah, Dehra Dhoon, and Muttra; and six stations where the civil surgeon will ordinarily be an uncovenanted or subordinate medical officer. These last are Mynpoory, Etah, Bustee, Oraie, Lullutpore, and Ajmere.—Pioneer, Oct. 28.

THE CAPTORS OF LIEUTENANT GRAY.—The Government are in possession of the following satisfactory information regarding the capture of the captors of Lieutenant Gray, in the Derajat:—"Kowra Khan, who carried off Lieutenant Gray, his son Jehangeer Khan, Yaboo Khan, and the remaining refugees, have been brought in, having been given up by the Moosa Khels, under pressure of the allied tribes, to the Kusranees, who brought him in. No collision has taken place among the tribes, and no lives have been lost. The tribes have been dismissed to their homes."

ATTEMPT TO POISON TOUNGSOO PENLOW.—We hear from Bhootan that TOUNGSOO PENLOW had nearly fallen a victim to an intrigue of some of the Soobahs. These chiefs, tired of his frequent incursions and his assumption of superiority, determined to rid themselves of him in a way only too familiar to the people of Bhootan. His servants were bribed to mix some poisonous drugs with his food; this was done, and resulted in the Penlow's becoming insensible. While in this state he was thrown into a ditch. He, however, recovered in a few hours, and to the consternation of his would-be assassins at once began to take measures to punish the ringleaders in the plot.

MILITARY ON DITS.—E. Battery 11th Brigade R.A., marched into Agra on the 29th Oct., under the command of Lieut. H. W. L. Hime, R.A., and will probably resume its route to Calcutta to-day.—Captain McNair, 79th Cameron Highlanders, will command the detachment of time-expired men of the Agra division which will march from Agra to Mhow en route to Bombay with the Queen's Bays. Lieut. Bucknal (79th) will perform the duties of Adj. to the detachment.—His Excellency the Viceroy has made the following appointments on his personal staff: Captain E. F. B. Brooke, H. M.'s 41st Reg., officiating Aide-de-Camp, to be Aide-de-Camp, vice Maj. H. G. Vicars, deceased.—Lieut. G. H. Heaviside, 2nd Dragoon Guards, to officiate as Aide-de-Camp during the absence on field service of Cornet R. G. Kennedy, or until further orders.—The 82nd have left Jullunder, and the 92nd, from England, are not expected to arrive there for at least five or six weeks more: this place is as dull as can be just now.—Colonel Luard, commanding 25th N. Infantry at Delhi, who has been appointed Assistant-Adjutant-General to the Meerut Division in place of Lieut. Col. Holmes, has proceeded to take up his new appointment. —The head-quarters and one wing of the 19th Hussars is expected to leave Meerut for Benares about the 8th of December; the other wing will march for Cawnpore on relief by the 4th Hussars. —The head-quarters and right wing of the 19th Hussars will march from Meerut en route to Benares, under command of Colonel Jenkins, on December 10th. The left wing, under command of Major Craigie, will march towards Cawnpore as soon as the 4th Hussars arrive from England in the Meerut division.

PLOWDEN v. CUNNINGHAM AND LEITNER.—The appeal in the suit of Plowden v. Cunningham and Leitner has been argued, and the commissioner (Mr. Aitchison) has affirmed the judgment of the court below, with costs against Dr. Leitner. The action was for the recovery of damages, rupees 1,000, for the unlawful publication of Mr. Plowden's manuscript, a draft apology in the libel suit of Leitner v. Strutt. The case was tried in July last by Mr. Assistant Commissioner Beachcroft, who gave judgment against both the defendants for the full amount claimed, against which decree Dr. Leitner appealed to the Commissioner's Court. —Lahore Chronicle, Oct. 30.

A MONSTER.—On the 26th instant a child was born at the village of Beaur, in the jurisdiction of the Buntara Police-station. The child was born dead. On the child's face between the ears and eyes two small horns (one on each side) protruded. The horns are said to have resembled those of a cow. The face of the child did not resemble that of a human being, but was more that of what is known as a "monster." Unfortunately, the peculiarities of this child's face have not been given. When brought to the police-station for inspection it was in such an advanced state of decomposition that it was not considered advisable to send it to the Lucknow Museum. —Lucknow Times, Oct. 30.

RAJPOOTANA.—By recent information from Rajpootana we learn that Colonel Keatinge, Political Resident in Kattywar, is permanently appointed to act as Agent, Governor-General, for the States of Rajpootana, during the absence of Colonel Eden on sick leave. Colonel Nixon, who, as the senior Rajpootana official, was directed to assume charge, is also, we understand, about leaving on account of ill health. Colonel Keatinge is, as every one knows, an energetic and efficient officer of lengthened experience in the Political Department, and doubtless well fitted for the Augean task of cleansing the political atmosphere of Rajpootana. We trust in the appointment about to become vacant in the Political Department of Rajpootana his Excellency the Viceroy will evince a similar discretion by the nomination of an officer of standing and ability. —Delhi Gazette, Nov. 9.

FURLOUGH RULES.—His Excellency the Viceroy has ruled that the General Order in the Military Department of 20th May last, being a part of the ruling for the grant of furlough and leave of absence to military officers in staff employ, is necessarily applicable to military and covenanted medical officers in civil employ. Chaplains being subject, as regards leave beyond India, to the military leave rules for regimental officers, the order, which applies to those officers, is also, as a matter of course, applicable to chaplains. And as regards an officer from the Madras Presidency embarking at Beypore, the Viceroy has decided that he may fairly be allowed to reckon his leave from the date of his embarkation at Beypore, on the understanding that his preparatory leave for going to Europe via Beypore is restricted to the period of one month, which would have been allowed to him had he embarked at Madras.

QUARTERMASTER JOSEPH SMITH.—At a general court-martial held at Lucknow on the 2nd ultimo Quartermaster Joseph Smith, Royal Artillery, was tried on several charges for neglect of duty and drunkenness. The Court found him guilty of the whole of the charges, and sentenced him to be dismissed the service, at the same time strongly recommending him to mercy on the following grounds:—"That during a long service of nearly twenty-two years the prisoner has borne an unblemished character, and that his gallant services in the field and exemplary conduct in quarters have been such as to gain the approbation of distinguished officers of the army." The sentence has been confirmed by the Commander-in-Chief, who regrets that no extenuating circumstances present themselves which would warrant his restoring the prisoner to his former position in the army; but his Excellency has promised to solicit the notice of the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief to those reasons stated by the Court for their recommendation of the prisoner to mercy. —Delhi Gazette, Nov. 9.

MURDER.—A young married lady of the Jewish community, a connection, it is said, of Mr. Elias Gubboy, of Pollock-street, was found murdered in her bed at four A.M. yesterday. The head was almost severed from the body. An ayah, who was in the service of the deceased, is in custody on suspicion. Mr. Roberts and a jury of twelve gentlemen viewed the body in the afternoon. The gash across the throat, inflicted by a large sized well sharpened table-knife, extended almost from ear to ear, severing all the arteries. The unfortunate lady, young, and very handsome, had arrived from Jerusalem last year, and was married in Calcutta about eight months ago. The account given by her husband is that he left her asleep in bed at about four in the morning and went to the Synagogue; when he returned he found his wife murdered, lying in a room on the second floor of the house, whereas he left her in her bedroom on the third. Traces of blood were found from her bed on the latter to the place in which she was lying dead; but how she got there—considering the nature of the wound—is yet a mystery. It is somewhat remarkable that just nine years ago, on the 22nd of Oct., 1858, a young Jewess, named Leah, was murdered under somewhat similarly peculiar circumstances. Many in Calcutta will remember the interest which the latter case excited, but we trust that in this one the police will be more successful in detecting the perpetrator of so cruel a crime. —Indian Daily News, Oct. 23.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MADRAS CHAPLAIN FOR ABYSSINIA.—The Bishop of Madras has nominated the Rev. E. S. Goodheart, a junior chaplain on the Madras Establishment, to proceed to Abyssinia, if a Madras chaplain should be required. The Bishop requests that timely notice may be given as to the date on which the Rev. Mr. Goodheart should reach Bombay, in the event of his services being required.

MILITARY SECRETARY TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—We learn that Major B. L. Foster, of the Royal Artillery, formerly aide-de-camp to the late Commander-in-Chief, will be appointed military secretary to his Excellency Lieutenant-General McCleverty, the new Commander-in-Chief.

MILITARY MOVEMENT.—We are informed that one wing of the 3rd battalion 60th Rifles, garrisoning Fort St. George, has been ordered to be in readiness to leave this by rail on the 28th of December next to Tiruputhy, and to march from thence to Bellary on the 29th idem, so as to arrive there on or about the 8th of January, 1868.

GENERAL BRICE AT KAMPTEE.—Kamptee has assumed quite a new aspect under the administration of Brigadier-General Brice. All the exuberant vegetation has been cleared away, the hedges have everywhere been trimmed, the trees pruned of their superfluous branches, thorough drainage of the cantonment and repair of the roads ordered, and gardens which were before choked with weeds, now refresh the eye with their bright and blooming appearance. And not only has General Brice in so short a time thus materially improved the station, but by his popular manners has already won "golden opinions" from both the European and native community. —Central India Times.

THE FAMINE DISTRICTS.—The officiating Commissioner of Cuttack reported on the 15th October to the Chief Secretary to Government that the position of affairs in Orissa and in the Madras frontier continued most favourable. Abundant rain had fallen during the past week. The District Superintendent of Police from Pooree had visited the country about Khoordah and Baupore, on our frontier, and reported the crops as magnificent. The people have apparently entirely recovered from the depression attendant on the past season's famine and distress. Rice in Khoordah and Baupore sells at from 18 to 22 cuttack = 23½ to 28½ Calcutta seers per rupee. The supply is good. The crops are now quite safe, and they will be improved by a few more showers towards the close of October.

We hear that the 17th N.I. at Quilon have refused to embark for Kurrachee unless they receive batta during their service at that or other distant station, as if they were on foreign service. If this be the fact the regiment is, of course, in a state of mutiny. At the same time, if their nominal refusal could be regarded as a remonstrance only their demand does not seem unreasonable. To them Kurrachee is as foreign as Burmah, and the emoluments for serving at the former place ought to be at least the same as if they were serving at the latter. No doubt the Madras Government has done all in its power to satisfy the men, but soldiers should never be placed in such a position, especially when a little foresight would have saved the Government being placed in a dilemma—not knowing whether to blow men away from guns who served it well ten years ago (for the 17th N.I. was in the field during the mutinies) or yield with a bad grace to their somewhat just, though possibly insubordinate demands. —Athenaeum and Daily News, Oct. 24.

THE NEW MUNICIPAL BILL FOR MADRAS came into force on the 1st Nov. The salary of the President, Colonel Denison, has been increased to Rs. 1,200 per mensem, and his assistant, who was formerly first commissioner, retains the salary of Rs. 1,000 per mensem. The new Bill, therefore, has not brought what the public generally desired, greater economy in the management of the municipality. The 32 honorary municipal commissioners have been appointed, and the list of Government nominees has evidently been drawn up with a desire to give popular satisfaction. The natives are assigned 15 out of the 32 Commissionerships, and most of the Europeans appointed are men of position and intelligence. The only objection that has been urged against the list is that there are rather too many Government officials in it. One of the first questions the new municipality will have to discuss is the project for distributing water in Madras. The canal which is to bring the water from the Red Hills is in fair progress, and will be ready in the course of a few months to deliver water into the Spur Tank. From thence the water will have to be distributed over the city which considering how scattered and disjointed Madras is, will be a difficult and expensive work. There is some talk of increasing the house assessment to compensate for the loss of the sea-toll which, with rather amusing candour, the Governor in Council has stated that he is "not prepared at present" to sanction. Increased taxation, however, will not be borne without much opposition, as it is generally felt that the present taxes only rest short of being oppressive. —Madras Times, Nov. 8.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BOMBAY BANK IN LIQUIDATION.—The official liquidators of the Bombay Joint-Stock Corporation (Limited) have applied to Judge in Chambers at the High Court, for warrants against upwards of 250 defaulting shareholders. The creditors are quite satisfied with the progress the liquidators have already made, which promises to yield them much more than what they at one time expected.

DANGEROUS ILLNESS OF COLONEL EDEN.—We regret to announce the dangerous illness of Colonel Eden, the Governor-General's Agent for Rajpootana. For a few days previous to the 24th instant Colonel Eden had been a guest of Major Arthur, the Acting Political Resident at Baroda, who is at present at Mount Abo on the occasion of the marriage of one of his daughters, and was about to sit down to breakfast on the above-mentioned date, when he was suddenly seized by apoplexy. Fit succeeded fit at short intervals, and he now lies in a very precarious condition. Colonel Eden intended to leave the hill on the same day on his annual tour. He was to have proceeded direct to Ajmere, thence to Bikaner, and so on, visiting, in fact, almost all the native States in Rajpootana. He had arranged to visit Bikaner first, but owing to an outbreak of cholera there the programme was altered. The officials who were with him, and who had set out on the journey before him, have been ordered back again, as Colonel Eden will be unable to resume his duties for a long time to come—if, indeed, he is ever able to do so.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 29. The Delhi Gazette understands Colonel Eden goes home immediately in consequence of illness, and that Colonel Nixon, now Political Agent, Meywar, is to officiate as Agent Governor-General for Rajpootana.

HOME.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Nov. 28.
THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

The House having resolved itself into Committee of Ways and Means,

Mr. HUNT, in the absence of the Chancellor of the Exchequer from indisposition, stated the mode in which the Government proposed to raise the £2,000,000 which had been voted towards the Abyssinian war. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in his financial statement on the 4th of April, estimated the surplus at £246,000. Some alterations were made by which the surplus was reduced to £205,000. Deducting that sum from the £2,000,000 which had been voted, about £1,800,000 would have to be provided for. They proposed to impose an additional income-tax of a penny in the pound for the present financial year. This would yield something under £1,500,000. It was not expected, however, that more than £840,000 could be collected in the course of the financial year, leaving £660,000 to be collected afterwards. The sum of £960,000 would have to be advanced from other sources, and they proposed to take this sum from the balance in the Exchequer, which would leave that balance on March 31, 1868, at £5,654,000. Some persons thought that the whole of the expenditure of the war should not be thrown on the payers of income-tax. Their objection would be met in some measure by voting a portion of the expense from the balances in the Exchequer, by which they were practically applying, so far, the general taxes of the country to the expense of the war.

Mr. GLADSTONE remarked that it would have been objectionable to have raised a loan, and still more objectionable to have postponed the matter till the next financial year. The proposal, he thought, on the whole, was a judicious one under the circumstances. It was inconvenient to reduce the balance in the exchequer when they had a falling revenue. Drawing from the balance was almost equivalent to increasing the debt; but they had during the year reduced the debt to a nearly equal amount, so that on the whole operations of the year they would not increase the debt.

Sir G. BOWYER thought it most objectionable to increase the income-tax.

Mr. LAING accepted the proposal, and should not have objected to the income-tax being increased by twopence in the pound.

Mr. WHITE entered his earnest protest against an increase of taxation. The country did not want more taxation, but more economy. They were expending eighteen millions more now than they were expending in 1850.

Mr. HANKEY observed that the cost of the war was estimated at four millions, whereas they were only providing for two. He objected to reducing the balances in the exchequer to a low figure.

Lord STANLEY, in reply, said they had as yet only expended two millions. The four millions would be wanted only in case the war lasted a certain time, but they did not know that it would.

Mr. D. GRIFFITH did not think the country would be afraid of facing the expenditure.

The resolution was then agreed to.

Sir S. NORTHGOTE then moved a resolution that the ordinary pay of the troops taken from India employed in the Abyssinian expedition, and the ordinary charges of any vessels belonging to the Government of India employed in the expedition, be paid out of the revenues of India, but that the expense of replacing the troops or vessels shall be borne by the Imperial Government. He referred to the Act of 1858 for settling the Government of India, which provides that the military force of India shall not, except in order to repel invasion, or to meet some sudden emergency, be employed out of India without the consent of Parliament. Government had been charged with violating that Act, but he believed that they had acted in conformity with it, and if they had violated it they had only followed the example of their predecessors. It was the first principle of international law that envoys should be safe, and if it were of importance to England that her envoys should be safe, it was still more important to her Majesty as Empress of India that her envoys should be safe. He admitted that India had no material interest in the Abyssinian expedition, nor, in fact, had England, but if it were not for considerations connected with India, he doubted whether Government would have deemed it necessary to have sent the expedition, or to send it so soon. The charge which would be thrown on India by this resolution would be about £300,000, or 12 per cent. of the entire cost of the expedition. The arrangement, he contended, was just, because India would lose nothing whatever, inasmuch as if there had been no expedition, the troops would have remained at the charge of the revenues of India. There are several precedents for this course. There was the Persian expedition in 1856, when India bore the expense of the whole of the ordinary pay and half the extraordinary expense. In the second China war, the Imperial Government defrayed the ordinary pay and the extraordinary expenses, but that was not a parallel case, as the troops were sent to remain in the country a considerable time. In the third China war, the Imperial Government paid the ordinary pay from the time of embarkation, but a charge of £189,000 for vessels, was not allowed and had not been paid. Another consideration was that up to the time of the third China war, India maintained a navy of her own, but since that time the police of the seas had been kept up at the expense of England.

Mr. FAWCETT could not see why India should be asked to lend troops in order to release English prisoners. Why should India suffer in consequence of a wrong done to us in Abyssinia any more than from a wrong done to us by a European monarch? He considered the policy proposed was most unjust, and he should divide the House against it.

Sir H. RAWLINSON supported the resolution. He believed the Indian population viewed our proceedings in Abyssinia with much anxiety, and that in sending Indian troops to Abyssinia for the purpose of vindicating our national honour we were only taking a measure of precaution as legitimate as would be the enlistment of fresh Indian recruits for the purpose of overawing a disaffected district. The matter was, in point of fact, a mere departmental question, for the employment of the Indian troops on this expedition would not entail the expenditure of a single additional rupee out of the Indian revenues. The military establishments in India were not calculated upon the bare garrison requirements of the country, but a disposable force, ready for any accidental call on the frontiers or on foreign service, was always maintained. Sir Henry disclaimed any idea of annexing Abyssinia. There were some weighty arguments in favour of doing so, but we could not afford to hold it; but if our troops had to follow the King into the interior a provisional occupation might be necessary.

Mr. GLADSTONE denied that the Government of Lord Palmerston, in reference to the China war in 1859, had violated the Act of 1858, for the Act said the troops might be employed in a sudden emergency, and that was a sudden emergency. The nearest precedent was that of the Persian war. The adoption of the resolution would not make India a shilling poorer. What it would do would be to withdraw from India a portion of her available force. There was in India a necessary margin of disposable force which, if not wanted for India, might be sent elsewhere with a solemn pledge to India that if wanted in India they must return thither. If a committee were appointed to inquire into the distribution of the charge of the army and navy between England and India, his impression was that more would have to be charged to India and less to England.

Mr. LAING thought the proposal a perfectly fair one. It would do the Indian troops good to exercise their wind. Although he deprecated a prolonged occupation of India, he suggested that perhaps an overruling Providence might compel us to be "the promoters of civilisation in Africa."

Mr. OSBORNE remarked that the arguments used in favour of making this charge upon India seemed to show that the British taxpayer was very ill used, and that India ought to pay a great deal more. He suspected the whole affair had been got up by a clique of Bombay officers, and he questioned Mr. Laing's theory that Providence had ordained another penny in the income-tax to keep Indian soldiers in wind. Lord Cranborne declared that if this war really was got up to produce an impression on the Indian imagination, it would be one of the wickedest on record. Our only legitimate object was to rescue our envoy. The special injustice of the course now about to be pursued was that when we employed our English troops in India they were paid for out of the Indian revenues from the moment they landed in that country; but when we employed Indian troops on English duty we called on India to pay for them. It was not any present danger that he apprehended, but, having regard to the future, he did not like India to be looked upon as an English barrack on the Oriental sea from which we might draw any number of troops without paying for them.

Both Lord CRANBORNE and Mr. OSBORNE advised Mr. Fawcett not to press a division, and on the numbers being taken the resolution was carried by 198 to 23.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Nov. 29.

DR. BEKE.

Mr. NEWDEGATE called attention to a statement made by Mr. Layard in the Abyssinian debate, that Dr. Beke had falsely charged Mr. Rassam with having embezzled the money of the Government. This statement, he said, was calculated to do Dr. Beke a great injury, and he read extracts from Dr. Beke's book with a view of showing that the accusation was groundless.

CONVEYANCE OF MAILS TO INDIA, CHINA, AND JAPAN.

Mr. HUNT moved that the contract for the conveyance of the mails between this country, India, China, and Japan with the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company be approved. He said there was practically but one tender, which was from the Peninsular and Oriental Company, the only other tender being to convey the mails from Brindisi to Alexandria, Brindisi being substituted for Marseilles. The company asked £500,000 per annum, the contract to be for six years; but after negotiation they consented to take £400,000, the time being extended to twelve years, and there was a proviso that the Government should guarantee to the company a dividend of 6 per cent., paying in no case, however, more than £500,000 a-year. But if the profits yielded more than 8 per cent. the Government was to share in the profits to the extent of one-fourth. The amount of the subsidy was much increased, it being at the present time only £230,000 a-year.

Mr. AYRTON censured the Government for having given the company twelve months' notice to terminate the contract, and then issuing advertisements for tenders with too short a notice to enable shipowners to tender, a course of procedure by which they placed themselves in the power of the company. The Government might have insisted on greater speed being attained, it being only nine and a half miles an hour. He also objected to the terms of the contract, which he said were a premium on waste, and to the period for which it was made.

Mr. NORWOOD agreed with Mr. Ayrton that it was an injudicious thing to have so soon given notice to terminate the contract to carry the Bombay mails. He also agreed with him that more speed ought to have been required. The £400,000 a year was only for the service to India and China. In the course of another year the Government would have to pay more for the service to Australia. He objected to the partnership arrangement between the Government and the company.

Mr. SAMUDA also disapproved of the partnership, and thought greater speed might have been required, but said it was a mistake to suppose £400,000 was to be given for the service for which £230,000 was paid now, because a greater amount of service was to be rendered.

Mr. CHILDERS censured the Government for not acting in accordance with the recommendations of the committee of last year, and for entering into the partnership, but, under the circumstances, should support the motion.

Mr. M'LAREN characterised the arrangement as an improvident and objectionable one.

Mr. HUNT replied, but the discussion was continued by Mr. GRAHAM and Mr. J. B. SMYTH, who both expressed an opinion that the contract should have been for a shorter period.

The House then divided, and the motion was carried by 55 to 13.

SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH BETWEEN SUEZ AND INDIA.

In reply to Mr. O'BEIRNE,

Sir S. NORTHCOTE said he would have no objection to lay on the table a copy of the memorial presented by the bankers and merchants of the City of London, recommending the laying of the submarine telegraph between Suez and India, by the Red Sea, with a copy of the proposal of the Submarine Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

Mr. OTWAY, in the absence of Major Anson, who had given notice of the question, asked the Secretary of State for War whether the stores for the Abyssinian expedition are to be provided by the Indian Government; whether such stores as may not be consumed or injured during the campaign are to be returned into store at Bombay, or whether they are to be kept by us, as was the case in China in 1860; and, if the latter is the arrangement come to, whether any officers have been sent out by the Treasury to watch the expenditure and protect our interests, so as to preclude our having to pay for stores of an obsolete pattern.

Sir J. PAKINGTON said the expense of the stores will be defrayed from Imperial funds, though the stores will be supplied at Bombay or from the War Department, or will be obtained by the Indian Government in the open market. Such stores as may not be consumed or injured will be returned to the store in Bombay, this expedition being fitted out by the Indian Government. An officer of the Treasury has been sent out, but with no special instructions with regard to stores; but when the campaign is over there will be ample opportunity to protect British interests.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.

In reply to Mr. FINLAY,

Sir S. NORTHCOTE said it was true that the communication on the Indo-European Telegraph line had been partially interrupted, not in consequence of any defect in the cable, but of a break some distance from Constantinople. He received yesterday several telegraphic messages from India which were rather behind their time, the earliest being dated the 25th and the latest the 27th November; and he apprehended the communication was still open, although some delay was occasioned in consequence of the breach, the result, probably, of the late heavy weather in that neighbourhood. He was not aware of the state of forwardness in which the Egyptian land line was; but he was afraid, from what he had heard, that there would be no communication by telegraph with Massowah before the rainy season.

In reply to Lord J. HAY,

Sir S. NORTHCOTE said he presumed commercial messages were forwarded by messengers over the broken part of the line in the same manner as Government messages; but he had no information on the subject.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—DEC. 3.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.—WATER SUPPLY.

Lord J. HAY asked the Secretary of State for War what preparations had been made for the artificial supply of fresh water at and in the neighbourhood of the point of disembarkation of the Abyssinian expedition.

Sir S. NORTHCOTE said it would be more convenient for him to reply. An advanced party was sent forward, under Colonel Merewether and a small committee of officers, to select a proper landing-place, ascertaining, amongst other things, that there was a proper supply of water. They selected a landing-place where at the moment there was an ample supply of water, but not such as was likely to be sufficient for a large force. They therefore had recourse for a time to the condensing vessel Euphrates in Annesley Bay. The Government of Bombay having applied for another condensing vessel, the Home Government replied that there were two at Aden, one capable of condensing 4,000 and the other 2,000 gallons per day, and that they could have one of those, and a third condenser is about to be despatched to replace that one at Aden. The reports of the committee state that there is an excellent supply of fresh water within a mile of the shore which is available all the year round. Colonel Merewether states that about twelve miles from the shore there is a clear running stream from a spring which is said to be inexhaustible. It divides into two channels, and cisterns could quickly be made so as to allow the animals to drink without dirtying the water. More information will be received by the next mail. If the hon. gentleman will move for the return mentioned, we will endeavour to obtain it.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—DEC. 5.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

The Earl of DERBY, in moving a resolution sanctioning the employment of troops of the Indian establishment in the Abyssinian expedition, said there could not be two opinions as to the policy of despatching the expedition from India instead of from England. There was no intention of throwing an additional burden in any way on the revenues of India, and the Government of India and the Indian Council were quite satisfied with the course proposed. He acknowledged in handsome terms the support given by the late Chancellor of the Exchequer to the proposition of the Government that the ordinary pay of the troops taken from India should continue to be chargeable on the Indian revenue.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH admitted the justice of the war according to every principle of civilised nations, but feared that the prisoners would never be rescued alive. He believed, however, that the expedition was one which the late Duke of Wellington would, from his habitual prudence and regard for military principles, have disapproved of.

Lord DE ROS, knowing the abilities and character of Sir Robert Napier, could not imagine that he would not take every possible precaution. The expedition possibly might not be able to rescue the captives; but he had little fear that it would easily make good its return to the coast.

Earl RUSSELL thought Government would have been inexcusable if it had not attempted to release the captives, and it was only right that Parliament should regard their conduct in so difficult an undertaking with the utmost consideration.

The Earl of DENBIGH did not consider the war either just or necessary. Mr. Cameron ought to have been recalled long ago, and the detention of Mr. Rassam was owing to the mismanagement of Earl Russell.

Lord LYVEDEN approved of the course taken by the Government.

The Earl of DERBY replied. Government believed the difficulties were surmountable, and Sir Stafford Northcote had that day received a despatch which reported favourably of the surveys of the passes, the supply of water, and the health of the troops already landed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—DEC. 5.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

A short debate on the Abyssinian question arose out of a question addressed to the Foreign Secretary by Mr. WILD, who asked if he had seen an article in the Morning Post charging the Assistant-Secretary of State with levying tolls on the officers employed in foreign service, and with malversation in his office.

Lord STANLEY said he had seen the article in question, and there was no foundation for the charges it contained. The charge of malversation, he supposed, meant that Mr. Murray had kept back papers from the chief of the department. But no paper, except it related to a matter of mere return, ever was kept back. The letter which was sent by King Theodore to the Queen had been placed before Lord Russell, for there was a minute on it in his handwriting referring it to the India-office.

Mr. LAYARD explained that the letter in question never came under his notice, because matters relating to the East came under the special cognisance of the permanent Under Secretary. Lord Russell sent the letter to the India-office, and there it was not thought that it required an answer.

Mr. OSBORNE observed that the postage of that letter would probably cost millions. The neglect of the Foreign-office in not sending an answer to it had probably plunged the country into a war. He thought there ought to have been no expedition at all, or if there were one, the force employed ought to have been much smaller. He moved the adjournment of the House.

Colonel SYKES had been informed by Mr. Kaye, the head of the political department in the India-office, that the letter was sent to him merely for his information, and he did not know that any notice of it by him was expected.

Mr. OTWAY asked if it were not true that King Theodore wrote a letter to the Queen in 1858, and that Lord Clarendon declined to send any answer to it. He expressed an opinion that the danger of the expedition lay in the great number of the forces employed in it.

Mr. LAYARD owned that no answer was sent to the letter of King Theodore in 1858. As to the last letter, he denied that that was the cause of the war, and he reiterated the charges he made in a former debate against Consul Cameron.

Sir G. BOWYER laid all the blame of the war on Consul Cameron.

Mr. AYTON remarked that it was not to be assumed that the House had expressed an approval of the policy of the expedition.

Sir S. NORTHCOTE observed that it was not convenient to discuss the general policy of the expedition without notice, but he answered one or two of the points which had been raised, and particularly with regard to the number of forces which he said the Home Government had sanctioned.

The motion was then withdrawn.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

A special meeting of the East India Association was held at its rooms on Friday; Lord William Hay in the chair. Among those present were Sir Vincent Eyre, Sir John Low, General Briggs, Lieutenant-General Wilkinson, Mr. S. P. Low, Mr. A. Cursetjee, Mr. D. D. Cama, General North, Major Sinclair, Major-General W. E. S. Scott, Major Evans Bell, Mr. P. P. Gordon, General Landers, General T. C. Parr, Captain Barber, Mr. P. Bhimjee, Mr. J. V. Agnew, Colonel Haly, Mr. W. Taylor, Mr. W. Dent, and many other English and native gentlemen.

Mr. DADABHAI NAOROJI read a paper on the expenses of the Abyssinian expedition. He confined himself to the consideration that the decision of the Government not to pay the ordinary pay of the Indian troops, &c., was unfair. He urged that in former times, when the English were one of the several independent Powers of India, a fair principle was generally adopted for cases like the present—the receiver of the assistance should pay the whole charge. He cited in support of his statement extracts from treaties with Hyder Ali Tippoo, the Nizam, and the Rajah of Mysore, and asked why this reasonable and just practice should have been departed from subsequently. He hoped that the standard of fair play of the Crown was not inferior to that of the Company. He asked, while England had never given to India anything without making India pay for it, why, when it was England's turn to pay, she shrank from doing so. It was said that India lost nothing; but the real question was whether India or England should save. The question, however, of a few hundred thousand pounds was not of so much importance. A much larger question was involved in the present decision of Government—viz., whether the British Government and Parliament were absolute masters and disposers of the Indian purse, or whether they were to hold it in trust and discharge that trust on equitable principles. India was not able to protect itself. It was therefore the more necessary for England that she should not be generous to herself with others' trust money, but pursue the only honourable course of treating the trust with the strictest justice and care. After reading his paper he commented on the debate in Parliament of the previous night, and showed that by the Government's own confession India had no interest whatever in the expedition, but that the Indian Government wished to be liberal to England. Mr. Dadabhai had no doubt that India would not fail in her sense of gratitude, and would strain every nerve in case of England's need, but the present was not such a case. The world naturally does not like trustees to be liberal to themselves. He expressed his regret, more on account of England herself than of India, that England should present the spectacle of, on the one hand, being ready to spend any number of millions for her honour, and, on the other, of taking from India a few hundred thousand pounds for the pay of the very troops to be employed for the upholding of that honour. The prestige which England had, and needed to maintain, was that England could herself hold her own from her own resources, and not that she was so poor that she must ask India to be liberal to her for a few hundred thousand pounds. To the Government plea that England's envoys must be protected everywhere, he replied that if India were to be made to contribute on such grounds, then India might be called upon to pay for every war, European, American, or any other, that England may enter into. This, he trusted, would not be allowed by Englishmen themselves as just. In reply to the arguments that England had spent much on Indian account, Mr. Dadabhai urged that if it were so, it was best for all parties that India should know what it was, and be at least thankful for it, instead of being, as at present, under the impression that an unjust burden had been placed upon her. The precedents of China and Persia were all inapplicable, because they themselves required examination, and the holder of the purse was its disposer without any voice from the owner. Even granting, for argument's sake, that these former arrangements were just, he contended at length that they were not at all applicable to the present expedition. He was quite sure that Lord Stanley and Sir Stafford Northcote were the last persons to inflict any injustice on India intentionally; but he was sorry that on this occasion the matter was seen by the Government from a wrong and narrow point of view. Lord Cranborne gave the right view, except the conclusion that because Government should not be opposed therefore an injustice may be done to India. On the contrary, had Parliament come to a just decision, the prestige of England for riches, power, and, above all, for justice and fair play, would have been more strengthened than by a dozen Abyssinian expeditions. He thanked Mr. Fawcett and the other twenty-two members and the English press.

Mr. S. P. Low thought the matter was looked upon by the officials from a narrow point of view, and agreed with the paper that the decision of Parliament was not worthy of a great nation like England.

Mr. BONNERJEE and Mr. METITA agreed with the views of the paper; and Mr. ANSTEY, also concurring, urged that the present opportunity should be taken to press upon England to adjust on equitable principles the financial relations of England and India.

General NORTH, Mr. W. TAYLOR, and Mr. GANTZ having also addressed the meeting, Sir VINCENT EYRE, who regretted that the explanation was a day too late, proposed a vote of thanks for the paper.

The noble CHAIRMAN said that though he concurred with the paper, and was one of the twenty-three, he regretted that there was no one present to give the Government view of the question.

A vote of thanks to the chairman ended the proceedings.

THE VALLEYS OF THE INDUS AND OF THE EUPHRATES.

After most mature consideration the Governor-general of India has passed a minute in favour of the Indus Valley Railway. We expected no other course from the political insight of such a man as Sir John Lawrence; and his decision is to be valued all the more because it has been formed in opposition to the views of several well-known officers, whose reports, however, prove to have been based upon inaccurate and insufficient data. Such objections as were offered by these gentlemen had all along been consigned, by anticipation, to the limbo of exploded fallacies by the superior knowledge and experience of Mr. W. P. Andrew, the chairman of the Scinde and Punjab Railways, and of the engineers of those lines. Their intelligence was at last supplemented by the arguments, based upon personal knowledge of the country, as well as upon official responsibility, of Sir Bartle Frere. Hence the supreme Government has arrived at a just decision; and, though we may regret the delay, the decision itself is now fortified by a combination of political, scientific, and commercial authority that will secure the construction of this great and indispensable work. There will, in due time, be a line from Kotree to Multan; and that line, combining the upper terminus of the Scinde Railway with the lower end of the Punjab line, will be the predecessor of railway communication between Lahore and Peshawur, without which Northern India will always be exposed to undesirable contingencies. In the completion of the Indus Valley line Lahore is open to the sea. Chatham becomes the basis of our frontier defences, and we shall be able to concentrate troops, at short notice, at any given point between Southampton and Peshawur. If we felt disposed to show what narrow views of this question of the Indus Valley Railway have been taken by sabaltrn authority, we should recapitulate the objections made to it by Colonel Strachey and Mr. Mansfield. Mr. Mansfield deliberately urged that the proposed extension (which was the only question) passed for its greater part through native and not British territory, that the country was a continuous jungle, and that there was no population to support it. The facts were shown to be that, out of 479 miles, 294 run through British and 185 through native territory; and that the country is very populous and cultivated. Colonel Strachey said there was no prospect of a paying traffic, because of the competition of the river native boats. Well might an astonished Scindhee, writing so late as the 30th of September last, ask whether he had been awake for the last twelve years to hear such an objection, seeing that it is opposed to all experience; and well might Sir Bartle Frere characterise the apprehension of those who doubted the prospect of a remunerative local traffic as an "extraordinary delusion;" pointing out, as he did, that traffic and population cannot, in a flat, alluvial, and roadless country, be visibly concentrated in a manner to strike the attention of the superficial observer. Here we may allow this branch of the subject to rest, leaving it with a word of congratulation to Mr. Andrew that his views have at last been confirmed to the very letter by every man who has competently examined the question.

The Indus Valley Railway, important as it is, is only part of a still more important question; and, even if it be combined with the project, so perseveringly supported by Mr. Andrew, of a railway through the valley of the Euphrates, it is still only part of a yet wider question—the question of our control and supremacy in India. This control and supremacy may ultimately be subjected to a trial of military strength, as they have been before. The very railway system upon which, next to the interests and affections of the people, our dominion is based, unless it be effectually completed, may assist in sapping our power. India is vulnerable from three points—the sea, from Eastern Europe, and from Central Asia. As to the sea, she is safe so long as Great Britain possesses fleets and sailors, but our fleets must be supplemented by such means of defending the frontier as will be supplied by the Indus Valley Railway. We know to some extent the advances made towards our frontier from Central Asia. But we do not yet fully realise the steps that are being taken on the side of Eastern Europe. It is from this side that work is going on which we must neutralise if we cannot ourselves absorb it, just as a skilful commander would utilise his furthest external defences.

There is a great railway movement going on throughout Eastern Europe by which the southern and western frontiers of Russia are being placed in immediate connection with her military stations. Southern Russia and the Russian ports of the Black Sea are being connected by railways with the Western ports of Europe on the Atlantic. It may be that these widely-separated countries will become commercially closer connected. This is exceedingly desirable, but there are other things desirable too. The railway system being thus brought up to the very confines of Southern Russia in Europe, and the Black Sea being connected with the German Ocean and the Atlantic, what is Russia doing on the Asiatic side? She is advancing the iron road to and beyond the Caspian; and already a line is being made from Poté, in Georgia (which Russia obtained only in 1829), to Teflis, the capital of the Transcaucasian Provinces. Once at Teflis, a prolongation along the southern shores of the Caspian, or what the Americans would call a "Lake line," would carry the locomotive to Tabriz and Teheran. And already the suggestion has been publicly made that, in order to unite the Caspian with the Valley of the Indus, there should be a further prolongation, by the present trading route, to Meshed, Herat, and Candahar. With a railway extending from Eastern Europe to Herat, we can tell beforehand what would be the effect on Persia. Persia may be opened to Western civilising influences, but the question for us must be that of British Indian security. Hence we come to see the necessity of establishing our base upon the sea, with the means of protecting our north-west frontier from the Valley of the Indus. On the northern side of Persia lies what is called Independent Tartary, and our rulers cannot be blind to the extent to which Russia has planted her feet in Khiva. There will be, on both sides, only Afghanistan between us and the advanced posts of Russia.

It is the fashion, or it was the fashion lately, to pooh-pooh the contingencies of a Russian invasion of India from Central Asia. But the wisdom which affected to feel security took no account of the movement that is making such vast strides in Eastern Europe, by which the power and the resources of Russia may be placed on the borders of the Caspian and supported from the German Ocean. Still less was account taken of the truly daring conception and the actual beginning of a railway that can be used only as a military engine, however it may be disguised, through Georgia and Persia almost to our very gates at Peshawur. So that we are at this moment confiding in a false security. Our Indian empire is virtually menaced from a new point after we have allowed ourselves to slumber over the certain dangers of the old; and the question is becoming urgent how, while there is time, to abate if we cannot extinguish, to neutralise if we cannot prevent, movements that are politically threatening to our Indian supremacy.

This is easier than at first sight it might seem to be, because nature is our ally, and we have all the needful capital and industry if we choose to use them. If Russia carries a railway along the shores of the Caspian, and so on through Persia towards Herat, England must move in parallel lines in Southern Persia along the valley of the Euphrates. If Russia, for her own purposes, affects to open the Mahomedan communities of Persia and Afghanistan to the influences of Western civilisation, we must open the like communities of Asia Minor to the same influences. Persia is as much open to Western influences from the South as from the North; and even more to Western influences as they emanate from India than as they emanate from the Caspian, because the Euphrates Valley, the railway once made, will always be the preferable route for the transport of troops from Chatham to Lahore by the Indus Valley. We can deal with Russia, should she become aggressive on the seas, so far as we can reach her; but on land we can at best only neutralise aggressions that affect to be pacific. It would be folly to attempt to check the development of that part of her railway system by which she is uniting the widely-separated points of Eastern Europe. Nor would it be wise to impose any checks on her railway developments east of the Black Sea and the Caspian, because railways are instruments of civilisation, and by civilisation we profit. But we have a high position to maintain, which we see distinctly threatened. We do not intend to prevent Georgia, Persia, or Afghanistan from being opened to India by means of railways, Russian or British; but we do intend to take care not to lose sight of our own position.

This is the larger question that we spoke of above. From what we have thus briefly said it will be seen that the completion of the Indus Valley and the Euphrates Valley lines of railway are not works to be postponed. We must make progress greater than, or, at all events, equal to that which Russia is making. But the progress of Russia must not be measured by what she is doing in Khiva, or in Persia, or Georgia, or on the west of the Caspian. It must be measured by what she is doing in Eastern Europe, in the wide country between the Black Sea and the Baltic, because it is there she is laying by the reserves that will be needed for the great struggle which some day will assuredly come. In Europe itself we are already prepared for the encounter, and every year is adding to our strength and to our capital. But we are not prepared either midway or at the Indian end. Midway all depends upon the construction of the Euphrates Valley route, because it is a route at once independent, safe, and easy. At the Indian end it depends on the completion of the Indus Valley line, and its extension from Lahore to Peshawur. It is exceedingly gratifying to find that the intellect and the patriotism of the Governor-General have at last acknowledged the pressing importance of the former of these most indispensable works. Our position in India must be rendered unassailable; and the means for it are thus in our power, if we use them as we ought, quickly and well.—Money Market Review.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 4th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were, to Calcutta £180,500 and to Madras £19,500. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 11d. per rupee on Calcutta and Madras. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 89 per cent., those above that price will be allotted in full. No tenders on Bombay were invited. The result shows a slight decrease in the demand for the means of remittance.

THE INDIA-OFFICE.—Sir Stafford Northcote, the Secretary of State for India, entertained the following company at breakfast at the new India-office on Nov. 29:—The Lord Mayor, Sir Arthur Phayre, Sir Charles Wingfield, Sir Robert Montgomery, Sir Edward Lugard, Sir Henry Montgomery, Sir James Fergusson, M.P., Sir Edward Wetherall, Sir Bartle Frere, Sir John Hay, M.P., Sir Gaspard Le Marchant, Sir Charles Trevelyan, Sir Vincent Eyre, the Hon. THE P. AND O. STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Company have issued their annual report, in anticipation of the meeting to be held on the 6th of December (this day.) It is of a somewhat unfavourable character as regards the working for the past year, but expresses hopeful anticipations of the future, based on the renewed contract for the postal service to the East, which has been arranged with the Government. An abstract of the accounts, which is given, shows under the head of capital that the total assets are £4,242,744. 12s. 4d., and the liabilities, £3,952,545. 10s. 9d., showing a surplus of £290,199. 1s. 7d., which is represented by the balance at the credit of the general reserve fund. The revenue account shows the expenditure, including interest on debentures, outlay for renewal, and other purposes, to have been £2,261,440. 16s. 4d., and the gross income from all sources, including balance of undivided profits from last year, £2,084,393. 14s., leaving a deficiency of £177,047. 2s. 4d. The underwriting account shows a balance of £60,700 to be carried to the general reserve fund, and the latter fund, after being debited with the deficiency on the revenue for the past year, amounts to £290,199. 1s. 7d. The report also gives full details of the changes in the company's fleet during the last year, and of the engagements which have been entered into with her Majesty's Government in connection with the Abyssinian expedition. The directors then explain at length the negotiations with the Postmaster-General on the subject of the mail contract, and state that they look with confidence for the approval by the proprietors of the course adopted in consenting to an arrangement which almost guarantees a moderate dividend for a number of years. In pointing out that the result of the company's operations for the past year prevents the declaration of any dividend, the directors at the same time state, as a satisfactory feature, that the loss has arisen mainly on the business of the first six months of the year.

THE INDIAN ARMY AND CIVIL SERVICE LIST.

(THE PUBLICATION HAS BEEN UNAVOIDABLY DELAYED.)

Consequent on the measures adopted by Lord Cranborne to remedy the grievances of the Indian Army—one of which was granting the right of admission to the Staff Corps of all the old officers, unconditionally—a considerable change has been made in the appearance of this volume. Although the old Cadres still exist, nearly all the names are in italics, showing the great number of officers who have availed themselves of the privilege; whilst the Lists of the Staff Corps themselves will show what a great stimulus has been given to promotion, numbers of officers having obtained two steps of substantive (and paying) rank in one day.

By the Indian papers received this morning we have no later news from Calcutta; Madras news comes down to November 13. Not a word, however, in the Madras papers of fresh information about the great cyclone—at least, with reference to Bengal. With a telegraph and a line of steamers from the Southern capital to Calcutta, this is surely strange. A half-monthly Calcutta mail brings no sort of news, direct or indirect, from the place whence it started.

In Madras itself no symptoms of the hurricane had been felt beyond a "rather high and shifting wind." In the middle of the Bay, however, some five hundred miles eastward of Madras, the storm caught the Blenheim, on her way to Calcutta with a large number of passengers. She was totally dismasted, thrown on her beam-ends, and, as some of her cargo shifted, must have been within an ace of going down. On the 10th of November, however, she was all safe at Coconada, but so helpless that it was proposed to tow her on to Calcutta.

The Report of the Mysore Government for the last year, according to the Madras Times, contains much interesting and suggestive matter. The population returns show a serious falling off as compared with former years. Famine and disease have apparently laid their heavy hands on Mysore also. The revenue returns for eleven months show a deficiency, which comes right, however, on the whole year. Out of 17½ lakhs spent on "public works," it seems that only seven were reserved for "communications;" half even of that sum going for "repairs." The Talook Courts seem to give small satisfaction, for out of 2,344 contested suits, there were no fewer than 1,353 subsequent appeals. In ninety-seven State schools, including sixteen new ones, 5,966 boys and 569 girls were receiving instruction.

The Athenæum learns that a despatch received by the local Government sanctions a revised scale of salaries for the higher grades of the educational department; the director himself being gradually raised to

Ra. 2,500 a month, and the pay of inspectors, deputy-inspectors, and principals increasing on a like scale. By all accounts the boon thus offered needs extending to the lower ranks, which "discontent and disgust" are steadily thinning, or filling with inferior men.

The Municipal Commissioners held their first meeting under the new Bill on November 12. The Commissioners rejected the President's proposal to raise the house-assessment from 7½ to 10 per cent.; preferring to consider the whole question another day. A committee is to report on Mr. Fraser's plan of distributing water through the city. The canal for bringing water from the Red Hills to the Spur Tank would be finished by October, 1868.

An attempt to introduce "Low-country fish" into the Neilgherries had not proved very successful, owing to the season and the weather. Fresh experiments are to be made early next year. One kind of fish, however, called the Pumin Khandi, seems to be doing well in the Ootacamund Lake.

Prince Azeem Jah is still waiting to have his debts paid, and to start afresh as Hereditary Prince of Arcoot. Something seems, from the Athenæum, to have gone wrong with the Government plan for settling the Prince upon his financial legs. "Trumpery claims" have been sent in by the thousand, which the Commissioner will take a year to examine; but few, if any, of the chief creditors can be tempted or frightened into forwarding their claims, although several notices granting further grace, positively for the last time, have already appeared in the Gazette. Possibly to the people concerned the trumpery claims are of greater importance than far bigger ones would be to the leading creditors.

A very able report on the famine in Madras in 1866 has been drawn up by Mr. Dalyell, of the Civil Service, late Secretary to the Relief Committee. The first three parts give a carefully compiled account of the whole disaster, and the fourth sums up the various means available for the prevention of similar scourges. Among these he lays special stress on irrigation; with a sufficient outlay on yearly loans the worst evils of drought might be averted, and a good deal of waste land brought into paying cultivation.

The Carnatic, with the Bombay mail of Nov. 29, arrived at Suez at 7 P.M. on the 11th inst., and may be expected in London on Saturday next.

WANT of space prevented our inserting in the last number of the Mail a report of the meeting held on the 5th December in honour of Sir Bartle Frere. An appropriate recital of that gentleman's public services by the Chairman, Lord Lyveden, preluded the reading of an address from the Kattywar Princes to their latest hero, the late Governor of Bombay. They thanked him for his many proofs of interest in their country's welfare, especially for the pains he had taken to impart "a sound English education" to their sons and daughters. Praggi Bhimjee, agent for the said Princes, afterwards enlarged on the same theme, promising a green place in the memories of his countrymen to a statesman not only resolute in battling with conservative prejudices, but also wise enough to choose in Colonel Keating the right subaltern for his purpose.

Other native gentlemen chimed in after their own fashion. But the best speech of the meeting was Sir Bartle's reply to the others. In a few graphic sentences he sketched the general history of Kattywar, with its princes dating from the time of Bayazid and Solymán, with its still powerful aristocracy, its mixture of warlike races, including the descendants of its Portuguese invaders, and with the small number of Englishmen needed for its control. He paid a warm tribute to the zeal of the Kattywar chiefs in forwarding his own schemes of material progress. With regard to the rate of that progress, he showed how all the improvements of to-day had been crowded together into a state of society answering to that of England in the fifteenth century. "All this has come suddenly on the people of India after centuries of slumber;" and with it comes for England the danger consequent on the peace and prosperity of her own creating. People are forgetting the old days of rapine and misrule. Henceforth "England can only rule by the right divine of good government."

THE NOVEMBER CYCLONE.

NATURE in the tropics is at times a terrible curse to those who live there. What with plagues, droughts, earthquakes, rainfloods, hurricanes, her yoke is apt to sit heavy on shuddering mortals. For the last two or three weeks we have been trying to realise the horrors of hurricanes, such as those which have turned some of the West Indian islands into ruin-dotted wastes, and the sea around them into a teeming graveyard. Our hearts have hardly ceased aching over the pitiful records of the Orissa famine, and now we are startled into fresh emotion by the accounts of that cruel cyclone, which spent its fury about six weeks ago on the country lying between Calcutta and the mouths of the Ganges.

During the last few years in Southern Bengal, one calamity has trodden upon the heels of another. The great cyclone of October 1864, with its loss of fifty thousand human lives and more than two millions' worth of property, filled up the measure of suffering caused by the floods of the year before. The autumn of 1865 ushered in the first stages of a famine which, in the course of two years, has probably reaped a harvest of a million lives, besides untold waste of human resources. Just as the last mouthfuls of public food are being distributed to the more helpless sufferers from that scourge, another cyclone bursts over the luckless region, slaying more than a thousand lives, destroying millions of property, and in many places blighting the new-born promise of an abundant harvest. The rice crops, which form the staple food or wealth of millions in Lower Bengal have been so damaged by wind and water, that the price of the grain had doubled in one week. Vast numbers of cattle have perished; everywhere the tanks are poisoned with their bodies, or ruined by the salt water that found its way in; and at least thirty thousand houseless families have to get their poor mud or wattled huts rebuilt, at a cost which the temporary dearness of materials must often render overwhelming, if not for the time impracticable. And all this at a season when the cold even in Calcutta becomes for natives a sensible fact, and warmth, food, and clothing are as needful for them as they are just now to ourselves in this country.

Two causes went far to lessen the actual harm done by the late cyclone. It blew down against the tide, so that nothing was seen like the tremendous storm-wave which took so many lives in 1864. And Mr. Blanford, from his post in the capital, was enabled to give several hours' warning to the ships all down the river. Hence far less havoc has been dealt to native villages and to the larger vessels within reach of the gale, than happened three years ago. But the small native boats and their crews have suffered terribly, as the returns show, and on shore the destroying powers of the late hurricane seem to have even surpassed those of its fatal predecessor.

Could any of the damage done have been prevented by ordinary precautions? That is a question well worth considering by the local authorities. The Friend of India complains of the want of many conveniences, such as moorings, jetties, wharves, and so forth, which might reduce the dangers on the water to their lowest attainable amount. But how about the perils by land? Brick cottages would doubtless fare better than lath and plaster huts; but who is to build them, or how are the poorer multitudes to pay for the improved dwellings? It will not do to fold hands of resignation over these oft-recurring disasters, or to stand too much on the letter of economic laws in a country where the State is everything and scientific progress still a dream. Famines at least are in some measure preventible, as the lesson of Orissa has once more taught us to our shame. Hurricanes, of course, are a different matter; but might not science and common forethought help in some way to mitigate the evils, and at least by proper embankments to hold back the march of storm-lifted waters over populous and fertile plains? If something be not done, and these Bengal cyclones continue to break through their old rule of raging once in ten years or so, Lower Bengal stands a fair chance of becoming a desert at no distant day. And where would Calcutta be then?

RUSSOPHOBIA REDIVIVA.

THE Russian bogbear is once more disturbing the dreams of the British Lion. His tail begins wagging uneasily to a rolling accompaniment of sleepy growls, at the announcement of some new advance of the Russian Eagle over the broad plains of Central Asia. That ill-omened fowl may mean no mischief at this moment; is apparently in peaceful quest of his daily carrion. But birds of prey are dangerous creatures at best. Stray lambs may be grazing somewhere in this one's neighbourhood; and does not every step bring him nearer and nearer the hunting-ground of the British Lion?

Dread of Russian encroachment threatens to become as fashionable as contempt of Russia is ceasing to be. In India the croakers, with very few exceptions, are having it all their own way. Not a step can Russia take to secure her territorial or improve her commercial gains, but the Friend of India sounds the trumpet of alarm to its fellow-journals. Don't you see how Russia is steadily creeping nigher, like a lion that Trust her not for a moment. Whether she fights or bargains with Bokhara, whether the roads she builds be commercial or military, whether her way be smoothed for her by Russian cannon or Russian cotton-bales, by the arts of diplomacy or the weapons of trade, her various movements have all but one meaning, point only to one ultimate goal. That goal is the British-Indian frontier. Is it not plain enough to the dullest eye, all this pretence of developing her trade, of repelling the inroads of tameless Turkomans, of punishing the insolence of kidnapping fanatics, of strengthening her position on the banks of the Amoor? Already has the Russian Bear got the three Khanates in his fatal hug. Another step will leave him master of divided Afghanistan.

And what is Sir John Lawrence doing all this while? Nothing whatever. No British bayonets gleam from the walls of Herat; no Armstrong guns gloom over Quetta; not even has a British envoy gone to strike a friendly compact with the ruling dynasty at Cabul. No; England's Proconsul in the East stands there with folded arms, a model of "masterly inactivity," serenely careless of the doom that hangs more and more darkly over our Eastern Empire.

In this kind of strain croak too many mouthpieces of Anglo-Indian sentiment. Some echoes of it are finding their way into the home press. And a powerful ally on their side has just appeared in the shape of a new volume by the Hungarian traveller, Mr. Hermann Vambéry. That gentleman closes a work full of fresh, varied, and amusing information on the Central Asiatic races with a chapter of vigorous remonstrance against that English optimism which sees no danger in Russian aggrandisement and fears no evil from Russian rivalry. Page after page is devoted to the exposure of Russian aims, to a close review of the past and present progress of Russian arms and arts in Central Asia, to a darkly shaded sketch of the only policy possible to Russia in the future. Her manifest destiny, we are assured, will carry her in due time through the Afghan passes right into Peshawar and Northern Sindh; and what will England, unready and unbelieving in her danger, do then?

In spite, however, of these appeals to our fears and our ambition, we cannot bring ourselves to unlearn the "optimism" so distasteful and foolish-seeming to Mr. Vambéry. It is very good of him to try and touch our pride by his very flattering contrast between the merits of English and the defects of Russian civilisation. It is possible that our trade might gain by the adoption of a policy tending to our military renown. Our Indian subjects might think more reverently of a Power which dared beat Russia at her own game of conquest, and enabled the turbulent Afghan and the half-savage Turkoman to realise the blessings of a sway more civilised and civilising than that of the Muscovite Tsar. Let us even for the nonce allow the truthfulness of our admirer's comparison between the virtues of the unpolished Tartar and the views of that thinly varnished savage, the modern Russ, who outside the cities of the West does all but justify the great Frenchman's caustic epigram, about scraping a Russian to find a Tartar.

Yet, after all said and conceded, what do these alarmists call on us to do? Because Russia seems to act unrighteously, shall we hasten to copy the bad example? While the supposed enemy is yet miles away from our gates, we are to stultify all our recent policy, to break all our latest pledges, in order to avert a conflict which may never happen, which cannot possibly happen so long as our hold on British India remains unweakened! We are to stretch out long arms over Herat and Quetta, at infinite cost to English consciences and Indian revenues, merely to keep the lawless rovers of the Steppes and the half-savage bigots of Bokhara safe from the comparative blessings of Russian rule! This is caution with a vengeance.

The victims to a milder form of Russophobia would be content with an English embassy at Cabul, or some sort of alliance with the Afghan chiefs. Such a step might be feasible at some future day whenever a settled government shall again rise in Afghanistan. For the present, however, mischief rather than good would ensue from any such meddling with the politics of a neighbour at once so lawless, quarrelsome, and unstable. Let us be thankful for the masterly inactivity which refuses to meddle rashly, without good cause. Nor less thankful are we to find that the Russophobia has thus far spared the leading columns of the Times. Englishmen in a panic are not pretty to contemplate. Fenianism and garotting already divide the fears of a growing multitude. People in a great fright are sure to make fools of themselves, if nothing worse.

If Russia should some day prepare to fight us for the possession of India, we ought to know how and where to meet her with effect. It would take her a very long time to digest Afghanistan. We could always at the last moment seize upon Quetta and block the way over the Hindu Kush. But, after all, India itself would probably become the scene of the crowning struggle. In the valley of Peshawar and the plains of Northern Sindh we should have to make good our title to our Eastern Empire. Let us, then, keep up a good outlook along our frontier, and complete our lines of communication with Kurrahee and Calcutta. The enemy should meet us on ground of our choosing, not of his. If, with wind and tide in our favour, we still failed to stem a foreign invasion, if we ever let an enemy march unchecked along the Indus, our time for leaving India would be come. But no amount of headlong precautions taken in defiance of our calmer and juster selves would delay for one moment that disastrous hour.

Spirit of the Local Press.

OUR POLICY WITH REGARD TO RUSSIA.

The Delhi Gazette holds that the notion of meeting Russia on the Oxus is even more mischievous than the theory which makes Herat the key of India. There is, indeed, one general principle which may be almost universally acted on in war, and that is—never to separate yourself completely from your base of operations. Occasionally even this principle is with advantage disregarded, as it was by Sherman in his famous march that did more than any other single operation to conclude the American war, and give victory to the Northern States. But it is clear enough not to require demonstration, that in our case the principle may not be disregarded. To be in a position to meet the Russians, now or at any future time, upon the Oxus, would necessitate either the abandonment of our base of operations, or else the occupation of the whole territory between that river and our frontier.

The reader may perhaps imagine that it is hardly worth the while of any journalist to discuss a scheme which to most men in India seems so bold and impracticable. And so it would be if our foreign Indian policy were directed by the local Government. There seems certainly very little ground of apprehension of Sir John Lawrence awaking like a giant refreshed with wine, and setting at naught all his previous policy to such an extent as to project the extension of our frontier from the Indus to the Oxus. But though we have no fear of over activity in that quarter, there is, we conceive, danger of a mischievous policy being adopted in another. There are a number of writers in England, some of whom are men of considerable influence, whose knowledge of India is chiefly derived from books, with perhaps a slight experience of some one part of the country, perhaps one or other of the large presidency towns, who have what is called at home an Indian reputation—that is, they are looked upon by those who are utterly ignorant of India (and that means a very large majority) as authorities. And these men, through some of the leading journals, resuscitate the old ideas about the defences of India, and recommend all sorts of mad projects.

No country in the world could have a better line of defence than has India in the Valley of the Indus. To complete the defences which nature has provided for us we have to erect fortresses at commanding positions, so as to control the passes that lead from Upper Asia to the Valley of the Indus, and to put that part of the country into easy communication with the sea coast by means of a railway. We have already pointed to this as the sure and certain means of rendering our position all but impregnable against a foreign enemy. By these two measures—the erection of forts and the construction of the railway from Kotree to Peshawur—and with the military occupation of Cashmere, India would be perfectly secure on the north-west and the north-east. If it be urged that the physical obstacles in the way of the construction of this line are too many, then the extension of the line from Lahore to Peshawur would answer in a degree the same ends; it would secure communication with the extreme limit of our territories on that side, although, until the hiatus between Kotree and Mooltan is filled up, even that line would be incomplete. At present it takes as long to convey troops over that section of the journey from Kotree to Mooltan as all the way from England to Bombay.

The Indian Daily News avows its hearty approval of Sir John Lawrence's non-interferent policy with regard both to Indian and frontier States. On the side of Cabul especially Government has acted with the truest wisdom. Although apprehensions of collision with Russia are supposed to induce the present alarm, it is not the call to protect India from invasion that Sir John Lawrence is so steadfastly resisting, but the spirit that Englishmen have acquired in this country of dictating and interfering in the affairs of Governments that happen to be contiguously situated. There is anarchy in Cabul; there is slavery in Turkistan; Cashmere is misgoverned, is the cry. The principle on which interference is sought is admirable, but it involves very nice discrimination. In Burmah our relations with the King, people, and country are such that interference may become necessary; but in Cabul these relations do not exist, and the Viceroy is undesirous that they should, and is resisting them. How long he will succeed it is impossible to say. The Saxon spirit is progressive; it will make itself comfortable and happy in Cashmere; it will penetrate Cabul, and in time, when the high roads between Central Asia and India are free and open, European merchants may be found fraternising with Turkistan dealers. But just now the principle of interference, if applied with reference to Cabul, might just as well be applied to Poland or Denmark. The time will come when Cabul will be the highway for European merchants; but even if Russian troops are then seen in the country of the Ameers, would it not be better to deal with a Government ruled from St. Petersburg than by a wild family of Khans? It is not so much a pacific as a policy of non-interference that is advocated, for, as we before observed, if we can hold our frontier there is no reason for moving onward, even against Russia. If we are doubtful of our power to do so, there is even less reason; and surely for the time we ought to be contented with, and secure in, our influence in this country.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE FOR INDIAN LAW-COURTS.

The Delhi Gazette puts forward the claims of English to supersede native languages in Indian law-courts. In the first place, it must be remembered that the number of educated natives who know English is increasing enormously every day. Every day, all over the country, the Government schools and colleges are turning out men who can read and write English fluently. The employment of these men will at the outset very much facilitate the universal introduction of the English language as the medium of conducting the executive administration. Every year the number of natives who go to England to qualify themselves will increase. In whatever way the service is thrown open or rendered more accessible to natives, one result, whatever other results may accrue, will undoubtedly be additional facilities and inducement to employ English in place of the vernacular. And the mere fact of all records being written in the English language, in a language which a visiting or supervising officer can read, and which is avowedly infinitely less open and liable to be tampered with than the vernacular, would in itself be an immense safeguard. A record-keeper or writer would think twice before he dared to tamper with an English document, but would not hesitate for a few rupees to alter or tamper with a vernacular one.

Thus it appears that the difficulties in the way of the general introduction of English as the official medium are of themselves disappearing, being removed by the course of events. Let us see how the other great difficulty is to be met. We do not deny that, if it were the practice for civil officers to read papers for themselves, their work would be increased. But it is a shocking thing to think of that the service should be so poorly supplied with officers that a system avowedly calculated to foster corruption of the worst kind should be kept up, because the proper number of workmen cannot be supplied. It must come to this, and it would be much better if it did come to this, that an inferior, or at any rate a less highly-paid, class of workmen should be provided, rather than that the interests of millions of people should be sacrificed to the maintenance of the present system.

THE CYCLONE OF NOVEMBER 1.

The Friend of India remarks that within the past four years Lower Bengal has been visited by a succession of the most terrible physical calamities. In 1863 an inundation desolated the rich districts between the Ganges and the head of the Hooghly, which were passing through all the excitement and loss of a struggle between landlord and tenant. In 1864, when the whole province had begun to abandon itself to the orgies of the national festival, on 5th October, a cyclone swept up from the Bay of Bengal to the far north-east, accompanied by a mighty wave which engulfed at least fifty thousand human beings and together destroyed property to the value of two millions sterling. In 1865, the same month and the same festival brought with them scarcity of food so severe as to deepen, in the course of the subsequent year, into a famine more intense than any recorded in history. What the famine spared another storm-wave destroyed in Orissa, and the loss is counted in a million of lives and an expenditure, public and private, little short of three quarters of a million. Meanwhile an epidemic fever, which like cholera still defies scientific definition and remedies, has been steadily wasting the districts along the Hooghly from Nuddea to Calcutta. It has depopulated many villages and still broods over a large district only a few miles from the capital.

But, as if all this were not enough, another cyclone has followed the track of that of 5th October, 1864, with a destructive violence hardly less, but with a terror all the greater that it came at midnight upon a sleeping population, not even illuminated by the lightning of heaven, nor alleviated at its close by the heat of the sun; and this cyclone has occurred at a time when not only was there neither light nor heat as on the 5th October, but when the rice crops were in the ear, and the whole province, wasted by famine and pinched by high prices, looked forward to an abundant harvest.

The Friend asks whether the three years that have passed since the visitation of 1864 find Calcutta and Bengal prepared for that of 1867?

Mr. Blanford's warnings from Saugor Island did indeed give the shipping six hours' notice. But where are the new moorings, where the river trust that was to do so much, where the embanked shore, the jetties, the wharves, the accommodation which would render it no longer necessary for ships to ride at anchor in the stream? Committees have sat, and heard evidence for days and have written "able" reports—where is the fruit? Saturday after Saturday has been wasted in discussion and legislation, in Bills, and Acts, and Acts to interpret Acts, and Bengal routine is exposed by another cyclone. And all this in the tropics, and in that part of the tropics which experience and science show to be liable to periodical, and even frequent, visitations of the kind.

INDIAN FURLOUGH RULES.

The Madras Athenæum holds that of all irrational institutions there is hardly one more irrational than the present Indian furlough regulations with especial reference to their guiding principle, that going to England must be made penal. A man may go anywhere else. As far as leave within Indian limits is concerned, the rules are rational and even liberal enough. The absurdity is in having any limits whatever with the exception of those of time. The recent order about the ninety days' privilege leave caps the absurdity, and makes it more palpable than ever. A man may have ninety days' leave to the hills, or the Straits, or Cashmere, or Ceylon, &c., &c., but he must not go to England during those said ninety days under penalty of forfeiting three-quarters of his income! And for what reason? No reason is given. Is it possible for us to conceive one? A man is not more out of the way, not more out of reach of the authorities in England than in Cashmere or the Straits. If his valuable services were emergently required he could be recalled and come back to duty in as little time, in less time, than he could from the Cape or from China. The reason cannot be economy. Government may just as well pay a man his full salary in England as on the hills. It is absurd to suppose a man would go to England for three months on furlough pay. So if he takes his ninety days at all he takes it where he can draw full salary. There can be no reason why her Majesty's Government of India should endorse the old Indian traditions on this subject. A man can be recalled from England to India in forty days if necessary. Her Majesty's Government at any rate professes to desire, rather than to object to, the introduction of European ideas. The improved medical science of the day is decidedly in favour of occasional changes of air and climate, and that not from one tropical site to another, but from a tropical to a temperate region.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—The annual meeting of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Company was held on the 6th inst. The chairman congratulated the shareholders upon the present position of the undertaking, and remarked that they have now a partnership of twelve years with the Government, and a tolerably sure guarantee that the dividend will never be under 6 per cent. A reduction of £74,500 per annum had been made in the outlay, and the loss in the second half of the year was only £24,000, against £153,000 in the first six months. After some discussion, in the course of which full confidence was expressed in the directors, the report was adopted.

BENGAL.

RECEPTION OF THE BRITISH EMBASSY.

With regard to the mission at Mandalay, we find that for some time there was no information received in Rangoon from the capital, and that considerable uneasiness was consequently experienced. It was attributed to the rapid falling of the waters of the Irawaddy, but it seems that the King is so superstitious and dilatory that, although Colonel Fytche had arrived at Mandalay, there was nothing of importance to report. The Embassy reached Mandalay on Saturday, the 5th, and landed on Monday, the 7th October. The whole city was in a stir by the arrival of the Agent of the Governor-General of India and suite. Wooddouks and Atwenwoons and Woongyees called in succession to congratulate the Chief Commissioner on his arrival in the royal city. The accommodation provided for the mission has been pronounced as superb, and the usual round of theatricals and dancing takes place every day. Supplies are poured into the mission compound every morning for the table, and no pains or expense is spared to make things quite agreeable. On Friday, the 11th, the grand pageant of the reception was held. It is reported as a great affair. Nothing was left undone that could add to the magnificence of the display. For once the King endeavoured to give proof of his sincere respect for his Excellency the Viceroy of British India, by the extent and cordiality of his arrangements. The ceremonies of reception were pompous and magnificent, according to Burmese ideas of such a scene. A Rangoon paper gives the following account:—From the Political Agent's residence a long procession proceeded towards the Palace. There was first a body of men, mounted on ponies, who led the way. They were dressed in new clothes, and headed the cortege. Then a regiment of musketeers. Next came a line of elephants, with their variously-ornamented houdahs. An officer of rank, dressed with a pagoda-shaped hat and the wings of a bird, carried the Governor-General's letter, on a golden salver before him, on an elephant. Next, on an elephant, followed the Agent of the Governor-General, dressed in diplomatic costume and cocked hat. Then came the Political Agent, Capt. Sladen, and the interpreter and secretary, Mr. R. S. Edwards. Following these were the various officers of the suite, mounted on elephants. Another squad of Burmese cavalry followed the elephants; then a long double rank of the Court fanmen, dressed in their white robes, and carrying the usual long-handled fan. After these came another body of men, of all kinds and classes, and no end of musketeers. This procession extended over a mile, and marched through different streets of the outer city, and then into the city itself. Wending its way along inside of the royal city, the procession came round to the front of the palace, and halted at the east gate, where all dismounted, leaving the elephants and ponies outside with all the golden chattabs that had been carried over them. The Embassy was then ushered into the Grand Audience Hall, where all the grandees, the princes, nobles, ministers, and officers of the Court were assembled in full Court dress, with all their decorations emblazoning their persons. All took their seats in their appointed places. It was a grand sight to witness. Every man of any importance in the kingdom was there present, to do homage to his Sovereign. Shortly after entered their Majesties the King and Queen, taking their seats on the throne, entering by the central door under the spire of the Palace. The throne is a pedestal about eight feet high, and is ascended by a flight of steps. All heads were down on the floor but those of the mission, who made a sort of bow to the King. The King commenced by asking Col. Fytche about the health of the Queen and Royal Family, to which questions answers were given. The reception did not occupy more than fifteen minutes. When it was all over the large assembly soon scattered. The reception of Mrs. Colonel Fytche, who was conveyed to the Palace in a royal silver canopied tonjon, and escorted by troops, was very cordial. The King and Queen received her most graciously. Only Colonel Fytche and Capt. Sladen were admitted into the Queen's apartments on the occasion.

STATION TALK.

MEERUT, Nov. 6.—The line is open from Gazeabad to Meerut, as your readers know. But I think it will be useful to the public to know that it is necessary for any one going up to Meerut by the train to make arrangements beforehand to have a conveyance to meet them at the terminus, which is a good three miles from the station, otherwise he may find himself in a very awkward predicament, especially if he goes up by the night train. It is not very pleasant being landed with your traps at two o'clock in the morning on the maidan, three miles from any hotel or dawk bungalow and not a coolie or a creature to help you out of your difficulties; and the railway subordinates of the P. and D. line are not over-attentive or obliging, I mean the native portion of them. The line runs very easily, but the speed is slow, not more than fifteen miles an hour. The up-train from Calcutta, which left on the night of the 2nd, was detained six hours at Burdwan, unable to stir from the violence of the tempest. Since that the trains have come regularly, so that no damage can have been done to the line.

BENARES, Nov. 3.—Last week a meeting of the Benares Association took place, on which occasion the Honourable Baboo Dwarka Nath Mitter, the native judge of the High Court of Calcutta, Baboo Mohendro Lal Shonee and Annadee Prasad, pleaders of the same court, and many other Bengali baboos of rank were present. Mr. Rogers, the mathematical professor of the college, was also among the audience. The work commenced at half-past six p.m. After the relief fund business was over, Baboo Umesh Chandra Sanyal, B.A., read his essay on "The best means of diffusing useful knowledge among the Hindus." The essayist was of the opinion that at the present time useful knowledge can be acquired only by the study of the English language, for in the vernacular there are a few scientific works, and to attempt translating works like Miller's Organic Chemistry and Mill's Logic, will be struggling to overcome an impossibility. He also said that if anything like translation were to be attempted, the English technical terms must be retained. I hear that the members of the Allypore Scientific Society have requested the Governor General to allow them to establish an Oriental University, have translated many English works, and have taken upon themselves the difficult task of translating the most important scientific works, including logic and rhetoric. Two murders were committed during last week. One of the victims was an inhabitant of a village a few miles from here; he was killed by one of his relatives, who has been apprehended, and has, I hear, admitted the charge. It is said that the murdered man lately appeared as a witness against his relative which led to the perpetration of the murder. The dead body was found concealed in some bhusa. The other victim was an inhabitant of this city. I have not heard the particulars yet. Both the cases are pending in the Court of our Deputy Magistrate, Mr. P. Niblett. The Criminal Session of the Judge's Court opened on the 1st instant. I hear that in this session the dacoity case, in which five men of a distinguished regiment, are charged with a crime punishable under Section 395 of the Indian Penal Code, will be decided.

Nov. 4.—"The Deewalee festival came off with the usual grandeur. I have been informed by a friend that a little boy was kidnapped during this festival. He was afterwards found lying dead in a well. The ornaments which he had on his body were the cause of his death. I don't know when the natives will come to their senses. They often witness the mischief occasioned by the use of ornaments yet their eyes are not opened. A short time ago a Bengali baboo was coming on an ekka from Azimghur to this station by the Deogao road. He intended to halt for the night at Deogao; but before he could reach that place night overtook him. When he was about a mile from Deogao, he was suddenly surrounded by four lathials. They stopped the ekka, and commanded the baboo to come down. In the meanwhile the ekka walla fled. The baboo, though alone, remained undaunted. He asked the robbers what they intended? They told him in plain words that they would rob him of his money and whatever else he had. While this dialogue was going on, one of the lathials aimed a stroke of a bamboo lathi at the head of the baboo, but fortunately it fell on the top of the ekka. On seeing this, the baboo, who was a young robust man, struck one of the rogues with a ruler which he had in his hand, and the fellow immediately fell on the ground. No sooner did the other three see this act of the baboo than they took to flight, leaving their accomplice to his fate. The ekka walla than returned, and the baboo took the wounded robber with him. On arriving at Deoga he handed him over to the thanadar. From this circumstance, we can infer that this road is not safe even now. Some other measures should be taken by the authorities of Azimghur to put a stop to the ravages of highway robbers. The winter is fairly advancing. The mornings and evenings are quite cold."

SAHARUNPORE, Nov. 6.—Dr. H. C. Cutcliffe has been succeeded by Dr. F. Metcalfe in the civil medical charge of the station, the former when relieved of his duties as camp surgeon with his Honour the Lieutenant Governor of the North Western Provinces will, it is reported, proceed to Calcutta to take some appointment there. Dr. Cutcliffe had made himself so popular here that his departure will long be felt by the station. The district officers are all out on their annual tours. The Collector and the Joint Magistrate have gone to Roorkee, I believe, to escort the Lieutenant Governor within the limits of their district. It is said that his Honour has altered the date previously fixed for the departure of the camp from Roorkee, and that he will not be here before the 19th, but I cannot vouch for the correctness of this statement. The Mohamedans of this place are building a large mosque in imitation of the Jumma Musjid of Delhi, said to have cost Shahjehan ten lacs of hard cash; the mover of the object is a moulvie of Delhi, and he has so far succeeded in it that he has already collected and spent about eighty thousand rupees. The completion of the whole edifice will, I consider, take about two hundred thousand in all.

LAHORE, Nov. 5.—I believe that the changes recently announced in the Punjab Gazette will all be carried out by the 20th or 22nd of this month, as Major Cracroft may be expected at Rawul Pindie about the 10th, and Colonel Farrington be thus at liberty to proceed to his new appointment at Umritsar, Major Bush coming about the same time to Lahore to relieve Mr. Aitchison, whose arrangements to join the Lieutenant Governor's camp are complete. We have not yet been informed who succeeds Mr. McNabb at Peshawur. Whoever it may be, he will have some trouble to work up to the standard of the present Deputy Commissioner, whose very rapid promotion has been universally approved of. Simla requires a man of his determination to put matters straight there; they are crooked enough at present, owing to the notorious carelessness of present incumbents. We are expecting Sir Barnes Peacock back from his rapid visit to Cashmere, and it is much to be regretted the Lieutenant Governor is not here to do the honours to our distinguished visitors. Dr. Doyme, the leader, I believe, of the Calcutta Bar, has been here for two or three days, also on his way back from Cashmere, and left this morning for Lucknow. Great secrecy, why it is hard to say, has been preserved in the matter of the Leitner inquiry, but notwithstanding the endeavours of all concerned to keep the result "dark," something beyond a hint has transpired to the effect that the Commission have given an opinion adverse to Dr. Leitner's continuance in the public service. Time will tell how far this rumour is well founded or not. Appropos to Dr. Leitner, it is stated in the paper owing its origin to his fertile brain, that he does mean to appeal against Mr. Aitcheson's confirmation of Mr. Beachcroft's decision in the case of Plowden versus Leitner and Cunningham.

RAWUL PINDEE, Oct. 29.—This morning the annual batch of invalids from the depot at Murree, arrived in the station on their way to England. They number fifty-five in all, which is a little more than a fourth of the number of invalids sent up this year to the depot by the different regiments located in this part of the Punjab, and I believe is about the usual number whose services are yearly lost to the Government through the operation of the invaliding committee on the sick of the Murree depot at the close of the season. I regret to say there was some great blundering with regard to providing tents for these sick men on their way down from Murree. It appears they left on Sunday the 27th, with the expectation of finding a camp already pitched for them at Tret, the first halting place, where they were to pass the night, but instead of this not a vestige of a tent was visible when they arrived at their destination at sunset that evening, and the men had to shift for themselves as best they might! The same thing occurred the next day also when they arrived at the end of the second stage; but here the men were more fortunate, owing to their finding the camp of the Lieutenant Governor ready pitched in anticipation of his arrival on the 1st November, and as of course the tents were all empty, the officer commanding the party (at the suggestion of a gallant colonel of Artillery who happened to be staying that day at the dak bungalow) took advantage of the lucky fact, and was thus enabled to find shelter for his men for this night at all events. And so Sir, you have here repeated once more the old, old story of sickening mismanagement, which so often attends the march of our gallant soldiers in this country and for which you may be sure nobody is to blame.

LAHORE—Nov. 1.—As I foresaw, the force of public opinion, though a third class voice, which the present gods of the railway affected to despise, has been brought so successfully to bear on the interests of the concern, that a new rule has been issued allowing five seers of baggage of a personal character to third class passengers, with a charge of one anna and four pies for every ten seers additional up to one maund. The number of ekkas on the road was increasing so sensibly, and the number of passengers per rail diminishing so materially, that it was found absolutely necessary to stop the diminution in the company's receipts. It is only astonishing to me how the Consulting Engineer can allow the company's officers, who know nothing of the people's wants and views, to play at ducks and drakes with the interests of the shareholders. But what does it matter to them so long as they draw their large salaries out of guarantee, for it will come to this, if matters continue on their present footing, that the traffic receipts will be unequal to the revenue outlay of the company, and then capital must be drawn upon, unless salaries and expenditure of all kinds are materially reduced; and I would commence with the board at home, whose chairman is currently reported to be drawing as much as a Secretary of State.

Nov. 4.—You will probably have heard of an accident that occurred on the line between this and Wuzer Bhooler on the night of the 1st November. An engine on special duty, with Mr. Stone, officiating chief engineer, ran over a trolley that should not have been on the road at that time, and seriously injured three men, one so much so that he died very soon after. An investigation has no doubt taken place. I see the local papers have no notice whatever of the first day's running of trains to and from Wuzer Ghat, and I hardly wonder at it, seeing how the whole thing was managed. When I tell you that although made aware of his presence, not a single railway official had the courtesy to show any mark of politeness to the French Consul-General and his secretary, who travelled in an ordinary carriage, one of the dirtiest of its class, while said railway officials luxuriated on the velvet cushions of the Viceregal saloon; and when I also tell you that the deputy commissioner of the district, after being invited into this saloon carriage, because there was no other vehicle then in the train, was made to pay his fare to and fro, you will not be surprised to hear that Major Lewin has most properly considered it his duty to bring the slights shown to a distinguished French gentleman and to himself, as principal district officer, to the notice of Government in the course of an official report to the commissioner of the division.

MUSSOORIE, Nov. 3.—Weather now splendid, cold and bracing, the nights have set in frosty, with a cold chilly wind blowing across from the snows. The place is beginning to look deserted and empty. After the shades of evening one misses the twinkling of lights all over the different bungalows and compounds, clearly showing their late occupants have left. Our European shops are closed. A batch of invalids, amounting to about fifty men, for the Landour depot, will leave on the 15th, under command of Captain Stapylton, and the depot will finally break up on the 1st of December. Between thirty and forty sick men will remain at Landour to have the benefit of the bracing winter. Marriages in abeyance until 1868! I casually alluded to the ripe beer and porter now manufactured up here at the "Crown Brewery." It is really worth while for messes to patronise the brew, being really a first rate article, and at half the English prices. I am fully confident when the brewery is better known next season an immense demand will be made on it for beer and porter.—Correspondent of Delhi Gazette.

ROBBERY OF MAILS.—We have been informed that the mail cart carrying the Bhurt-pore and Jeypore mails was plundered on the night of the 5th Nov. between Agra and Bhurt-pore. It is supposed there were some valuable packages for Jeypore, Bhurt-pore, and Ajmere in the mail.

THE RAWUL PINDEE MULE TRAIN (consisting of 1,036 mules) arrived at Shahpore on the 1st Nov., and marched again the following morning en route for Mooltan. The train is under the command of Captain Bainbridge.—Delhi Gazette.

ALLAHABAD.—The accounts we receive from the North-West Provinces show that Allahabad is rapidly progressing, and bids fair to eclipse its old rival, Agra, and become the first city of the North-West. The new building for the High Court is said to be now in an advanced state, and the engineer in charge expects it to be completed in the month of January or February. It is also stated that the East India Railway Agency Board is to be transferred permanently to Allahabad; and a site for the offices required was recently discussed at a local municipal meeting. Allahabad now forms a central railway terminus between Delhi, Calcutta, and Jubbulpore, while the link that will connect Jubbulpore with Bombay will be completed in no great space of time. Allahabad will thus become the most important town in the North-West, and the Pioneer, in expectation of a great increase of European population, recommends house-builders to secure sites without delay if they want a safe local spec.

PRIVATE MICHAEL CONNOLLY, of the 88th Regiment, who was tried by general court martial at Rawul Pindie on the 17th October, on charges of attempt to commit culpable homicide amounting to murder, and causing grievous hurt, has been found guilty of the latter charge and sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment. In confirming the sentence H.E. the Commander-in-Chief states that he holds the opinion that a conviction on the first charge was warranted by the evidence.

PENSION TO MADAME VENTURA.—In our notice the other day of the death of M. Debucgrier, we made a slight error in saying that Madame Ventura resided in France. This lady has been residing at Loodiana ever since her marriage, which was celebrated with great pomp by Runjeet Sing, who conferred a jagheer upon her husband on the occasion as a wedding gift. We understand that his Excellency the Viceroy has recently granted this lady a pension in consideration of General Ventura's attachment to the British Government and his hospitality to British officers in the old days.—Delhi Gazette.

KOWRAH KHAN.—Lieutenant Grey, the Deputy Commissioner of Dera Ismael Khan, who showed such "pluck" in proceeding to try the chief Kowrah Khan, who however carried him off, is likely to prove in the right after all. Events promise to justify his prompt and courageous action. Kowrah Khan, his son Jehangeer Khan, Yaboo Khan, and the remaining refugees have been brought in, having been given up by the Moosa Khela, under pressure of the allied tribes, to the Kusranees. There was no collision among the tribes and no lives have been lost. The tribes who have shown such active loyalty have been dismissed to their homes. The case against the chief and his son is said to be so perfect, that even the old Sudder Court would have been satisfied.—Friend of India.

THE NEW PROPHET.—Ram Singh, the new prophet, and the founder of a new religion in the Punjab called the "kooka faith," who has at his command more than 100,000 fanatical Sikhs, all his admirers and followers, placing him next to the Creator in religious belief, paid a visit to Umritsur, we learn, attended by only one thousand of his disciples, instead of twenty thousand, as was believed at Lahore. The new great man of the country of the five waters, we are not a little astonished to hear, distributed only eight rupees on the baby Durbar sahib to the Granthies and Akalis attached to the sacred place, who form a body of priests and subsist on the charitable presents made at the place. This, the natives say, was unworthy of his name. The authorities at Umritsur in receiving this personage into the capital of the Sikhs showed him every honour and distinction which he deserved.

ROUTE FROM BHAMO TO WESTERN CHINA.—The Government of India has adopted the recommendation of the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah to send an exploring party to open out the commercial route from Bhamo, on the Irrawaddy, to Western China. The party will consist of Capt. Sladen, our agent at Mandalay, if he can be spared, on Rs. 1,200 a month, and an engineer and doctor familiar with Burmese on Rs. 1,000 a month each. It will be accompanied by an escort of a dozen Freights.

STATION TALK.

RAJCOLE, KATTYAWAR, Oct. 30.—The rains have left us for good, and the cold weather is setting in; the consequence of this sudden change in the weather is the prevalence of fever to a great extent. The 17th Regiment N.I., arrived from Ahmedabad on the 27th, to relieve the 18th, under orders for Abyssinia. This fine corps, the 19th, left this morning for Bombay via Ahmedabad. A serious disturbance took place in the gaol on the 17th Oct. About thirteen prisoners, one of them a life transportation man, rushed suddenly upon the guard and managed to possess themselves of all the muskets and bayonets that were piled, and stabbed the sentinel, who died on the spot, and wounded two or three others. The police, however, who had their muskets with them, fired, and killed three prisoners and wounded two more; six of them rushed into a sugar cane field close by, when Mr. Kristnaje Luxmon, the officiating superintendent of the jail, ordered the field to be fired, placing a strong picket in all directions to arrest their escape. The prisoners stood out in the field all night, and at break of day gave themselves up. One man, however, is still non est. Five prisoners, two Chinamen, a Rajpoot, and two Punjabees, behaved very well, and were mainly instrumental in preventing the further progress of the mutiny. Lieutenant Colonel Keatinge, Political Agent, having returned from leave, will resume charge of the agency from Colonel Anderson in about a fortnight. It is said that the Home Government insist upon the grievances experienced by the Bhyads and Gerassias of the province from the talookdars, being heard and redressed by the agency, which, being in direct opposition to the views and policy of Colonel Keatinge, it is a matter of question whether that officer will think it worth his while to continue in Kattyawar.

BOMBAY, Nov. 1.—I took a look into the arsenal yesterday, and there were to be seen Inspectors General moving about in every direction ordering, driving, and countermanding; ancient conductors packing, pushing, weighing, measuring, and driving their magnum bonums at parliamentary railway speed, and engineer sergeants testing the sharpness of bill hooks and tearing the stitches out of their boots, everything denoted a predilection for the work in hand. At the Commissariat stores there was much weighing of flour, and a great deal more waiting at the door of the great Sanhedrim than would be found under ordinary circumstances. Outside were drawn up animals tendered for service of the transport corps, and of other departments, from the sleek Arab to the Kattyawar tat; there were also mules and horned cattle offering themselves for her Majesty's service, which by the way few seem to notice, that it is not at all certain whether the cost of the expedition will be defrayed by the Indian Government, or whether it will be placed side by side with the expenses of the banquet to the Sultan. In the Marine Department the work is very animating, the dockyard being kept open all night at water tank making. Every vessel that could be got hold of has been taken up; only a few, whose captains object to their ships being mutilated by the ruthless saw of the Government carpenters, have not been chartered. It was intended at first to build a landing pier at Massowah, but a more eligible landing place has been found at Anseley or Annesley, as some write it, Bay. Railway sleepers and rails have also been sent forward, with a view of running a tramway from the coast to the interior, which has raised a very natural suspicion that our troops will rest awhile in the palace of the Emperor. The love of war has taken so great a hold on our youthful Wellingtons, that already some are cutting, thrusting, and parrying about our streets with their driving whips, and in this harmless little amusement managed a few evenings ago to strike some Parsee ladies, and the result is that a shindy has ensued. Fortunately or unfortunately, I incline to the latter, the brave fellows were not recognised, and have hitherto escaped the punishment and exposure they so richly deserve, and which I hope to see overtake all who wantonly insult females.—Correspondent of Delhi Gazette.

FALL OF THE WEST BALCONY OF THE POONA COUNCIL HOUSE.—At five A.M. on Saturday morning the west balcony of the Poona Council House came down with a crash—without, happily, doing any one any harm.—Observer, Oct. 29.

PREVENTION OF DEBT IN THE NATIVE ARMY.—The Government of Bombay, in a communication to the Government of India, have recommended the adoption in the native army of provisions analogous to those of the Mutiny Act and Articles of War for British Troops, for the prevention of debt amongst the native troops, and to pass an enactment to prevent tradespeople giving credit to the men of the native army, so that in the event of their giving them credit they cannot be sued for debt in any court of law. The latter Government have sanctioned the adoption of the scheme, its introduction and enforcement to be only prospective, and after due warning.

DISCOVERY OF A REEF IN THE PHILIPPINE ARCHIPELAGO.—A reef in the Philippine Archipelago, not noted in the charts, has been discovered by Captain Tagg, of the Spanish merchant steamer Sud Oeste. The reef is off St. Fernando, in lat. about 16 deg. 35 min. N., long. 0 deg. 45 min. W. of Manila. Captain Tagg says:—"This reef I passed one morning under full steam, when my attention was called by seeing the bottom quite clearly. I immediately stopped the engines, and took the following bearings: South point the isthmus of San Fernando S. 50 deg. E., and the Church of San Juan to the northward E. to 10 deg. N. These bearings are of course only approximations; I sounded first in 5 fathoms, continued my course dead slow to the southward, and had 5, 6, 6, 7, 9, and from thence out of Soundings in 50 fathoms.—Bombay Times, Nov. 1.

THE LATE RAILWAY ACCIDENT NEAR LANOWLEE.—The Consulting Engineer for Railways, in a letter dated the 24th of September last, submitted to Government copy of a letter from the agent of the G. I. P. Railway Company, on the subject of the trial of the driver Wiseman, by whose negligence an accident occurred on the 29th August last near Lanowlee, and requested the special attention of Government to the case. Major General Rivers remarks, that "if juries acquit contrary to evidence, and a failure of justice results, it is equivalent to a general declaration to all the company's servants that gross negligence will go unpunished, and that it becomes evident that juries at Poona have not a due sense of their responsibility, and that trial by jury is there at least premature." The Governor in Council ordered Major General Rivers' letter to be sent to the magistrate of Poona for information.

NEW EASTERN BOULEVARD.—The completion of the portion of this new Boulevard from Bazaar, Gate-street, to the Elphinstone Circle has been sanctioned, and Government have ordered the work to be commenced at once, which we presume it will be, seeing that Captain Finch has invited the early submission of tenders. The estimated cost of the work is Rs. 58,216. The revised plan necessitates an alteration in the boundary wall of the G. I. P. Railway terminus, to which we believe the railway officials have no objection, provided the curve at the entrance to the station is flattened; but this point Government reserve for future consideration, pending the result of the negotiations in respect of the ultimate location of the station. A house which now projects beyond the intended line of street improvement is to be bought up if it can be obtained at a reasonable price; if not, it is to remain, and the width of the road is to be somewhat reduced at that point by omitting the footpath on the side next to the railway wall.—Bombay Builder.

FREAKS OF NATURE.—A Pathan, with whom we were in conversation a few days ago, informed us that last year a fall of red snow took place in a district of Cabool, which district has not only escaped our memory but would be difficult to write, and almost impossible to pronounce, ending in the eternal uskzye. On referring to some statistics by us we do not find that any such phenomena has ever occurred in India, simply because snow does not fall at all within the tropics or within the influence of the sun, for many degrees north and south. But, we did find some extraordinary facts which we reproduce as curiosities, and which prove that dame Nature, whatever may be said to the contrary, does occasionally indulge in freaks. Thus a mass of ice the size of an elephant fell near Seringapatam in the time of Tippeco-Sultan. In 1836 a mass fell in Candish. In 1838 another near Dharwar nineteen by ten feet in circumference, and a hail storm at Bangalore in 1822 in which the stones were the size of pumpkins. Since the above, in 1853, we hear of a hail storm at another place—but Sind has been passed over in this respect. We may return to this subject.—Sind News, Oct. 24.

THE COTTON TRADE IN SIND.—Notwithstanding the depression of the cotton trade we are happy to observe, from the report of Mr. Cole, Collector of Customs at Kurrachee, for the year 1866-67, that the trade of Sind continues to increase in a steady and healthy manner. Although the actual returns only include eleven months, in consequence of the alteration of the financial year, Mr. Cole has calculated the totals for a full year to facilitate comparison with previous years. According to this calculation there has been an increase of Rs. 45,78,205 in the imports, and a decrease of Rs. 25,68,519 in the exports. The increase in the imports was in a great measure caused by the large amounts of treasure imported, although cotton piece-goods, machinery, metals, and sugar have helped to swell the amount. The decrease in the exports arises principally from cotton, indigo, and wool, for there has been an increase in the exportation of grains, oils, silk, and seeds. During the year 113 square rigged vessels, and 1,588 native ships sailed from Kurrachee. A comparison of the trade of the port for the last ten years shows that the imports have increased from Rs. 68,56,657 in 1856-57 to Rs. 2,98,71,655 in 1866-67, and the exports from Rs. 73,45,222 to Rs. 2,52,89,893, whilst the Customs duties have risen from Rs. 81,550 to Rs. 4,23,256 during the same period.

A NATIVE STUDENT CHEATED BY A FAKIR.—Ignorant and superstitious natives now and then put implicit reliance on Brahmins, Beraages, and Fakirs; but when we hear of any educated native following the example of his ignorant countrymen we have reason to blame his folly. A week ago, while a Hindoo student of the Elphinstone College, and a law graduate, was looking down from the window of his house, near the Baboola tank, a Fakir happened to pass by that road, and asked the student to give him pansooparee. The young student, who entertained strange imaginations, like his ignorant countrymen, about these Fakirs, immediately called him up. The Fakir went up and sat in a room. He talked with the Hindoo student for some time, and thoroughly impressed on his mind that he was really a man who could miraculously create wealth. The student was much astonished with his supernatural powers of creating wealth, and assured the Fakir that he wanted that very thing. The Bawa remained quiet for a few minutes, and then asked the Hindoo student to give him a pinch of ashes, which he did. The Fakir rubbed it in his hand, when something like rice fell on the ground. The student was very much amazed, and thought that the Bawa was a wonderful man. The Bawa showed him some other astonishing feats, after which the student gave him sixteen rupees and a turban. Before he left the place the Bawa gave the Hindoo three packets, which he told him to put severally in three of his boxes, and that within twenty-four hours he would be the greatest man of the day. The ignorant student believed everything the impostor said. He put the packets in his boxes, and after twenty-four hours he went and opened them, when he found to his utter astonishment that he had been completely befooled by the Fakir. A day or two ago he happened to meet the Fakir on the road, and gave him in custody of the police on a charge of cheating.—Bombay Gazette, Nov. 14.

DINNER TO MR. MILLETT.—A numerous party of gentlemen dined, at the invitation of Captain Methven, on board the P. and O. Co.'s S.S. Delhi, on Tuesday evening, October 29, on the occasion of a first-class Albert medal being presented to Mr. Millett, the second officer of that vessel, for the brave exertions he made at the beginning of the monsoon of last year in assisting to save the crew of the pilgrim-ship Diamond, which was wrecked off Breach Candy. The Albert medal is awarded by her Majesty, and is only given on a recommendation from the Board of Trade. The medal intended for Mr. Millett was forwarded by the Secretary of State for India to the Government of Bombay, which thereafter transmitted it to Captain Young, C.B., Superintendent of Marine, with a request that he would present it in a suitable manner to the gentleman for whom it was intended. The medal, which is of gold, bears on one side the words, "For gallantry in saving life at sea," and on the other the words, "Wreck of the Diamond, 20th June, 1866, presented in the name of her Majesty to Mr. W. H. Millett." In handing it over to the recipient, Captain Young mentioned the fact that Mr. Millett already wore decorations from the Royal Humane Society and the Shipwrecked Seamen and Mariners' Royal Benevolent Society, and he expressed his satisfaction that the medal had been gained by saving and not by killing life. Mr. Millett, in acknowledging the presentation, expressed his feelings of gratification in a few simple sailor-like words. A number of toasts were drunk in the course of the evening, including "the Army and Navy," to which Commodore Heath replied on behalf of the navy, and Colonel Forbes, of the 3rd Light Cavalry, on behalf of the army. Commodore Heath proposed "the Transport Service," a service which he regarded as of the greatest importance in an expedition such as was now going to Abyssinia; and he coupled with the toast the name of Captain Methven, who, in the course of some remarks, expressed the satisfaction it afforded him to see one of his officers decorated with the Albert Medal.

INDIAN TRAMWAY COMPANY.—It appears from the report of the directors of the Indian Tramway Company (Limited), to be presented at the meeting on the 16th inst., that the Secretary of State for India has resolved to guarantee that the dividend shall be made up to 3 per cent. per annum upon the company's present paid-up capital of £100,000 from 1st Jan. next "until such time as it may be deemed desirable to proceed with the extension applied for, in which case such arrangements as may then appear suitable for the purpose will be made."

Official Papers.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ON AN OFFICIAL CAREER FOR NATIVES.

Read despatch from the Secretary of State, dated May 31 last.

Resolution.—With reference to a remark occurring in Mr. Davies's report on the revenue administration of Oude during the year 1865-66, to the effect that "there is no greater administrative evil in our system than the manner in which many native officers of ability are, at an early period of life, shorn of all incentive to exertion by the bar set to their promotion." Sir Stafford Northcote has directed the Government of India to take this important question into careful review.

2. The Gov. Gen. in Council is fully alive to the urgent political necessity that the progress of education has created for opening up to natives of ability and character a more important, dignified, and lucrative sphere of employment in the administration of British India.

3. By the creation of a class of officers known in the Regulation Provinces as deputy collectors, and in the Non-Regulation Provinces as extra assistant commissioners, much has of late years been done to improve the status of the Uncovenanted Service. But those whom this change has chiefly profited have been Englishmen, not the natives of India. Several of the former, on account of distinguished services performed during the mutinies or at other times, have obtained promotion to the grades of assistant commissioner and deputy commissioner, and one (in Oude) is now acting as commissioner of a division. But no native has yet advanced beyond the grade of extra assistant.

4. With regard to the Regulation Provinces, the law reserves all higher appointments for the Civil Service; and natives wishing for advancement must follow the example set them by a Bengalee gentleman, and qualify in their youth for admission to the Civil Service by competition. Moreover, it must be remembered that the salaries attached to such judicial offices as are open to Uncovenanted officers have quite recently obtained a considerable increase. Leaving aside, therefore, those territories, his Excellency in Council looks rather to the Non-Regulation Provinces as a field in which to satisfy the legitimate ambition of deserving natives.

5. His Excellency in Council is prepared at once to recognise the eligibility of natives of approved character for promotion to the rank and emoluments of assistant commissioners and Small Cause Court judges in the Punjab, Oude, the Central Provinces, British Burmah, Assam, Coorg, Mysore, and Berar. The local administrations will be requested severally to report the proportion which natives should bear in these appointments relatively to civilians, military men, and uncovenanted Englishmen. In the two provinces last named, the sovereignty of which is not vested in the British Government, the proportion should be larger than can elsewhere be permitted; indeed, as regards Mysore, the recent orders of the Home Government for the preservation of a native dynasty make the more general employment of natives in that country an immediate necessity.

6. In arriving at this decision the Government of India has not overlooked the circumstance that natives entrusted with administrative duties have difficulty in dealing with independent Europeans. The Governor General in Council expects that the local administrations will frame their proposals with due regard to the expediency of providing English officials for all districts in which European settlers or travellers abound.

Ordered, that this resolution be communicated to the Home Department, to the Governments of Bengal and the Punjab, to the Chief Commissioners of Oude, the Central Provinces, and British Burmah, to the Resident at Hyderabad, and to the Commissioner of Mysore and Coorg. Ordered further, that the Home Department be requested to take into consideration (in correspondence with the local Governments) the question whether any scheme can be adopted for giving further effect to the principle of this resolution in any of the territories subordinate to the Governments of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, and the North-Western Provinces.

CONSTITUTION OF THE POLICE ESTABLISHMENT IN INDIA.

The following is a Resolution of the Government of India, dated Simla, Aug. 3, 1867:—

It is not necessary to review here the circumstances under which the new police system in India was organised, and which has largely imparted to it a military character. There is no doubt, however, that, owing to nearly the whole body of officers for the police being originally taken from the army, so much military feeling was introduced, and so much attention paid to military training, as at first seriously to detract from the efficiency of the force for its proper duties; and this evil, though greatly moderated, still continues to exist.

2. The most effectual method which suggested itself to the Government of India for correcting this tendency is the application of the principle on which the Chief Commissioner of Oude has lately been permitted to reorganise the police of that province—namely, by reducing the military element and dividing the force into two branches, one to be composed of armed men with a military training, and the other to be the ordinary civil constabulary. The operation of this principle has previously been found to be very successful in the Punjab, and it might with advantage be gradually extended to other provinces.

8. The grounds which suggest the propriety of making such a division of the force are obvious. There are two main heads under which the duties of the police may be classed—one comprising duties of a quasi-military nature, such as the guarding of jails and treasuries, the escorting of treasure, and the repression of violence; and the other purely civil, the prevention or detection of crime. In some districts, especially those on the frontier, where the police may often have to engage in personal conflict with wild tribes, robbers, or organised bands of criminals, a military organisation to a certain extent is desirable. The organisation of the police should, therefore, be adapted to the varying conditions of the country and the character of the people; and it must consequently rest with the local authorities to decide and arrange what portion of the force should be thoroughly equipped and armed, and what degree of training is absolutely necessary to insure proper discipline, efficiency, and the habit of acting in combination on occasions when an ordinary civil constabulary would be useless. Still, it must be understood that the force, although comprising two elements—a military and a civil, as local circumstances may require—is to be one body, under one responsible head, and at the entire disposal of the civil authorities.

4. With regard to the proportion of military to uncovenanted officers in the police, a fixed standard cannot, of course, be laid down, but must vary in the different administrations according to the strength of the military element required by local circumstances. The question is also affected by the consideration that the employment of a certain number of military officers in the higher posts of the police gives the whole body a social status, which is not a slight advantage in its connection with the civil officers and with the community at large, and which removes an obstacle that might deter eligible men from taking service in the force.

5. At present it appears from the annexed statement, which has been prepared from the records of the Home Department, there are 215 military and 174 uncovenanted in a staff of 389 officers. In every presidency or province the proportions vary—from Bengal, where nearly five-sixths of the officers are uncovenanted, to Bombay, Mysore, and Madras, where all are apparently military. The exigencies of the military service render it no longer possible that it should continue to furnish anywhere even the majority of the officers of the police.

6. The reduction of military officers, however, to whatever standard may eventually be considered adequate in each province must, of course, be effected gradually, both in justice to present incumbents, and to prevent the difficulty which would be felt in securing proper substitutes if a number of vacancies had to be filled up at once.

7. The Governor-general in Council anticipates no great difficulty in effecting gradually such a reduction, because military officers are, as a rule, now no longer desirous of entering the police. The police in all Governments and administrations, except Madras, has been subjected to a careful scrutiny, and large reductions in the higher posts were everywhere made. This measure has largely diminished the attractions formerly held out to military officers to enter the police; but, besides this, the work required from police officers has been generally found to be irksome to military men in comparison with the ordinary duties of their own profession. In short, although the police service under the new organisation still holds out, notwithstanding the reductions that have been made in its high prizes, yet military officers have now equal prospects in their own proper service, while their military duties are usually more agreeable to them.

8. The Governor-general in Council is not prepared to hold out any increased attractions to military officers to enter the police force, to recruit which he is disposed to look to the Uncovenanted Service, native and European; and he believes that from this source a civil constabulary, fully equal to all the practical duties that will be required of it, can be supplied. His Excellency in Council would specially direct the attention of Local Governments to the expediency of increasing the native element in the higher ranks of the police. It is believed that in no department could the ability and local knowledge of native servants of the State of approved fidelity and character be turned to greater advantage.

9. With these remarks the Governor-general in Council will leave the subject for further consideration by the several Local Governments and administrations, whose views and wishes will be allowed to have a prevailing influence in the final settlement of the question.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

LORD LYVEDEN said he wished to offer an explanation with respect to what had fallen from the noble earl at the head of the Government on the previous evening, who had said, in allusion to the remarks which he (Lord Lyveden) had made, that he had entirely approved of the Abyssinian expedition. This was not correct; on the contrary, he (Lord Lyveden) had always disapproved of that expedition. What he had said was, that he approved of the manner in which the expedition was being carried out by her Majesty's Government, but he had also said he thought that no opinion ought to be expressed at the present time as to the expedition itself, but that as it had been begun it ought to be persevered in in such a way as best to insure its success.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—DEC. 6.

THE INDIAN COUNCIL.

MR. LUSK asked the Secretary of State for India whether he could state to the House the names of any members of the Indian Council who might intend retiring from the Council, and the period at which their retirement would take effect.

SIR S. NORTHCOTE: I have received no communication from the Council on the subject.

CONSUL CAMERON AND MR. RASSAM.

COLONEL SYKES asked the Secretary to the Treasury whether the sum of 3,000 dollars in money and the value of presents, stated by Mr. Flad in his letter to the Earl of Clarendon, no date, but received 10th July, 1866, and numbered 30, to have been given to Mr. Consul Cameron by King Theodore, had been accredited to the British Exchequer. And whether the sum of 25,000 German crowns, embracing value in presents, stated by Mr. Flad in the same letter to have been given to Mr. Rassam by King Theodore, had been credited to the British Exchequer; and if not whether any reports of the receipt of these sums by Messrs. Cameron and Rassam had been made to the Government.

MR. HUNT stated that the money in neither case had been credited to her Majesty's exchequer. The matter hardly came within his department, but he had obtained information from the proper quarter, and found that Mr. Rassam reported to Colonel Merewether and also to the Foreign-office that he had received 10,000 dollars as a present from the King, but it appeared from Mr. Flad's letter, that when Mr. Rassam was arrested 6,800 dollars were taken from him. The only money reported by Consul Cameron to have been offered was 1,000 dollars, which he, at the risk of incurring the King's displeasure, had refused to accept. He reported a present of arms which he had accepted on behalf of her Majesty, but in order not to offend the King by a direct refusal of the money, he had handed it over to an officer of the donor.

EAST INDIA IRRIGATION COMPANY.

MR. OTWAY asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was true that the East India Irrigation Company was compelled, by the regulations in India, to charge for their supply of water only one-fifth of the price charged by the Government for its supply; whether he contemplated purchasing the rights and property of this company, and if so, from what source he proposed to take the sum necessary for the purchase; whether any negotiations had been entered into with the chairman or other officers of the company respecting the sum of £50,000, or any other sum to be paid to them as compensation in the event of the purchase; and whether it was his intention to obtain the sanction of Parliament before completing their purchase.

SIR S. NORTHCOTE was not prepared to admit the correctness of the statement in the question. The calculation was made upon the price at which the company supplied the water to the North-western Provinces under the regulations of the Government. The price was much lower in Orissa than in the North-western Provinces, if the quantity alone were considered; but if all the elements of the supply were taken into consideration it would be found pretty equal. It was contemplated to purchase the works of the company. The Government were to pay the company the par value of their shares in cash, and £50,000 was to be given to the shareholders, in order to enable them, if they chose, to compensate their officers, it being distinctly understood that there would be no claim on the Government. It was not necessary for him to call upon Parliament to interfere in the matter.

THE CASE OF DR. BEKE.

MR. NEWDEGATE moved for an address for a copy of a letter addressed by Dr. Beke to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, dated the 14th day of October, 1867, relative to a conversation between him and Mr. Palgrave, at Cairo, in December, 1865. The hon. member said that his notice ought to have stood after that of the hon. member for Southwark, who had a notice on the same subject, and if so, it might have been moved as an addition to the hon. member's motion. He would simply ask the noble lord whether he had any objection to lay the paper referred to on the table.

MR. LAYARD said that his notice was intended to include that of the hon. member, and he should like to know whether the papers would be produced.

LORD STANLEY was glad that his hon. friend and the hon. member opposite had put the question to him. He did not feel that he could refuse the papers. The reason he did not insert them in the Blue-book in the first instance was because they referred to a private dispute almost amounting to a quarrel, and had all parties been willing to have adopted the course, he should have thought it much better to have kept the papers from public notice. However, as both sides desired their production, he did not see how her Majesty's Government could decline to produce them. He would suggest to his hon. friend that as there were in the letter of Dr. Beke some passages attacking persons not in England they should be excluded, and in all probability Dr. Beke would wish them to be. It was only subject to such a condition that he could give the papers.

MR. LAYARD said that the noble lord having published in the Blue-book the despatch alluding to the correspondence he must persist in his motion, unless the whole correspondence were given. He appealed to the noble lord to do so after the expressions which had been used in debate, and said that he must divide the House on the question if the Government did not accede to his motion.

MR. NEWDEGATE rose; but

THE SPEAKER said that inasmuch as they were now engaged in putting and answering questions, and the present was a discussion with reference to a return, the hon. gentleman was out of order.

MR. NEWDEGATE said that the noble lord having put a question to him referring to the omission of certain passages in the correspondence, he only rose to say that he should be very happy to be guided by the discretion of the noble lord.

IN REPLY TO MR. POWELL,

SIR S. NORTHCOTE said that the date of the letter from Colonel Merewether to the right hon. baronet, which appeared in the papers, was the 12th of November.

ABYSSINIA. — CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN DR. BEKE AND OTHERS AND THE FOREIGN-OFFICE.

MR. LAYARD moved for a copy of the correspondence between Dr. Beke, Mr. Purday, Mr. Palgrave, and the Foreign-office, referred to in the letter from Dr. Beke to Lord Clarendon, dated the 11th June, 1866, published in a recent Blue-book. After what had passed in the House it was, he said, but fair that all the correspondence which had taken place on the subject should be produced.

LORD STANLEY said the Government stood neutral as to these personal quarrels between the hon. member and Dr. Beke; but on the whole he thought it better to agree to the production of the whole of the correspondence.

MR. NEWDEGATE regretted that the motion had been made, but, as it had been, he moved, as an amendment, to add to the motion that a copy of a letter, dated Oct. 14, 1867, addressed by Dr. Beke to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, relative to a conversation between him and Mr. Palgrave, at Cairo, in December, 1865, be also produced.

MR. OTWAY objected to the country being put to the expense of this correspondence.

MR. NEWDEGATE'S amendment was negatived, and the original motion carried.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

MR. D. GRIFFITH asked if it was true that Sir William Mansfield, contrary to the opinion of Sir R. Napier, was offering a bounty of £3. 4s. per man to persons joining the Abyssinian expedition. The reason why he put the question was because the Secretary of State for India had the other night assured them that the entire control of the expedition was left in the hands of Sir Robert Napier, which could not be the case if Sir William Mansfield was at liberty to interfere in it.

SIR S. NORTHGOTE replied that to the best of his recollection no official intimation of such a circumstance had reached the India-office. It had been mentioned to him in private letters, however, that Sir William Mansfield thought there ought to be a bounty offered to the men, and that Sir R. Napier did not think a bounty necessary; but he was not aware that any steps had been taken to act upon that opinion.

MR. HUNT having moved that the House at its rising do adjourn till Thursday, the 13th of February,

MR. SCHREIBER called attention to the absence, from the papers laid before Parliament, of all official information respecting Mr. Rassam's mission between the 28th January and the 18th April, 1866.

SIR P. O'BRIEN wished to mention a circumstance which he had heard in town in the course of that morning. He had heard that a French officer, the Comte de Bresson, who was formerly in the service of the King of the Two Sicilies, had, with some other of his countrymen, established a kind of French colony in Abyssinia, and was on the most friendly terms with King Theodore, so much so that that potentate put no restriction upon his movements in regard to frequent journeys which he made between the seat of his colony and Paris. He wished, if that was the case, to know why the Government had not made use of the comte as a mediator in this Abyssinian complication? He hoped there was no objection on account of his being a foreigner raised to his mediation, which he (Sir P. O'Brien) had heard had been offered to the Government. He thought every step ought to have been taken to secure a pacific solution of the difficulty before rushing upon a war which, if it lasted beyond April next, would cost the country not two, but twelve millions of money.

Colonel Sykes said there was ground for hoping the expedition would not cost twelve millions, for he understood from a letter written by Mr. Flad that King Theodore had only some 8,000 men with him—a force so insignificant that a couple of squadrons of cavalry could ride over it. Nor was that all; it was reported that the King of Shoa, who had been held prisoner by King Theodore for eleven years, but who had escaped two years ago, and had taken Magdala, was friendly to her Majesty, and had received presents from her. (Cheers.)

LIVES OF INDIAN OFFICERS,

Illustrative of the History of the Civil and Military Services of India.

BY JOHN WILLIAM KAYE,

Author of "The History of the War in Afghanistan," &c.

Contents.

THE REV. HENRY MARTIN.	SIR HENRY LAWRENCE.
SIR CHARLES METCALFE.	General JAMES NEILL.
SIR ALEXANDER BURNES.	Brig.-Gen. JOHN NICHOLSON
LORD CORNWALLIS.	Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY.
SIR JOHN MALCOLM.	Major ELDRED POTTINGER.
THE HON. MOUNTSTUART	Major D'ARCY TODD.
ELPHINSTONE.	Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and, by their own unaided exertions, carved their way to fame and fortune." J. W. KAYE.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

From the EXAMINER.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

During our variable winter it is prudent for all to rectify any ailment afflicting them; but it is incumbent on the aged suffering under ulcerations and similar debilitating causes, to have them removed, or worse consequences will follow. This Ointment is their remedy; on its powers all may confidently rely; it will not simply put their sores out of sight, but anticipate the source of mischief, extract the corroding poison, and stimulate nature to fill up the ulcer with sound, healthy granulations that will abide through life. Under this treatment "bad legs" soon become sound, scabrous skins cast off their scales, and acrofulous sores cease to annoy. Such hope for the diseased was unknown in former days.

CHLORODYNE

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when required. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

These exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured. As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health, after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec. 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne: I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at M-seina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. OURSELVES.

Early in the beginning of next year ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL will appear in the attractions of new type and double columns; a change which our readers will the better appreciate, if it enables us to offer them more matter in a more readable shape. Another change, which the Publishers hope will prove yet more acceptable, seems demanded by the altered circumstances of the day. Telegrams and daily newspapers have virtually taken up one portion of our old ground. Before each number of the Mail can be put together, the Morning Papers have already circulated among their readers all the latest heads of Eastern Intelligence; and who, in these days, does not get a glance at some one of the Morning Papers? Our news, therefore, can hardly be quite fresh to any one, while the haste with which we have hitherto published was little likely to ensure sufficient accuracy, fulness, and digestion of details. Any improvement in this direction can only be attained by a reasonable regard to the old proverb, "The more haste, the less speed." By a delay of two or three days between the arrival of each Mail and the publication of this Journal, we hope henceforth to gratify our readers' palates without leaving their appetites unrefreshed. It is our purpose, therefore, to publish once a week, on THURSDAYS, leading off with Thursday, the 2nd January: the present being our last issue under the old system. Such a course will enable us to verify, select, and arrange our matter, while yet more space will be gained by publishing the General Orders in an alphabetical and improved form. And the new arrangement will gradually fit in with the change about to be effected in the management of the Overland Mails, which in a few weeks will begin arriving regularly once a week, instead of four times a month.

In the Editorial Department also we can reckon upon receiving the aid of fresh and varied talent for the discussion of questions demanding special knowledge and wide experience. With more space at our disposal we shall have the more room for handling subjects hitherto sparingly touched, and thus increase the interest which for so many years has attached to the INDIAN MAIL.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE latest dates by the Bombay Mail of this morning are from Calcutta, Nov. 23; Madras, Nov. 23; Delhi, Nov. 23; Bombay, Nov. 29.

The arrangements for sending off the Bengal brigade from Calcutta were already completed. The force would be ready to embark on Dec. 1, but Sir R. Napier was in no hurry to land them in Annesley Bay until preparations had been made for feeding and forwarding them inland.

The Bombay papers teem with letters from Abyssinia, all telling much the same tale about scarcity of water, lazy natives, excellent sport with all kinds of game, gradual cooling of the weather, magnificent scenery, endless stir and bustle on all sides. One doubt is already dispelled. Indian silver seems to pass with the natives quite as readily as Maria Theresa dollars. Anything with the true silver ring would probably go down among these "matted-haired barbarians."

The Second Brigade from Bombay was to have sailed for the seat of war by the beginning of December; but a letter from Colonel Phayre had delayed its departure for the present—perhaps for the same reason which has delayed the sending of the Calcutta Brigade. It had been resolved to organise a Coolie Brigade for Abyssinia, under the fit command of Major Nuttall. Colonel Phayre's official despatches give a clear description of the country through which the troops would have to pass, and, without shirking the difficulties of the road, hold out a cheering prospect of easily surmounting them.

Sir John Lawrence and his host of followers returned to Calcutta on the 19th November. After eight days of State pageantry at Lucknow he must have felt thankful for a little rest. The great Durbar was a magnificent sight, on a truly Eastern scale of gorgeous splendour. Five hundred tall elephants, carrying three thousand natives of rank and distinction, all blazing alike in gold and silver, and precious stones and bright colours, passed in review before the Viceroy all down the Victoria-road, which cuts right through the city. In Maun Singh's address to Sir J. Lawrence he praised the Viceroy for completing Lord Canning's generous policy, and promised all just and kind behaviour on the part of the Talookdars towards their tenants. Sir John answered in fitting language, earnestly reminding his hearers of their responsibilities, exhorting them to justice and tender care for the people, and assuring them that much more depended on their good sense and fairness than on the laws.

On the following day the Viceroy laid the first stone of the Canning College. Every day brought its ceremony, and every evening its ball or dinner. At the ball given by the officers of the Oudh Commission, the memory of Sir Henry Lawrence inspired a graceful speech from the Chief Commissioner, which was gracefully answered by Sir Henry's distinguished brother.

The Calcutta papers seem to have written out all they had to say on the great cyclone in former issues. They are barren of fresh matter. All we know is that Rs. 50,000 had been already subscribed for the relief of the sufferers, who are mostly native; and that the Governor of Bengal forewent the gaieties of Lucknow in order to be of use on the scene of suffering.

Sir John Lawrence has directed—that is, ordered—the Ruler of Cashmere to lower the enormous duties charged on goods passing to India from Yarkund. The Palampore Fair, founded by Mr. Forsyth, late Commissioner of Jullunder, proved an unexpected success. Traders from Yarkund, Khoten, Cashmere, and Thibet, all flocked thither, and went away delighted with the amount of business done in grapes, figs, shawls, and other goods.

The Delhi Gazette announces the death of Captain Stanley, of the 23rd Welsh Fusiliers, by a fall from his horse at Jubulpore. He was a near kinsman of the Earl of Derby. Colonel Eden, late agent at Rajpootana, had died at Ahmedabad on the 14th of November on his way home.

LATEST trustworthy news from Abyssinia describes Theodore as having set fire to Debra Tabor, and thence trying to fight his way to Magdala through swarms of enemies. What became of the captives at Debra Tabor is still matter for conjecture, if not for mingiving. Probably they were in attendance on the King. Down to the 28th October the captives in both places were reported well. Somehow or another they had kept up a regular intercourse with Massowah, and had no lack of food or money. If only Colonel Merewether could reach Magdala before Theodore! Meanwhile the advanced brigade of our troops was at Senafeh on the 7th Dec., in a good climate, with plenty of water, and among friends. The Chief of Tigreh was watching with six thousand men the British movements; but we have no reason to fear treachery in that quarter. Colonel Merewether prophesies an easy march into Abyssinia. The Sindh Brigade had reached Zoola. In Annesley Bay there was short allowance of water, and disease was alarmingly rife among the horses and mules.

A late telegram announces the death of Colonel Kennedy, C.B., commanding the Military Train. He had been sent to Egypt to superintend the despatch of the mules for the Abyssinian Expedition, and had nearly completed his task last week, when he was seized with dysentery, dying on Wednesday night at Cairo. He was a clever as well as a distinguished officer.

THE lamented death of Lieut-General Christopher Godby deprives the Bengal army of an officer distinguished alike for the length and the character of his service. An ensign of 1806, he was engaged in the Nepalese war of 1815-16; served in Cattack during the next three years; was severely wounded in the second siege of Bhurtpore; commanded a brigade at Aliwal, and another at Chilianwalla, whence he was transferred to the command of Lahore for the rest of that campaign. His services in the Punjab campaign were rewarded with the post of Aide-de-Camp to the Queen. As successor to Colonel Frushard in command of the 2nd Fusiliers he succeeded in winning a large share of his predecessor's great popularity, both on parade and in the mess-room. His coolness at Chilianwalla in a critical moment is still remembered by some of those who served under him at Subathoo.

A LITTLE BILL.—We understand that the Accountant-General of Bombay has intimated to the Government of India that the sum of Rs. 75 lakhs will be required before the 1st of December, 1867, to meet the expenses of the Abyssinian Expedition. Instructions have accordingly been issued to the authorities of the Bank of Bengal to make the above-mentioned remittance to the Bombay Government as early as practicable.—Daily News.

ARRIVAL OF THE HEAVY INDIA AND CHINA MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Dec. 19.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Delta, with the heavy portion of the above mails, arrived this day. She brings sixty-nine passengers, £57,119 in specie, and a general cargo, including 1,370 bales of silk, value £110,000. Up the Channel the Delta experienced northerly winds and squally weather. On the 7th she spoke the British brig John Hayes; on the 15th, the steamer Bangalore; and on the 17th, the transport number 17, steering northward. The French brig France and the English schooner Kate came into collision off Almeira. The bulwarks of both vessels were damaged. The French barque Intrepide, with forty-sixty passengers for Monte Video, and another vessel, name unknown, stranded off Palmores River during a gale on the 11th; all saved.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

INDIAN WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

FOR some time the question of a reformed system of weights and measures has been mooted in India alike by the Government and the press. In 1865 the Bombay Committee recommended the introduction of the English system, modified by some kind of decimal division, starting from the pound and gallon as units, but not meddling with the old English arrangement of inches, feet, and yards. Colonel Strachey's Bengal Committee has not yet formally closed its proceedings, but there is a strong belief in Calcutta that he himself insists not only on a thoroughly decimal system, but on an absolute acceptance of the French system, with its whole array of outlandish nomenclature.

The decimal system by all means, so far as it can easily be made to go. But why the French system in particular; and why, oh why, that bewildering jargon which centigrades and kilometres suggest to English ears? It sounds scientific to say that the French measurement starts from a given fraction of the earth's circumference; but even if the measurement were as accurate as it is the reverse, why choose that particular fraction of that particular quantity? Is the principle of our English feet and yards, or of the Indian cubit, less sound or rational than the French? And how long will it take to accustom millions of unlearned folk to the difference between a kilometre and a centimetre?

India, no doubt, is sadly in want of a uniform system of weights and measures. At present a seer, a koss, or a guz carries very different meanings in different, even in neighbouring districts. But the terms are common to all alike, and the best thing we can do is to make them represent in all cases the same degree of weight or length. A seer, for instance, may be fixed henceforward as equivalent to two English pounds, and a guz be everywhere assimilated to an English yard. It would then be easy to apply the decimal system to the multiples and component parts of these units, by making the seer contain forty tolabs, and fixing the maund at forty seers, and the candy at twenty maunds. For measures of capacity the seer might be taken as answering to the English quart. We agree with Colonel De Lisle's second thoughts in preferring the quart to the gallon as a standard for India. It would then be eligible to make the Indian gallon four seers or five, according as either the duodecimal or the decimal reckoning came to be adopted for measures of capacity.

If the votes of Indian authorities have any weight, we must retain the former principle for measures of length, to the extent, at least, of defining the native yard as equal to three feet or thirty-six inches. As the general feeling in India favours such a decision, there is no great need for rejecting it on behalf of a more uniform method. The length of the koss might be settled at almost any figure; at two thousand namely, or three thousand yards. With regard to square measure, opinion in Bombay accepts the English acre as a well known and convenient standard, which Colonel De Lisle would divide into decimal lengths by the English chain of twenty-two yards.

With regard to coinage, there can be no doubt of the advantage of starting from the rupee as equivalent to the English florin. Make the rupee worth twenty annas, and each anna equal to ten pie, and you get the decimal principle fully established in this branch of the question.

BERAR UNDER BRITISH MANAGEMENT.

If Sir Richard Temple has not drawn too rosy a picture of things as they are in the province lately transferred to his charge, the Nizam cannot add to his other grievances any reasonable censure of English stewardship in the Assigned Districts of Hyderabad. Sir Richard's report, drawn up mainly from the materials furnished by his predecessor, Sir George Yule, attests the great progress recently made in Berar, under the auspices of a Government which seldom fails to do its duty for want of will, whatever exceptions may be taken to its want of knowledge.

A broad valley walked in on the north by the Santpoora Range of hills, on the south by the Ajunta, and covered with a network of streamlets running down from either line of hills to feed the Poorna river that flows through it, such is a broad surface view of the greater part of Berar. The remainder of it stretches up the slopes and highlands of the Ajunta Range. One broad coverlet of black loam spreads over underlying masses of trap and basalt; and over the loam at harvest time spreads a bright sheet of full crops; thanks to a regular supply of genial rain and the natural industry of a dense agricultural population. With a railway traversing the whole length of the valley, and with the great development of its cotton-fields and marts, Sir R. Temple may well describe it as "one of the most promising tracts he has ever seen in India."

When the Nizam's financial troubles caused the transfer of this fruitful region into British hands, its general condition was far from flourishing. Misrule had turned its natural resources to sorry account. Its rich fields were but half tilled; numbers of its people had emigrated across the Wurdah, into a district which still showed the civilising traces of British agency, having been managed by British officers during the long minority of one of its rulers. But a change for the better soon came over the scene. The lands which had lain fallow were once more brought under the plough and the spade; hundreds of emigrant families left their new homes in the Nagpore villages, to settle down again in the birthplaces of their fathers. English rule was not for them the disaster which so many friends of the native people are wont to imagine it in all cases.

But a new start was given to the well-doing of Berar by the demand for cotton consequent on the American war. That event, to use Sir R. Temple's own words, "positively electrified Berar." Cotton, always some of its many staples, speedily became king of all. Everything else, even grain, had to make way for its growing needs. The price of labour rose with the spread of cotton culture, and the development of railways and roads throughout the district gave full employment to all who were willing to work at high wages. Money flowed into the valley, and the labouring classes grew comparatively rich. In the course of six years the State income has risen from thirty-two to sixty-two lakhs of rupees—nearly double; and the increase has not yet done growing. Other provinces in Central India have not indeed stood still; but in none has the advance been so rapid as that of Berar.

Saddled with the charges for the Nizam's contingent and with the cost of a Civil Service about twice as expensive as it used to be, Berar can yet afford to lay out in three years more than sixteen lakhs and a half on public works. A regiment of infantry, half a regiment of cavalry, and a battery of guns, all native, are found more than enough to garrison the country. From the standpoint of the civil magistrate its general condition seems thoroughly satisfactory. Crimes of violence are comparatively few, while the courts have their hands full of peaceful lawsuits. The people are described as enjoying the largest measure of kind treatment at the hands of hard-worked but capable and just-minded officials, under whose charge the settlement of the land revenue and landed tenures has been successfully carried out. For a tax of about fifteen annas an acre yearly the peasant may cultivate his own land, secure from all chance of a raised assessment during the next thirty years.

The local powers have also been doing their best to repair, or at least arrest the mischief caused by the destruction of forest timber. They have laid the foundations of "a system of forestry and forest-conservancy," whose aim will be, not only to keep up the present acreage of woodland on the borders, but also to plant woods and copees all about the open country.

A Special Commissioner looks after everything connected with the growth of cotton. Apparently he must have work enough to do; for the railway—from Nagpore to Bombay—seems quite unequal to carrying off in good time the vast stores of cotton entrusted to its care. For weeks together acres on acres of cotton-bales might be seen in the railway yards, left to take care of themselves, and exposed to every kind of damage from accident or design. Now these acres are "divided into squares and streets; every compartment of bales having its administrative apparatus, watchmen, fire-engine, flags, and the like, all complete, and each of the many thousands of bales entered in a register, and awaiting its turn for lading." Attempts have been made, and are still making, to improve the staple grown in Berar, and tons of Hingunhat seed have been distributed among the people. European energy and skill have also been engaged in improving the old methods of working up the gathered wool.

Nor have the mental wants of the people been overlooked. A department of public instruction has been formed, which can already point to eight thousand boys instructed in the Government schools. Here, at least, if the instruction be worth the name, is a good foundation laid for further progress. If things continue in Berar as they have begun, the Nizam's insolvency will have been less regrettable than the obligation, if such there be, to render him back his pawned estates.

THE STORY OF MR. RASSAM'S MISSION.

THE Bombay Times of India has lately published in full the diary kept by Dr. Blanc, a colleague and afterwards fellow-captive of Mr. Rassam, our envoy to King Theodore. It is much too long, of course, for our purposes; but a condensed summary of it will interest those who have not seen the original.

Mr. Rassam and Dr. Blanc left Aden together on the 20th July, 1864, for Mas-sowah, one of the many coral islands that abound in the Red Sea. It is a small low-lying island, about 200 yards from the mainland, pretty to look at from afar, with its white houses embosomed in green groves that cast their shadows into the blue waters of the bay; but, on a nearer view, surrounded by mangrove swamps, a sandy sun-baked beach, backed by a number of wretched squalid huts—all making up a picture of "sun, dirt, and desolation." A few two-storied houses hold the Turkish officials, a few Banians, and a very select number of European merchants and consuls. The Pasha's palace is pre-eminent for ugliness, filth, and foul smells. Wooden huts, thatched with straw, and sometimes built out on piles into the sea, are interspersed with a few wretched little mosques, built of coral whitewashed. A bazaar, swarming with flies, stenches, unwashed Bedouins, Bashi-bazooks, women, and so forth, completes the work of disenchantment. On the eastern side of the island are the fort, the mission buildings, and the burial-ground. "Tej," of which King Theodore seems very fond, and araki, made from honey, are to be had in the bazaar; but nearly all the drinking water is brought over daily from the mainland—and brackish enough it is.

To the north of this lovely spot are a few villages scattered over a sandy, desolate plain, whereon none but the hardiest plants, cactuses, aloes, senna plants, &c., manage to live. Only round the dwellings of European Consuls are any signs of wooded verdure to be seen. The wells everywhere are shallow, with a tendency to grow brackish, which proper cleaning out, thinks Dr. Blanc, would generally cure. Of the good that might be done by Artesian wells, like those in the Sahara, he has the highest opinion. At Zoola and Ailat there are some hot mineral springs, to which birds and beasts resort for drinking, and human beings crowd for imagined relief from all kinds of diseases.

The people of Massowah and the neighbouring villages—ten thousand perhaps in all—are a mixed breed of Turks, Arabs, and Africans; brown of hue, mostly well-featured, of middle height, ignorant, superstitious, and displaying the vices rather than the virtues of their forefathers. The men are apt to be lazy, leaving much of the hard work to the women and girls; the latter of whom begin at eight years to earn a livelihood by drawing and carrying water. These young ladies are given to wear nose-rings, usually of copper, which was superseded by shirt-buttons during the doctor's stay. "Our buttons," he writes, "were in constant demand" for native noses.

Passing over the climate of Massowah, which must bear a strong family resemblance to that of Sukkur and Aden, and just noting by the way the ravages wrought for years past by locusts among the crops of the adjacent Sambar country, let us accompany Dr. Blanc on his journey inland to the presence of Theodore. It was not till the 15th October, 1865, that the mission, composed of Mr. Rassam, Lieutenant Prideaux, and Dr. Blanc, left Massowah for the last time, with a suitable train of servants, baggage, and presents for the "Emperor," who had bidden them to let him know when they reached Metemma. They were to travel, at his order, by "the roundabout way of the Soudan." Three days' marching through a dreary sand-waste, crossed by dry watercourses, which at certain seasons suddenly become mighty torrents, brought them to Ain, into "a lovely valley, watered by a small winding stream," and rich with all the wealth of tropical vegetation. From Ain they followed the windings of the river twenty miles north-eastward to Mahaber, the lovely valley sometimes compressed between upright walls of trachyte or basalt, then broadening into "miniature green plateaux, bordered by conical hills," clothed to the top with mimosa and cactus, among which herds of antelopes bounded to and fro, to the seeming discomposure of numerous baboons, while bright-feathered singing-birds and flocks of guinea-fowl paid small heed to the frequent sound of the travellers' firearms.

From Mahaber they travelled west and north-west, across the Anseba river, four thousand feet above the sea-level, to Haboob, through a country well-wooded and scored by small streams. Thence by a steep pass they descended two thousand feet into the lowlands of Barka, a broad plain covered at that time with tall sun-browned grass and stunted mimosa. Lions, leopards, hyænas, here take the place of antelopes and guinea fowls. At Zagga they came across the Bani Amers, a tribe of pure Arab race, speaking Arabic, and looking like brown Apollos, with an air of graceful impudence about them that reminded the doctor of Italian beggars. The Sheikh himself, worthy chief of a roguish tribe, a man rich in wives, children, and camels, was friendly to the travellers, and presented them with a few sheep and cows, in return perhaps for Dr. Blanc's medical services to some of his sick followers.

Kassala, 180 miles from Mahaber, was reached on the 6th of November. This once important trading-mart had lately been the scene of a mutiny among the Nubian troops, whose murder of their officers had soon been fearfully avenged by the troops and agents of the Egyptian Pasha. From Kassala to Kedaref, a distance of about 120 miles, the country resembled the grassy plains of Barka, edged here and there with a far-off solitary peak, and once relieved by a richly wooded valley. The Arabs of this region were half Nubians, as a general rule. From Kedaref the country began to look more populous and better tilled. Villages crowned every rounded hillock, and the hillocks melted into hills and mountains, ending in the Abyssinian tableland.

On the 21st of November the travellers reached Metemma, capital of Galabat, a province on the western frontier of Abyssinia, inhabited by Takruries, a negro race from Darfur. Its sheikh pays tribute both to Egypt and Abyssinia; a policy which has brought Metemma much trade and profit from both countries. On market days it presents a lively and picturesque scene; merchants from Abyssinia bring cattle and honey for sale; here are stalls filled with calico, shirtings, hardware, gaudy prints, from Egypt; yonder are Arabs and Takruries unloading cotton and grain from their camels. Half-naked jockies are riding furiously about the place; while fat Nubian girls "redolent of rancid castor-oil" are buying red and yellow handkerchiefs from some Frank's store. Every one is armed; but the only blood spilled is that of a few cows, for the benefit of those who care to eat raw steaks.

The Takrurie religion, Mohammedan in name, dispenses with mosques, but puts on once a week the form of military drill. This, on the whole, is rather a burlesque of the Frankish original, Sheikh Yumma's Own being apt to march independently and face about in wrong directions. But it delights the beholders and satisfies the performers, which is the main point in such cases.

The travellers had the luck to witness the yearly festival of the Sheikh's re-election. A crowd of Takrurie warriors, for every one who can wield a lance or a bludgeon may claim a vote, comes together, "howling and screeching," which passes with these people for music. But every voter has to pay a dollar, which he afterwards gets reimbursed in the shape of a grand feast given by the elected Sheikh. The drums, silent for three days, announce the revival of suspended royalty; the cows are slaughtered; and the merises quickly disappears down the throats of two thousand drunken and yelling negroes. Next morning crowns the ceremony. The Sheikh proposes a raid into Abyssinia; the crowd roars assent; and in a few days several thousand head of plundered cattle make their appearance in the town.

After more than a month's stay at Metemma came Theodore's welcome invitation to move forward. By the 28th December Sheikh Yumma had all things ready for the start, which took place that afternoon. The march to Wochnee led our travellers over billowy breadths of tall green grass, through woods of mimosa, acacia, and incense-trees. As the ground grew steeper and more broken, trees of larger growth, the cedar and the sycamore, began to rise out of finer and drier grass. Yet nearer Wochnee they had to toil up and down a succession of deep ravines, and climb "the almost perpendicular sides" of the first range of Abyssinian hills. A short march from Wochnee over more hills brought them to Ballaca. Thence the road grew steeper and narrower up the mountain's side, an "awful road" up the edge of an almost perpendicular precipice, at the top of which stretched the lofty Abyssinian tableland.

At Wali Dabba, where they had to wait some days for fresh bearers, the doctor's life was made wretched by the crowds of natives who clamoured for medicine, dogged his steps with unflagging zeal, and insisted on his power to cure them of every ill under the sun. They would take no refusal, and the hakim's success in treating some of them only heightened the importunities of the remainder. At last the doctor was fain to keep his tent all day, with a guard outside to drive off unwarranted intruders.

On the 13th January they began their final march to the king's camp, through a country which Theodore's anger had a few years before turned into a silent waste, dotted by the wrecks of burnt villages, whose former tenants were now slowly straggling back. Only in the province of Agau-Medar could be seen the happiness and the plenty natural, under right conditions, to a fertile land. Beyond Agau desolation once more reigned: "not a human being, no sleek cattle, no smiling hamlet;" for Theodore was there at his old work, plundering, burning, slaughtering, to his heart's content.

On the 25th January the travellers saw before them the black and white tents of the Royal camp on one hill, on another a glittering array of gaily-dressed spearmen and gunners; while the valley between was filled up with cavalry, ten thousand strong, between whose lines the visitors passed on to the presence of the king's wazeer, Ras-Engeddah, who, surrounded by a choice train of well-mounted warriors and officials, bade the envoys welcome in a courteous speech. Later in the day they were received in the Royal tent by the "Emperor" himself, who spoke to them in all courtesy, took the Queen's letter from their hands with due politeness, and regretted that his European prisoners had marred the old friendship with England, which he hoped speedily to renew. The Ethiopian Lion was then in one of his pleasantest moods, which continued during the eight days of their sojourn in his camp. He gave them several interviews, supplied them with plenty of food and money, promised to release his prisoners, and accompanied the envoys several stages of their journey to the Tana Sea. His courtesy to them, however, cost his own subjects in that part of the country dear. Swarms of his soldiers reaped the rich harvests lying ready for the peasant's sickle, and ended by setting fire to the plundered villages. Further on the inhabitants of a lovely island in the Tana Sea had to strip themselves of all their little treasures in money and ornaments, in order that Theodore might make his visitors a present of ten thousand dollars.

After a series of halts and journeys—sometimes in bulrush boats that leaked at every pore, and were manned by rowers who splashed one at every stroke—the envoys reached Kaorata on the 14th February; the clergy of the place turning out in full canonicals to greet them. In this wealthy, important, and well-built city, second only to Gondar—this city of priests and merchants, which climbs up a hill bathed by the Tana Sea—our travellers rested till the 13th April. Within a month of their arrival they were cheered by the sight of the released prisoners from Magdala and Gaffat. All looked bright for the European party. They set their faces homeward, full of hope, and "laughed at the scorching heat of the hottest month" in Abyssinia.

But they had reckoned literally without their host. By the middle of April the whole party were prisoners in Theodore's hands. The envoys who had come to take final leave of him at Zagay found themselves suddenly pinioned, stripped of arms and accoutrements, and dragged with torn uniforms about the hall, amidst a volley of abuse from their treacherous captors. The King himself was absent, overhauling their luggage; but, through his father-in-law, he put to the prisoners a number of questions which, says Dr. Blanc, "were, to say the least, childish." Why had they not brought the released prisoners to him? Why had they given them firearms? Why had they sent letters to the coast? We agree with Dr. Blanc that all this was "rubbish." Treacherous by nature, and much given to mad whims, Theodore had either planned the seizure of these persons on any sort of pretext, or else had taken it into his crazy head that they were plotting against him. His subsequent treatment of them was a curious mixture of ferocity and gentleness, of treachery, wild suspicion, and returning trustfulness. He inquires "kindly" after the health of some European captives who were brought up before him in chains. Their trial is preluded by the recital of the Emperor's pedigree, which represents him as the son of a king, descended from David and Solomon. Cameron's chains are opened. The trial ends with a renewal of the insults of a former day. Next day his Majesty begs pardon humbly for his late unkindness, sets the prisoners comparatively free, and sends off Mr. Flad with a letter to the Queen of England. For a time Theodore is exceedingly polite to his prisoner-guests, feeds them well, sends his compliments to them twice a day, gives them a feast on the Queen's birthday, takes them out with him on his pleasure-trips. But they have learned to distrust the tyrant, whose cruelties are practised daily at their tent doors on men and women who may have displeased him.

The distrust is soon justified. After some weeks of comparative quiet, varied by marching to and fro to avoid cholera and fever, the Europeans were housed, as they thought, for the rainy season at Gaffat, when a message came from the King, inviting them to Debra Tabor to see a political trial. On their arrival they found not Theodore, but some of his officers, who, repeating the old complaints against England in new forms, bade them remain there in arrest. Their arms were again seized, but some of them were allowed to return to Gaffat. Among these were Dr. Blanc and Mr. Rosenthal. A few days later these two were walking near the King. A poor old beggar, asking Theodore for alms, used an expression which displeased him, and was straightway beaten to death in Dr. Blanc's sight. His rage next turned on some of the Europeans. The doctor and Mr. Rosenthal were seized by a dozen ruffians, and the latter was dragged on foot the whole way to Debra Tabor after the King. Dr. Blanc, being more in his Majesty's favour, was allowed a mule. At Debra Tabor chains were brought out to place on some of Mr. Rassam's party; but the mad fit subsiding for that present, his prisoners were shut up in a dark "go-down," where he himself presently came to comfort them with tej and arrack. His heart opening with the liquor, he told them that his father was mad, and now he knew himself to be the same.

Worse, however, was in store for them. Before the middle of July they were shut up in the now famous fortress of Magdala, the Gwalior of Abyssinia. A few days later heavy chains were fastened to their legs, and in this painful plight they have continued ever since. So great was the torture caused by the iron pressing against the bare bone, that they could not move a step without rolling bandages between the leg and the chain. What was to become of them Dr. Blanc could not venture to say. He doubts whether any of Theodore's rivals would dare to attack the wounded lion in his lair. He has little hope even from their success; still less if the Europeans were ever to fall into the hands of an ignorant and maddened peasantry. The prospect, gloomy then, has not been brightened by later accounts. But we must hope the best, while hope is yet possible.

For further information on the character, language, manners of the Abyssinians—and a very bad character does the doctor give them—on the physical geography, climate, and diseases of the country, and on the personal history of Theodore himself, whose darker vices have in late years utterly eclipsed the virtues of his earlier days, we would refer our readers to the narrative itself, which is already announced for publication. Dr. Blanc's summing up of Theodore's character confirms all we have heard against him from other sources. A monster of cruelty and treachery, a madman, a fanatic, and a disappointed schemer, he seems to have exhausted the patience of his humblest followers, and to be fast draining the cup of well-earned retribution.

Spirit of the Local Press.

INDIAN WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The Englishman is altogether opposed to the adoption of the French metre as a standard of Indian linear measure. The best system of measurement to adopt for India is the best for India absolutely. The decimal notation being sine qua non, all we have to determine is the standard. The local committees appear to be generally in favour of the English foot or yard; Colonel Strachey, on the other hand, advocates the French metre on considerations of more theoretical symmetry. He does not pretend to say that there is any practical argument in its favour. In extenuation of its adoption, however, he urges its near approximation to 1 1-10th yard, and the consequent fact that a mile, or 1,760 yards, differs very little from 1,600 metres. We have already expressed our conviction that its a fallacy to suppose that near approximation to an existing measure is an advantage. It is not so much the amount of the difference as its easy calculability that is of importance. The great object in reforming our system of measurement will be to secure uniformity with the least possible amount of change. Now, practically, the Indian standard of linear measurement may be taken to be the cubit, regulated by what is considered the average fore-arm of a man, but still varying in different localities. The problem before us appears to us a very simple one. All we have to do is to fix the cubit; and if we fix it at half the English yard, we secure the more important consideration of local convenience, together with the no less important one of unison with the English system. We might make our coss two thousand yards. If a higher denomination were thought necessary, a munsil of ten coss or twenty thousand yards would suit native ideas well enough, and be convenient.

But the most important application of our standard of linear measure is in the base of the corresponding system of superficial measure. We have already suggested a pole of ten cubits, a cottah of ten poles, and a beegah of ten cottahs. We need be very cautious in introducing a uniform system of land measurement, as it is almost sure to be followed by an immense amount of litigation between landlord and tenant. Measures of capacity would naturally, and as at present, be based upon those of weight.

The Indian Daily News observes that it may be open to question whether the French form of decimal account and calculation is the best possible; but it would clearly be an advantage over the varying and undetermined standards of the different provinces of India. We are not disposed to quarrel with Colonel Strachey for desiring a thorough reformation in preference to a system of shreds and patches which some theorists would try to build out of existing standards. There is no one sufficiently general to be relied upon. The seer, for instance, differs widely in India, though nominally it should be the same everywhere. Thoroughly scientific bases would be far better than plausible ones. The former may be systematised and brought into harmony with the external world, but the latter would only result in disturbance without yielding satisfaction. In principle, therefore, we should not be inclined to differ much from what the Friend lays down as Colonel Strachey's proposition on this subject. The Colonel pronounces for the French system or no change at all. Substituting the term "scientific" for the word "French," there is little that we would object to. The French system may be admirable, but it is not faultless, and there are others that it might be found expedient to adopt as a preliminary to that universal system that assuredly awaits no distant future.

LOCALISATION OF INDIAN FINANCE.

The Bombay Times of India asserts that a careful and well-digested project for federalising the system of Indian finance has been some little time before the Government of India. The project in its present shape was first proposed by the Right Hon. Mr. Massey, but it has been subsequently elaborated in detail by Colonel Strachey. Briefly stated, its object is to transfer certain portions of the revenue, with an equivalent amount of charge, to the several local Governments and administrations, leaving them to disburse the amounts so transferred to their credit in great measure as to them may seem most expedient in their superior knowledge of local requirements. This scheme has met with the approval of the majority of the Supreme Council, the Viceroy and Sir Henry Durand being the only dissentients.

The Governor-General is of opinion that the public revenues are reasonably well administered under the existing system, and that any considerable relaxation of the control now exercised over the expenditure of the local Governments will result in extravagance and waste. On both these points the financial member is at issue with his Excellency. Mr. Massey contends that our financial administration, so far as the particular objects contemplated in the proposed scheme are concerned, is most inefficient. It is simply impossible for the financial department dispensing funds from Calcutta or Simla to check the domestic expenditure of distant provinces organised under separate and quasi-independent administrations. The relative positions of the Government of India and of a local Government are in this respect antagonistic. The tendency of the former is to guard the Imperial revenue from undue demands; the disposition of the latter is to aggrandise its own establishments, and this disposition is exempt from the wholesome restraint which is imposed by the necessity of providing the ways and means. The Central Government may cut down the local estimates, or it may concede the grants required; but whether it does the one or the other, it has no means of forming an independent judgment as to the expediency of retrenchment or the necessity for expenditure. The principle upon which a great nation conducts its financial arrangements is to accommodate its income to the necessities of the State, and not to make those necessities subservient to its income. The reverse of this practice obtains under the present dispensation, and the financial member submits that it is no answer to a local Government when it applies for a grant for a public object to say that there are no funds; and, on the other hand, he points out that it is not consistent with a just economy to yield compliance to a demand for the necessity of which there are no means of judgment independently of the representation of the Government by which it is preferred. The remedy for this state of things is, as Mr. Massey conceives, to give the local Government such an interest in the funds which it has to administer as will be equivalent to the purposes to which these funds are to be applied. Even if some risk were hazarded of weakening the authority of the Viceregal Government, that sacrifice would be amply compensated by supplying the subordinate Governments with a motive towards the due discharge of one of the most important functions of administration—namely, a vigilant regard to the improvement of income, and a careful management of public money.

The Friend of India, in reference to the same scheme, allows that it has the merits of thoroughness and breadth. It proposes an organic change which is sure to commend it to the local Governments. At first sight it seems to us to violate the condition that our Indian empire shall continue a unity. Would not an imperial war or general revolt scatter it to the winds for a time? It will be said that the Central Government reserves the power to deal with an emergency; but after surrendering financial control for years it would be difficult if not impossible to collect, so as to wield effectually, the scattered resources of the empire against the common foe. The wedge, of which this scheme is the thin end, would have been driven in. Revenues would have been assigned away. An isolated and peaceful Presidency, like Madras or Bengal, would feel it difficult to stop, say, all its public works, in order to help the Central Government on the Punjab frontier. A jealous and ambitious Presidency like Bombay would resent every attempt to take back what it had so long enjoyed. Again, it is the duty of the Empire to spend more than an arithmetical proportion on new and backward provinces, with which it may be necessary to deal outside of the ordinary administration. Under this united States scheme such treatment would be impossible. Finally, where are we to get eight financiers from if, since Mr. Laing's departure, India has not had one? The weak point of this otherwise able scheme lies in the removal of the control, or the possibility of swift and sharp control, whenever it may be necessary, from the Central Government. These objections may be met, but still they are, we would suggest rather what may be called a proportional scheme. Let the complete control of the proposed grants for definite purposes, as a fixed minimum, be made over to the local Governments; but let the central authority vote future additions to them, and only in proportion to the increase of local revenue. The control would thus still rest with the Government responsible for the security, the progress, the debt, and other obligations of the whole Empire, while the motive to economy and to the careful expansion of the local revenue would be equally strong.

The best practical test of the United States scheme will be the opinion of the public creditor and the money market. Will the capitalist consider the security offered by India the same as at present if the policy be proclaimed and partially carried out of transferring the control of both its revenue and expenditure to eight Governments? Mr. Bright's dream, of which this United States scheme seems to us to be logically the financial adjunct, involves an English guarantee. When Parliament comes to discuss the constitution of India next session it must not forget that.

PROTESTANT MISSIONS IN INDIA.

The Madras Times laments the comparatively small results as yet achieved by Protestant missions. The missionaries, speaking generally, are self-denying, earnest, practical, and godly men, and their labour is systematic, loving, and continuous. Yet, save in some few districts, there is little indeed to congratulate ourselves upon, if we but regard aright the character, social position, and habits of the majority of those who swell the statistics of converts and communicants. Some thoughtful persons would have us believe that the mission cause can never prosper more than it now does until the labourers are men in no respect inferior to the civil and military officers of Government who succeed in inspiring the natives with profound and abiding respect. Others assert that, trammelled with the cares of their families, the missionaries are unable to itinerate sufficiently. It has always seemed to us that to the want of union among the several missionary societies is mainly due the slow progress of Protestant Christianity in India; and until there is more brotherly co-operation there will be no very great change for the better. And what militates against its success in the East tells most sadly against it in the West. The Church is split up into almost innumerable sects, and where all the shepherds are right, and yet all differ, the sheep get but little pasturage. In the Church of England—so called, for the great increase of Dissent has now deprived it of its right to style itself a national Church—there are numerous well-defined rivalries, and a spirit of discord has risen of late years which offends those who wish that Church well. Dissent again is so divided and subdivided that we are at a loss to conjecture what will be the future of a religion that admits of so many dissections.

The Times thinks that the existing divisions in the Anglican Church are among the most contemptible features of English society, both at home and abroad. In matters political, municipal, and social we recognise the need of a common administration; it is only in the gravest matters of all that we are torn by dissension, that we lack coherency and brotherly kindness. Let the Church of England retire in a measure from its self-righteous, defiant, and unsympathising attitude; let it, as the Bishop of Madras did two years ago, co-operate at prayer meetings and other good undertakings with Dissenters; and the consequence must be that the patchwork appearance of the robe worn by Protestantism will gradually fade away. The generality of intelligent men must feel less and less the want of the furniture, the millinery, the trappings, the ceremonials of religion, and must yearn more and more for a plain, unadorned creed that is as humble, consistent, and sympathetic as its author. The gradual obliteration of the differences that now agitate the common Church, the consequent growth of a spirit of brotherhood, should prove the means of promoting an amalgamation between the several societies that now, independently of each other, strive after the evangelisation of this country. The compactness of Roman Catholicism as it attacks the scattered forces of its religious opponents in the East is one of the chief causes of the success of its missions. Let Protestantism similarly unite its efforts, and far more satisfactory results may be expected.

ADMISSION OF NATIVES TO THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The Madras Athenæum holds that the system under which the provinces of the old Roman Empire were administered approaches nearer than any other to the conditions under which the British Empire in India might, could or should be administered. It was the government of enormous tracts of country by an alien Power, yet so conducted apparently as to eradicate or at any rate greatly diminish all feelings of distinct nationality, and to make the provinces nearly as Roman in feeling as the Romans themselves. There was no want of nationality among the peoples of the old world. Gaul and Spain and Britain fought long and fiercely for their independence. But subjugation once effected, it is very remarkable how for hundreds of years the said provinces continued loyal and obedient subjects of Rome, without even a hint in history of any "national" revolts. The system must have been an efficient one which could bring about such a result. The mere military force as represented by the standing army is quite inadequate to account for it by mere power of repression. The standing army of Rome in its most palmy state was less numerous than the present standing armies of France or Russia. The civil administration must at any rate have been such as to content the people to such extent as to make them doubtful about seeing their way to anything better. Now we know that men of provincial birth and descent were, under the Roman Empire, eligible to all the honours and dignities of Government employ: they might hold any office from a Proconsul downwards; there was ample scope for their energies and ambition, quite as much probably as they could have found under a native Government, with the additional advantage of being secure from local disturbance, dependent on a distant and, as regarded themselves, dispassionate supreme power. But there was one indispensable condition. The candidate for a Proconsulship might be a provincial by birth, he might be of any religion, but it was indispensable that he should be a Roman citizen, and have accepted not only all the privileges, but all the duties and conditions of that status. He must have subscribed to the Roman system in toto, without any reservations of any sort whatever. Now, if our educated native fellow-subjects are prepared to compete for employment in the civil service on similar terms, and in so competing can prove their competency, we will not have a word to say against it. But to ask for exceptional indulgencies, facilities for admission on easier terms than their European brothers, is logically inconsistent with the said condition. It implies either a consciousness of inferiority, or an objection to assimilate themselves with the British system in its entirety, an objection in short to become "British citizens." The thorough English training in England must be insisted on; no man can disorientalise himself in India. He may acquire any amount of mere book learning, he may be trained to any amount of mental dexterity and versatility, but it seems that he cannot get the "pith" into him, he cannot acquire the manliness, straightforwardness, and self-reliance that have hitherto constituted the main distinctions between the Western and Eastern character.

INDIAN LIEUTENANT-COLONELS.

The Madras Athenæum referring to rumours of a scheme for diminishing the present mob of lieutenant-colonels in India, blames the Home Government for its short-sighted illiberality in the past. With a very simple problem to work out, it is surprising that the Home Government did not at once perceive that their only policy was to make a bridge of gold for retiring old officers. It was their interest to get rid of them at any price. They had the opportunity of getting rid of them, at any rate of many of them, at a very cheap rate. Lieutenant-Colonel A was entitled to £1,000 a year in India. Well, he was willing to retire and draw £365 in England. The Indian Government could spare his services. His going away would not have necessitated the introduction of any other in his place. Surely then it is a most incomprehensible thing that a Government avowedly desirous of reducing both the number of its officers and the amount of its expenditure, did not take him at his word, jump at his offer and, knock off one officer and £635 a year!

If we wished to reduce our own establishment and were debarred from kicking our servants out to starve, either by certain legal hold they possessed over us, or by our own sense of propriety or justice or generosity, or partly the one and partly the other, should we not be greatly rejoiced if our chief butler or chief baker requested us to pension him off on one-third of his salary! We trow we should feel intensely obliged to him for his considerate kindness. Yet, for some inscrutable reason, whether of abstract business propriety, or of old precedent, or of mere red tape or mere spiteful temper, our Home Government lost or threw away a similar chance of getting rid of dozens of officers whose enduring presence they now find to be a special bore. We would strongly recommend, whatever the forthcoming new scheme may be, that this long-contested right of retirement, on the pension of substantive rank after twenty-two years' service, should be appended thereto, to have effect solely with respect to officers of the old Indian army whether they had joined the Staff Corps or not. We believe a great number would avail themselves of it, though not so many as would have done had it been the rule from the first. Many an unlucky man who got promotion by entering the Staff Corps would have retired at once on the pension of his new substantive rank if then allowed. Now he has been forced to stick on so long that it is worth his while to stick a little longer. It will take more than the mere pension of his rank to buy him out now. Well, it will be worth while to give him more. It will be worth while to give every man who has attained the rank of full colonel by brevet the home pay of that rank, £450 a year, whether he be major-general or no. It would be advisable even to let him go home and live in England on that sum without retiring, simply because it is much cheaper to pay £450 than £1,000.

Either of these courses is feasible and economical. Another possible plan would be to pay to every man, retiring within a certain period, the amount of bonus which he would on the average have been likely to get under the old system from his regiment.

PROJECTED REFORMS IN THE POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.

The Times of India mentions certain measures for the reorganisation of the political agencies in this presidency, which, suggested and talked of at various times, have had something of definite shape given to them, and are now understood to be under consideration by the Supreme Government. The central proposition is one for placing the political agents in charge of native States under the guidance and control of commissioners, to whom the various agents would report instead of to the Governor in Council as now; while the said commissioner would hear appeals and memorials from the several protected and tributary States, and revise or revoke the political agents. There is, undoubtedly, a good deal to be said in favour of some reform in the system through which, in our allied and protected States, the Bombay Government administers the paramount imperial power. On one hand, the political secretary is beset with numerous references and trivial details which, under the present rule, the agents are in some cases not empowered and in others not competent to dispose of. On the other hand, in regard to many matters of great importance wherein the vital interests of native chiefs and peoples are deeply concerned, they can scarcely feel that they have a chance of fair hearing. But very few of the chiefs retain the ancient privilege of appearing before his Excellency in Council in person or by vakeel. In the great majority of cases claims or complaints from native States can only be heard by Government through its political secretary, and the course is to refer the application to be reported upon by the political agent of the State from which the document has been received. In most of these cases the agent has already had a good deal to say in regard to the matter in hand, and has probably made up his mind on the subject before he receives the reference. Unless he be a decidedly superior man, his report must be biased by his foregone conclusion. The busy Government of Bombay or Poona reposes confidence in its agent, and thus the native chief, probably after interminable delay, finds he must rest content with an ex parte decision.

The proposed reorganisation of our political agencies is one that must be justified on its own grounds; but the way in which its objects and reasons are likely to be regarded by the chiefs themselves is one of the primary reasons to be considered. We cannot but feel apprehensive that opposition more or less intelligent will arise against it in every native durbar of this Presidency; and it would be wise for our honourable councillors who still deliberate and govern from behind the purdah to consider very carefully whether any advantage sufficiently permanent and real can eventually be gained, by persisting in a measure which is not unlikely to be very distasteful to those primarily affected by it.

It seems likely, adds the Times, that considerable practical difficulty will arise in organising a system of political commissionerships, because of the great diversity of the several native States in their respective importance, treaty rights, and extent. The Resident at Baroda cannot well be placed under a commissioner; while, on the other hand, we believe the experiment of making the Resident a commissioner over other charges in Guzerat has been tried and abandoned. Besides, there are at Baroda manifest arrears in the way of a political agent's duties, which have too long been allowed to accumulate. If we go northward to Kattywar we find in Col. Keatinge a political agent who has already realised all that could be done by the best devised commissionerhip. He is of course formally subject to the Executive Government, and all that he does must be ratified by the central authority; but we imagine that were the references and political appeals from the rest of the presidency of no greater proportionate importance than those from Kattywar, the political secretariat could not have required this scheme of commissionerships for its relief. It is in regard to the smaller charges of Kutch, Mhye Kanta, Pahlunpoor, Rewa Kanta, or Sawant Warce, that the institution of a political commissioner might be a useful experiment, and the wide geographical distribution of those charges cannot necessarily be an objection when we remember what the political secretary gets through under the present system.

SIR R. TEMPLE IN BERAR.—Sir Richard Temple has been making a tour in Berar. He was received with great eclat by crowds of district dignities with several bands of music. After leaving Shegaum the train went on to Akola, before reaching which, however, he was doomed to see something of the G. I. P. Railway Company's broken down bridges, of which there are so many in Berar. Between Shegaum and Akola there are now so many either under or out of repair, that all trains have to stop and then proceed at a walking pace. Sir Richard made Akola his head quarters and visited Khangaum, Akote, a large cotton emporium forty miles north of Akola, Ellichpore, Oomrawutty and Budnaira.

MRS. BEESLY, the late proprietress of the Lawrence Hotel, was found dead in her bed yesterday morning. It appears that Mrs. Beesly had returned the evening before her death from Meean Meer, and that her buggy had met with an accident. She appeared, however, perfectly uninjured at the time, and, indeed, did not complain of the slightest hurt. —Punjab Times, Nov. 12.

BENGAL.

THE LUCKNOW DURBAR.

[From a Special Correspondent of the Delhi Gazette.]

The Viceregal party mounted elephants in Victoria-street, and the whole of the grand procession, quite four miles in length, having been marshalled in accordance with the programme, proceeded in the following order up Victoria-street, in front of the Muchee Bhawun Fort, across to the Iron Bridge, and down the Strand-road to the Baillie Guard.

First came a battery of horse artillery, six guns, followed by the 5th Royal Lancers with band. After these were another battery of six guns, and a native cavalry regiment with band, which looked remarkably well. Elephants in rows of four carrying aides-de-camp came next, and were followed by others three abreast, with the military and private secretaries and the officer commanding the body guard. Then marched the Viceroy's elephant, a splendid animal, furnished by Bulrampore, having on his back the state Howdah recently renovated and redecored, said by some to be worth as much as sixty thousand rupees, and surmounted by the splendid umbrella, the only one in the procession, being the Oude emblem of royalty. The officer commanding in Oude and Mr. Strachey followed, with the Rajah of Kuppoothullah, the Maharajah Maun Singh and the Maharajah of Bulrampore immediately behind. These three Knights of the Star of India took precedence of the Members of Council who came next, followed by Sir George Couper, Mr. Davies, and Colonel Barrow. Then we had the Deputy-Commissioners of Oonao, the Assistant Adjutant-General, the Assistant Quartermaster-General, the Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, with aides-de-camp. The next row was the last of the Viceregal party, and was composed of the Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals, officers of the staff, and aides. Behind these came the whole body of Talooqdars on elephants, walking two abreast. After the elephants marched Kuppoothullah's small army of infantry and Lancers, with band, followed by the retainers of Bulrampore and other Talooqdars.

On reaching the open facing the Baillie Guard, the whole of the five bands striking up the National Anthem, his Excellency with the three Knights of India and his staff grouped themselves in front of the ladies and the 46th and 55th Regiments. The procession of elephants marched past and by the Gola-gunge road the Talooqdars made the best of their way to their city residences. His Excellency with his party now dismounted, walked up the embankment, and saluted by the troops seated himself near the ladies on a throne of state prepared for him. The sight while this was going on was grand in the extreme. Kuppoothullah's and Bulrampore's men marched past. Behind the Viceregal chair were drawn up a number of Baillie Guard heroes, natives, old men, covered almost with medals and decorations. These his Excellency saluted, and with a single decoration, the Star of India, on his heart, walked to his carriage, drawn up within a dozen yards of the room in which his illustrious brother received his fatal wound. With hands playing and under a grand salute from the regiments and from a battery at a distance, the Viceroy left the Baillie Guard. Artillery, with several squadrons of lancers and native cavalry, in addition to the body guard, escorted his carriage along the Strand, past the Chutter Munzil, and up Huzrutgunge to the Chief Commissioner's residence. The 46th and 55th, with two native infantry regiments, marched off; and so ended a spectacle which will long be remembered by all who witnessed it, and which for novelty and the interest arising from association has perhaps seldom been surpassed.

No notice of the Viceroy's state entry into

Lucknow could be considered complete without a fitting tribute being paid to the exertions of the gentlemen who so admirably designed and so successfully carried out the programme of the day's proceedings. Many thought too much had been attempted, but the result has proved otherwise. The arrangements were most thorough; not a hitch occurred anywhere. The numerous spectators were well provided with comfortable seats, and those taking part in the procession had a sight to look at as they approached the old Baillie Guard which amply compensated them for the inconvenience attending their long shaking ride. There was no dust, absolutely none, and each individual elephant could be distinctly seen a mile off wending his way along the cross road in front of the Muchee Bhawun Fort. The police arrangements of Major Aitken, himself a renowned Baillie Guard man, both in and without the residency grounds, were everything that could be desired, and the troops, under the command of Colonel Hume, were certainly placed to the greatest advantage, and added most effectively to the day's spectacle.

COLONEL NORMAN'S LECTURE ON LORD CLYDE'S FIRST MARCH TO LUCKNOW.

In a lecture recently delivered at Calcutta, Col. Norman gave a full, true, and particular account of Lord Clyde's first march to Lucknow, in aid of the beleaguered garrison. The following extracts will have a fresh interest even for those who have long since mastered the military details of that period:—

MEETING AT THE MOTEE MAHUL.

No building but the Motee Mahul now remained between Sir Colin's force and the position held by Sir J. Outram, but the road between the two was swept by grape and musketry from the Kaiser Bagh. Openings were made in the walls of the Mess-house compound, and, watching their opportunity, our men ran across, in small groups or singly, to the shelter of a wall, and now the Motee Mahul was ours, and the communication between the forces complete, though so dangerous, that three of the staff officers who accompanied Sir J. Outram and General Havelock when they came across from the engine-house to see Sir Colin were shot down. The meeting of these veteran chiefs, amid the roar of cannon and the patter of musketry, was a sight well worthy of the picture that represents it. On Sir J. Outram's privation had not told so heavily, but the hand of death was on General Havelock, though he lighted up a little on being told for the first time that he was Sir Henry.

Curiosity led some of the officers of the relieving force to run the gauntlet of fire and enter the British position. Already some of the men were getting into communication with Sir Colin's soldiers in the Motee Mahul on the all-important topic of whether they could procure any tobacco or rum, of which they had been so long deprived. In the ragged summer clothing in which they had entered, these men looked worn and hungry, and in one corner was seen the curious spectacle—I suppose common enough in the garrison—of a British soldier making chuppaties for himself out of his scanty allowance of flour. Entering a battery which was trying to silence some of the enemy's guns across the river, these officers saw a few men grimed with smoke and without coat or waistcoat, all so alike in costume and appearance that it was only by asking which was the officer that they ascertained they were standing close to one they well knew—one of the bravest officers of the Bengal Artillery.

INCIDENTS OF THE TIME.

It was a rough life that Sir Colin's force passed during these days, but exciting and interesting in the highest degree. As officers could be spared for an hour or two, they went to see the residency and to offer their services, or any little comfort they possessed, to their friends within. All marvelled at the weak defences so stoutly held, and round which the enemy were still in force. From the look-out post on the top of the residency, where bullets still came if the look-out officer exposed himself for an instant, the sight was wonderful, and crowds of horse and foot were constantly passing and repassing on the stone bridge far above the residency. We learnt now of all the losses; saw what brave women had undergone; and had, in many cases, to tell them of the loss of dear friends in other parts of India; in others, to rejoice their hearts by tidings of welfare.

At other times amongst our troops there was the excitement of spies being captured and shot, or of some mischief from round shot. On one occasion some of us were sitting down to a hasty breakfast under a tree, when as my Khidmutgar was coming up, with his plates and cups, &c., tied up as usual in a table napkin, a round shot came into the middle of the bundle with a thundering crash, sent everything flying into the air, and sent the Khidmutgar flying also, quite unhurt, but much alarmed, amid roars of laughter, to some friendly shelter, whence he did not venture to emerge for many hours.

I well remember one day finding myself alongside of Peel's coxswain, who was ever in attendance on his beloved captain, and asking him how he was getting on. "Well, sir," he said, "these are the hardest times I ever see, sir; why, sir, will you believe it, the captain even has not had a sprinkle for the last week." This was to him the most convincing proof of the hardness of the times, for truly Peel was under ordinary circumstances a very pattern of neatness. At the risk of giving offence I cannot refrain from repeating that this said coxswain confided to us that he was disappointed in the looks of the female portion of the garrison when they passed out; indeed, he said he thought they "looked a rough lot." Poor creatures! their dress may not as a rule have been very attractive, and they may have looked worn and sad, but either the coxswain was a bad judge, or he judged too much by dress, for certainly, if I may venture on so bold an opinion, there were among the number ladies who then were, and who still are, among the most admired as well as the most gentle of their sex.

CHRISTIAN VANDALISM.

While alluding to the coxswain, I am reminded of another sailor. When we captured the Shah Nujeef it was dark, and I did not see the interior of the building until the following morning. I was struck with the marble floor and one or two handsome chandeliers, as well as with a glass tiger, all in perfect order. Happening to return in about half an hour, I met a friend who had not been there before, and proposed to him to go inside to see the place. To my utter astonishment I found every thing smashed, including, to a great extent, the floor. The cause of all this destruction was not far to seek, for in one corner a burly sailor was still engaged in heaving (as he called it) a 24lb. shot at everything in the place that was capable of being broken by such gentle means. Upon my asking his particular reason for exerting himself in this way—and he must have been at it for some time—he seemed rather surprised, but alleged with the utmost frankness "that he really could not stand the idolatry of these fellows," and so thought it incumbent on him, as a consistent Christian, to do his best to smash everything in the place; and, as far as he could, to smash the place itself.

THE EVACUATION.

The evacuation by the women and children is in some respects the event of the relief. In one most exposed place, a flying sap had been constructed, in others, walls of tents or other mode of concealment had been put up, so that, as far as the Motee Mahul, the enemy might not see the women passing out, and thus, though they were within shot, be ignorant where to aim, or when to fire. Some were brought out packed in different conveyances, but many walked. This was on the 19th, and by sunset all were collected at the Secunder Bagh, the earliest having come out about noon. Once at the Secunder Bagh, the Commander-in-Chief and those about him did their best to make all comfortable. Some bread and butter and tea was procured with difficulty and handed round, and the Commander-in-Chief himself, who not long before had received a packet of English newspapers, went round and distributed them to the ladies. A few were bright and happy, but the majority looked sad, for they had left behind them for ever in this world, husbands, lovers, children, and felt bewildered at coming forth again into a world which now seemed blank. The enemy appeared to know of the assemblage here, for more than one cannon shot crashed into the walls of the Secunder Bagh while the ladies were there. Soon after dark, it having been ascertained that at sunset the road to the rear was clear of the enemy, doolies were provided for all, and under a strong escort this most valuable of convoys started for the Dilkoosha, and arrived there in safety, when they were made as comfortable as circumstances would permit by the officers of the 9th Lancers and others. Everything being cleared out, it was arranged that the troops should be withdrawn on the night of the 22nd, and on that day some of Sir Colin's force paid a last visit to the residency and palace. A visit to any empty and recently-evacuated house awakens some melancholy, but how much more was this feeling aroused by a glance around those empty rooms, in which many had died, and in which for months tender ladies and young children had gone through hardships with the continual spectacle of death before them. Paucity of transport had caused much that would ordinarily be thought of value to be left behind, and all kinds of articles were scattered about in profusion. To show how difficult it was to bring away property, I may mention that I found an army surgeon, an old friend, lamenting over his books that had been his companions for years of life in all parts of the world; and right glad was I to be able to place a man at his disposal to bring away as many as could be carried. In one large underground room, the women of the 32nd had been quartered, and here were strewed about workboxes, little books, dresses, &c. The place, indeed, looked desolate, but the men of the garrison still were there watching at their posts, and the dull sound of cannon being burst came on the ear at frequent intervals. This process was not altogether a pleasant one to those who had to visit the Residency, for owing, I presume, to the difficulty of exactly calculating the proper charge of powder, sometimes large fragments of the cannon flew to great distances, and one of the staff of Sir Colin's force being sent with a message, had just entered the Residency gate, when he was startled by the noise of something thundering through the air, and the next instant felt his horse struck down under him by a huge fragment of a cannon.

At last the moment came to draw off, and not a man in the force can have failed to feel a deep interest, I may almost say anxiety, as to whether all would pass off without mishap. Silence was impressed on all as indispensable. The most advanced post of the Residency and entrenchments were to fall back first, and pass through those behind them.

During the night the troops of the relieving force again lay by their arms, strong detachments holding the Motee Mahul and the Mess House. The latter, indeed, was exposed to attack at any time from the Kaiser Bagh, in whose extensive squares were many thousand of the enemy; subsequently the Tara Kotee, or Observatory in advance of the Mess House, had to be taken and held. Up to the 18th, in these operations of Sir Colin's force, 45 officers and 496 men had fallen, while of the Artillery horses alone 60 had been shot.

From the 18th to the 22nd the troops were disposed so as to cover the withdrawal of all the women, children, sick, wounded, ammunition, treasure, stores, &c. All guns not intended to be taken away, and not required to be kept in position till the last, were gradually burst. A battery of naval guns was established near Martin's House, 800 yards from the Kaiser Bagh, and plied that stronghold of the enemy with shot, shell, and rockets, until the garrison was withdrawn; mortars also played from the Mess House, and guns and mortars from Sir J. Outram's position. A flying sap was constructed between the Engine House and Martin's House to protect the women and children as they were withdrawn, the space being swept by round shot and musketry.

At midnight the first move took place, and before 1 A.M. the quiet approach of troops was heard by the Head Quarters Staff, and the head of Sir J. Outram's column passed silently through the line of Sir Colin's troops, and down the narrow lane by which Sir Colin had advanced, to take up a position facing the canal and in front of the Dilkoosha. Perhaps for an hour infantry and artillery silently passed along, and then Sir J. Outram reported that his force had all withdrawn. A few minutes were given to let them clear out of the narrow lanes in rear, and the advanced part of Sir Colin's force, under Brigadier the Honourable Adrian Hope, silently fell back, and passed through the line. Just as this was in progress, the enemy opened fire from several pieces of cannon and with musketry, and for a minute or two all thought the retirement was discovered, and that we should have the enemy emerging from the Kaiser Bagh, and perhaps passing through the palaces so lately held by us, and falling on our diminished force, now placed at a great disadvantage by the evacuation of so many posts in its front. A rocket cart of the Naval Brigade was still in front, and a fire of rockets was at once turned on the Kaiser Bagh. This seemed to satisfy the enemy, for their fire ceased, without the retirement of our troops being for a moment checked. It was some false alarm that had produced their fire, and no suspicion of what we were doing, for it was long past daylight in the morning before they discovered what had really happened, and ventured into the Residency. Indeed, the persistent cannonade kept up during the day on the Kaiser Bagh led them to think that, although we were removing encumbrances from the Residency, as they could not fail to perceive, we were breaching preparatory to an assault on the Kaiser Bagh. All the advanced posts having moved through the line, orders were sent by staff officers to the posts on the left to fall back straight on the Dilkoosha by a road that had been explored, and with which officers from those posts had been required to make themselves familiar. At the same time the artillery, with the Commander-in-Chief, filed off to the rear, and none but a handful of infantry left with the Commander-in-Chief remained, and if the enemy came on them, there would have been stiff work to extricate this body; but no stir appeared, and as soon as time had been given for the guns to get clear of the lanes and village, the infantry who had been lying down, and gazing with anxious eyes, and ears on the stretch, in the direction of the enemy, quietly arose and filed off through the village with the Commander-in-Chief. Shortly before dawn every soldier was in the position allotted to him, either at the Dilkoosha, in front of it facing the canal, or at the Martinière, at which latter place Sir Colin and the 93rd were established, and warming themselves round fires

All was now secure, and every one rejoiced. Once outside, established as we were, if the enemy had been ten times as numerous we could beat them and keep our convoy safe. One little speck of anxiety was confined to the few who knew that, for days past, all communication had ceased with Cawnpore; auguring that something was amiss there, where we had to look for provisions and for the final means of securing the safety of our charge. The sun had not long risen when the Martinière seemed to give a heave, and the dull sound of an explosion in the vaults below warned us that there were perils other than those of the bullets of the enemy. Some Highlanders, searching for wood in the vaults, dropped a spark on a stock of mutineers' abandoned ammunition, and in an instant these splendid men, either dead or writhing in intense agony, were carried off to the field hospital at the Dilkoocha. During the 23rd much had to be done in the way of allotting carriage, &c.; sending to those regiments in Sir J. Outram's force the men belonging to them who had come up with the Commander-in-Chief, and organising the women and children into a sort of corps under two married officers, who were to allot them to carts, look after them on the march, communicate to them all necessary orders, point out to them their proper position in camp, draw their rations, &c. The Commander-in-Chief this day thanked the troops for all they had accomplished, alluding to their valour in attack, and to the movement of the previous night, by which the final rescue of the garrison was effected, which he declared to have been "a model of discipline and exactness, the consequence of which was, that the enemy was completely deceived, and the force retired by a narrow tortuous lane, the only line of retreat open, and in the face of 50,000 enemies, without molestation."

DEATH OF HAVELOCK.

On the 24th Sir Henry Havelock, who had been sick for some days, expired at the Dilkoocha, and on the morning of the 25th was buried in the Alum Bagh enclosure. This is not the place to sketch the history of that veteran Christian soldier, who had served wherever there was war in India for five and thirty years, who had seen the deadly campaigns in Burmah of 1824-25-26; been in Afghanistan from the capture of Ghuznee to the evacuation by Pollock, including taking a very prominent part in the defence of Jellalabad; and been on the staff of Lord Gough against the Maharattas and the Sikhs. The toil, the exposure, the anxiety, and the privations of the service, from the day he took the field at Allahabad in July, 1857, up to the time when he might have hoped for some rest after the withdrawal from the Residency, were too much for a frame never very strong. Differing from Sir H. Lawrence in character in some respects, they were friends of many years, and alike earnest Christians, alike nobly perished in a rigid discharge of duty.

MISCELLANEOUS.

At SONEPOR cholera has broken out rather badly.

NEW SUTLEDGE CANAL.—Indian Opinion learns that the new Sutledge Canal works have been commenced. The canal will leave the left bank of the river near Roopur, and passing southwards irrigate the arid part of Puttiala, Ferrozepore, and Sirsa.

SIKKIM.—The Rajah of Sikkim has fairly broken with Tibet. The Englishman states that he has refused to send the annual tribute of wood from the Sikkim forests to the Grand Lama. The quarrel between the Nepal Durbar and the Lama's Government has inspired the Rajah with hardihood to take this step.

NEW PROFESSORSHIP AT BENARES.—The Supreme Government has sanctioned the establishment of an Anglo-Sanskrit chair in the Benares College. The salary is fixed at Rs. 500 a month, rising to Rs. 700.

LIGHT TRAINS FOR INDIA.—At the approaching Lucknow Durbar a conference of engineering authorities, railway magnates, and officials, will be held to discuss the pros and cons of the light railway construction question.

BERAR.—The Englishman is told that the Rohillas from the Nizam's dominions have made a plundering excursion into Berar. The Hyderabad Government sent troops after them, but neither they nor the British authorities had come upon the marauders.

MR. GEO. N. TAYLOR, Member of the Governor-General's Council of India, took the opportunity of being deputed by the Viceroy to see how the Palumpoor fair was likely to answer to pay a flying visit to Umritsur and Lahore. He will scarcely be in time for the Lucknow Durbar.

AT THE CRIMINAL SESSIONS on Tuesday the case of Mr. Crawford, tried, on the prosecution of Mr. R. Battersby, for adultery and seduction, resulted in a verdict of "Guilty," and the prisoner was sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 21.

MAJOR REVELY.—We regret to hear that Major Revely, the Deputy-Commissioner of Police, is very ill, having burst a blood-vessel while engaged in the Police-office holding an investigation. He was promptly removed upstairs, and medical assistance sent for. The case is a serious one, but hopes are entertained of recovery.—Indian Daily News and Bengal Hurkaru, Nov. 18.

SICKNESS IN POOREE.—Pestilence, the usual successor of famine, has broken out in the Pooree district at Juggernath and is raging along the pilgrim route from Sumbulpore and along the right bank of the Mahanuddes into the Central Provinces. We hope prompt measures will be taken to prevent a concourse again assembling there this season, and that all pilgrims coming from the infected districts will be watched and put into quarantine for a safe period.

TENANT RIGHT IN THE PUNJAB.—Indian Opinion announces that a committee, composed of Sir Donald McLeod, Mr. Thornton, and Mr. Roberts, have arrived at a decided view about Tenant Right in the Punjab. That is all very well, and the opinion is likely to be both just and broad. But will Sir D. McLeod convince Sir John Lawrence? Now that the Oude difficulty has been surmounted, the Viceroy ought no longer to dally with that in the Punjab.

MR. GOODALL, solicitor, has met with a serious accident while driving in his buggy through Old Court-house-street. His horse, it is said, took fright, and ran away with the buggy. Mr. Goodall attempted to save himself by jumping out, and in so doing injured himself so severely that his medical attendants consider it impossible for him to leave his bed for at least many weeks to come. It is said that a fracture of the ankle joints is one of the results.

MUSEUM FOR NATURAL PRODUCTIONS FROM THE HIMALAYAS.—A scheme is being mooted, privately as yet, for establishing a society for the collection and publication of authentic materials of a scientific, sporting, and general nature regarding our mighty neighbour, the Himalaya, or the Hima-Leh, as purists call the range. The materials are ample, and a sufficient number of capable workers will be found if things are gone about in the right way.

A DARING AND EXTENSIVE ROBBERY took place at the Umritsur Hotel on Tuesday evening last, when a leather dressing-bag, containing valuables and notes, amounting to

Rs. 25,000, the property of Mrs. Doyme, wife of the barrister, of Calcutta, was stolen from under the bed. A handsome reward was offered for the recovery of the property, the whole of which has been discovered. A large sum of money in cash and notes was found secreted in the ground close to the hotel premises, and the box of jewellery was found a short time afterwards hidden in a pile of bricks. The delinquents are supposed to be the servants of the hotel.—Chronicle, Nov. 9.

CHANGES IN HIGH PLACES.—We regret to learn that Sir George Yule, in consequence of severe sickness, is about to leave India by the St. Lawrence. Sir William Muir will be his successor in Council, while Sir Richard Temple will be offered the Foreign-office. In the event of his declining, Mr. Davies will succeed Sir William Muir next March. Mr. Strachey will be offered a seat in Council. Mr. Stewart Reid, Dr. Cunningham, and Mr. Ainslie are nominated to the Assam Tea Commission with Calcutta members.—Friend of India, Nov. 14.

"ARREST."—The 25th N.I. left our city on Saturday morning, and we are glad to be able to announce that the officer of that corps who had been in arrest since the 10th of September was allowed to return to his duty on the preceding day. We shall refer to this subject again shortly. While on the unpleasant subject of "arrest," we are tempted to ask the question, What has been the result of the court-martial on Major Vincent, who was tried at Jubbulpore so long ago?—Delhi Gazette.

THE AMLA AGAIN.—The affair of the robbery from the office of the Commissioner of Umballa, of a box containing important papers relating to the Pattiala State, has advanced another stage. Two Kardars of the Rajah have been arrested, and placed in confinement, besides the Dewan Colebrunt Rai. The question does not yet appear to have arisen who pointed out the box in the office of the Commissioner. Unless the Amla had betrayed their trust, it is hard to see how the robbers could have made so sure of their prey.

CABOOL, Oct. 30.—The Toorkistan expedition had left Cabool, and Ameer Shere Allee Khan, who, after losing the last battle, had made up his mind to go to Herat, was making arrangements to collect troops and to fight Sirdar Ubdoollahman Khan. It was reported in Cabool that Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan, brother of the late Sirdar Fyz Mohamed Khan, had effected his escape from Candahar, and that Sirdar Meer Ufzul Khan, Candaharee, with a number of troops, was marching from Gurrishk against Candahar.

MILITARY ON DITS.—The 12th Bengal Cavalry have just received orders to march immediately to Allahabad.—The H. Q. wing 19th Hussars march from Meerut on the 10th December, the other wing does not leave Meerut till the arrival of the 4th Hussars within the limits of the Meerut command.—The 2nd Dragoon Guards (Queen's Bays), under Colonel Seymour, C.B., marched into Agra on the morning of Nov. 26, en route for Mhow.—The 4th N. I. leaves Jhansie on the 20th Nov. for Allahabad, and will be at Cawnpore probably about the 28th. The 8th P. I. is expected at Jhansie on the 18th Nov.—H. M. 36th Foot will be at Seharunpore on the 24th Nov. and at Umballa on the 30th.

CLERICAL BIGOTRY AT MUSSEERABAD.—A soldier died under circumstances no suspicious as to lead to the inference that he had committed suicide. A court of inquiry was called to consider the matter, and to decide whether the verdict should be temporary insanity or not. In the meantime the death-report was sent to the chaplain, with the usual request that he would bury the corpse. That column which gives the cause of death was not filled in, and the death-report might therefore have been returned to the medical officer, and the burial delayed till it was returned in a corrected form. The chaplain then applied to the commanding officer, who was also president of the court of inquiry, asking to be informed of the verdict of the court, and received in reply "that the proceedings of the court were not closed." No verdict, therefore, was given; no cause of death was stated; so the chaplain took on himself to decline burying the body.

BULLOCK TRAIN TO DARJEELING.—We hear that on the recommendation of the Director-General of the Post-office the Government of India has sanctioned the establishment of a bullock train at Darjeeling, at a monthly cost of about Rs. 1,900. An outlay of about Rs. 45,000 has also been sanctioned for the construction of carts and the purchase of bullocks. An office in connection with that establishment is to be opened at Darjeeling, and an European superintendent to be appointed there for the purpose, on a salary of Rs. 600 a month. The principal stations for the bullock train will be at Julpigoree, Minagoree, Saligoree, and other important places along the Darjeeling road.

THE CYCLONE IN EASTERN BENGAL.—The Dacca News gives some particulars of the cyclone in Eastern Bengal. At Cherapoonjee it was little more than a severe gale. At Serajunge the gale was accompanied by heavy showers, the drops of rain falling like hail. The river rose some three feet, and a heavy sea swamped all the boats exposed to it. In all about 50,000 maunds of jute have gone down, half of which will be recovered damaged and half lost. It will not be too much to put down the loss at, on that side, say, in all one lakh of maunds, which represents two and a-half lakhs of rupees. At Koolnah and Naraingunge the cyclone does not seem to have been attended with such disastrous results.

JODHPUR.—Colonel Keatinge, [V.C., from Kattywar, succeeds the late Colonel Eden as Government Agent at Rajpootana. Judging from the improvements Colonel Keatinge has effected in his late charge, we may confidently hope his appointment to Rajpootana will infuse new life into our political relations and responsibilities to these States. They are much in need of practical counsel and advice on their internal affairs, but as far as we know they have hitherto been left to shift for themselves. Our apathy and indifference to improvements in their internal administration, under the late regime, will account in a great measure for its general unsatisfactoriness and for the assertion (anything but creditable to the non-interference policy) that Marwar is the worst administered State in Rajpootana, if not in India; turning from such unpleasant considerations, we hail with much pleasure the appointment of Colonel Keatinge.

MURDER OF THE PRIME MINISTER OF JODHPUR.—The Englishman gives details of the murder of the Nawab Hadji Mahomed, the Prime Minister of Jodhpore. The Nawab was attending the fair at Pooker, a place seven miles distant from Ajmere, and was sleeping in his tent when one of his own body guards, whom he had punished a few days before for insubordination, stealthily entered the tent and cut him across the breast with his own sword. The murderer then tried to make his escape, but he was seized and taken to the Deputy Commissioner's quarters. The Nawab had been making great preparations for the marriage of his daughter, which was to have taken place next day. Captain Liston, the officiating Deputy Commissioner, is making full investigations into the case.

RISHRA.—The Lieut.-Governor of Bengal gave a most gracious reception to a deputation from the inhabitants of Rishra which waited upon his Honour to personally press their complaints against the arbitrary and heartless proceedings of Mr. Palmer, the Commissioner for the adjustment of compensation claims in connection with the taking up of Rishra and some of its adjacencies for railway purposes. These complaints we severely noticed very recently, and we are happy to say that Mr. Grey, with that thorough conscientiousness for which he is famous, has promised to afford every relief against them. The deputation was kindly told that the inhabitants of Rishra will not be called upon to leave their homes until after six months from the date on which compensation may be actually paid to them. Further, his Honour has promised to see that every consideration is extended towards them in regard to an adequate valuation of their property, and it is possible even that Mr. Palmer will be replaced by a more experienced and considerate officer.—Bengalee, Nov. 9.

THE LATE COL. EDEN.—With much regret we publish the telegraphic announcement of Col. Eden's death. Disease overtook this officer at his post, which, had he consulted his health, he would have left for change and recreation at all events, if not permanent retirement, long ago. Receiving some of those unmistakable warnings from the hand of death, apoplectic fits, he was hurried away by his friends for the coast. He died at Ahmedabad en route to Bombay. Col. Eden belonged to the Madras Army (Staff Corps). His first commission dates from the 11th June, 1833, and he has held his present appointment as permanent incumbent since April, 1865. He was one of the oldest, we believe the oldest, political agent in this part of India. During the eventful period of 1857-58 he held the then very important post of political agent of Jeypore, where the firmness he evinced and his tact and judgment gave promise of future distinction in that particular line of diplomacy. In the circle of his immediate friends and associates the blank caused by Col. Eden's death will not readily be filled up.—Delhi Gazette.

THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.—We understand that Colonel Austin, lately commanding the Royal Artillery at Saugor, will retire from the regiment shortly after his arrival in England. Major Watson, commanding a Battery of Horse Artillery in England, also contemplates retiring on promotion to a regimental lieutenant-colonelcy. One or more others will also quit the service shortly. We congratulate the regiment on its apparently improved prospects of promotion in the higher grades, in which it is far behind the other regiments of Royal Artillery. But for these contemplated retirements it is not unlikely that by April next, when Mr. Childers' scheme of retirements for officers of the Royal Artillery, Engineers and Marines comes into operation, the relative position of the officers will contrast still more unfavourably. The abolition of the Bonus Fund has, as was anticipated, tended to cause a very serious stagnation in promotion in the higher grades. It is in these grades where the want of a retiring fund is most seriously felt, since retirements were confined to these grades, for few could retire who had not served the prescribed periods for pension. We hope that either the Home or Indian Government will take the case of these officers into consideration, and insist on the officers of the Royal and Indian Brigades of Artillery being equally liberally dealt with.

SELF-DENIAL OF GOVERNOR GREY.—In consequence of the distress occasioned by the late cyclone, and the necessity for immediate relief operations, his honour the Lieutenant-Governor has determined to remain in Calcutta, instead of proceeding, as he intended, to the Lucknow Durbar. This is as it should be, and we are certain that this spontaneous determination on the part of his Honour will be appreciated by all classes of the community—European and native. We believe that it was the wish of the Governor-general that the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal should, if possible, be present at the forthcoming ceremonies in Oude, but there is little doubt that his Excellency will stamp, with his hearty approval, the resolution which Mr. Grey has come to. Although happily there is not the immediate terrible distress which followed on the cyclone of 1864, there is unfortunately sufficient necessity for prompt relief measures being taken, owing to the heavy destruction of the crops in the 24 Pergunnahs. Besides this we have not yet heard the full account of disasters from those districts over which the centre of the cyclone must have swept. From the morning after the storm, Mr. Grey has been most energetic in endeavouring to get in all possible information, and to devise immediate schemes of relief. His determination to remain in Calcutta will ensure confidence in every quarter as to the measures he is adopting, and his presence at the Relief Meeting to-morrow will give a stimulus to the private charity which it has been necessary to call upon.—Englishman.

MORE ABOUT THE CYCLONE.—Every day since the disastrous night of the 1st November has brought us in news and letters from the surrounding district of the terrible effects of the storm. We have ourselves received so many letters on the subject that we cannot venture to publish them; all, however, repeat the same litany of calamities. Jessore, Dacca, Kishnagur, Serajunge, Purneah, all tell the same tale; houses destroyed, boats sunk, forest trees laid low, and the crops everywhere more or less seriously injured. The loss of life, however, as far as we have yet learnt, has nowhere been so serious as in Calcutta and the immediate neighbourhood. Some cases of most providential escape have come to our knowledge. The Very Rev. Father Fourmond, who left this, for Dacca, in his little boat three days before the storm, writes that his boat went down at about 1.30 A.M., not far from a small village named Kaligunge, but that fortunately they were not far from shore at the time, and that they saved themselves by climbing up the trunks of some trees on the bank, whose branches had already been wrenched off by the fury of the hurricane. In this position they passed the remainder of the night, and were truly thankful to God that they escaped with their lives. He mentions that some other boats containing Europeans had not since been heard of. Another escape was still more wonderful; three ladies, two of them belonging to the family of Mr. J. D. Freitas, left Calcutta for Chittagong about the same time that Pere Fourmond started for Dacca; their boat, too, became a perfect wreck, and for two days and one night they wandered through the flooded paddy-fields without a morsel of food, sometimes up to their necks in water, sometimes dragged over deep nullahs by a servant, who, swimming across, carried first one, and then returned for another, till all were safely over. At length, after nearly thirty-six hours of this weary journey, more dead than alive from hunger and fatigue, they reached the Mutlah, whence they returned by rail to Calcutta. The amount subscribed for the "Cyclone Relief Fund" has already reached nearly Rs. 50,000.—Indo-European Correspondence, Nov. 16.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CATTLE DISEASE.—A disease of a most fatal and infectious kind has broken out among cattle, known by the native name "Pythinow." It first appeared in a large herd about five miles off in the early part of last month, carrying off over a hundred animals in a short time. Had its ravages ceased here, such loss would have been trifling in our large stock, comprising thousands of cattle on these hills, but it is to be regretted that other surrounding village animals have become infected and are dying in large numbers daily. So virulent is the type that an animal dies in a few hours after the first sign of illness, giving but little scope for medical treatment. The chief aim is prevention, by breaking up all herds into small detachments of ten and twenty, each having separate pasture, building or enclosure, and attendant. It will be interesting to see whether these measures prove effectual in stopping such formidable outbreaks.

THE ARRIVAL AND RECEPTION OF DR. FENNELLY.—The Right Rev. Dr. Fennelly, Roman Catholic Bishop of Madras, who in May last proceeded to Rome to assist in the canonisation of the martyrs, returned by the Messageries Imperiales steamer Meinam yesterday morning, Nov. 22. There was a very large gathering of people at the beach to witness his landing. His lordship, attended by several clergymen and gentlemen, landed about half-past eight A.M., and proceeded to the cathedral. At the entrance of the cathedral his lordship was received by clergymen in regular procession, and conducted to the foot of the altar, when the Te Deum was chanted. The church was densely crowded. After the ceremony the procession reformed, and his lordship was conducted to the schoolrooms, followed by the congregation down a passage formed by the European and East Indian children of the Orphanage. When all had assembled, and his lordship had taken his seat, Mr. T. G. Clarke, after a few remarks, read aloud a congratulatory address, which had been previously extensively circulated and signed. His lordship having replied, the ceremony was brought to a close by three cheers being given for his lordship.

H. E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—Lieutenant-General McCleverty, in assuming the command of the Madras army, again renews associations he enjoyed with it at different periods of his military service. He refers with pride to the devotion, gallantry, and loyalty of that army, conspicuous in these attributes through many arduous field services extending beyond the limits of the Presidency. From the earliest period of British rule in India, the history of the coast army is a record of splendid achievements performed by officers and men of which all classes in the Madras Presidency may be gratefully proud. The Lieutenant-General commanded the centre division when was inaugurated the amalgamation of the military services, which the progress of time and events rendered it advisable to introduce. Organic changes affecting the personal interests of large bodies may be attended with individual cases of hardship, but the Lieutenant-General believes there are few of these as regards the officer and none as regards the soldier. The introduction of the new system has been beneficial to every officer of the Indian forces as regards promotion and increased pay to an extent unlooked for a few years ago; those previous to 1861 were dependent on uncertain contingencies; now they are dependent on length of service. In all armies the public interest is the paramount consideration; the traditions of the Coast or Madras Army evidence its devotion to that consideration. The bond of attachment between officers and men maintained a high state of discipline and faithful adherence to their colours, especially manifested during the mutiny, in the suppression of which this army largely assisted. The Lieutenant-General will endeavour as much as is consistent with the requirements of the public service to smooth the difficulties attendant on individual cases, and congratulates himself on his connection with the British and Indian forces of the Madras Presidency, to the command of which her Most Gracious Majesty has been pleased to appoint him. The Commander-in-Chief is pleased to make the following appointments in his Excellency's personal staff:—Major B. L. Forster, Royal Artillery, to be Military Secretary; Major W. H. St. Hill, Unattached, to be Aide-de-Camp; Captain F. Henderson, 107th Foot, to be Aide-de-Camp, provisionally; E. M. Norie, Staff Corps, to be Interpreter; Captain T. R. Church, Staff Corps, to act as Interpreter, until Captain Norie's arrival, and Subadar Major Mahomed Hoosain, Sirdar Bahadoor, 4th Regiment Light Cavalry, to be Native Aide-de-Camp.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PRIVATE CASSIDY, of the 45th Regiment, has been convicted at the Bombay Sessions of attempting to murder Drum-Major Griffiths, of the same regiment.

REV. MR. BLUMHARDT.—The Rev. Mr. Blumhardt has finally decided not to accompany the expedition to Abyssinia, since his former colleague in that country, Dr. Krapf, is to join the force.

—THE certificate of Captain Morison, who was in command of the Bombay and Bengal Steam Ship Company's steamer Yamuna, wrecked in the Red Sea, has been suspended for three months.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA have promptly set aside a rule which had been attempted to be made, by which the families of Indian officers were debarred from the privileges accorded to the families of officers of Line regiments, in regard to passages by the new Indian transport ships.—Times of India.

A STEAM BOILER at the Patent Ice Factory, Bombay, burst some days ago, causing the death of three persons and injury to others; and on the 26th Nov. some turpentine caught light at the Government Dockyard, and some shedding became on fire. The fire was at once got under, but one man was killed and several were dreadfully injured through the accident, of whom four died at the hospital.—Times of India.

THE ASSAULT ON A MARRIAGE PROCESSION.—The scandalous charge of assaulting a Parsee marriage procession, in which women were taking a part, has been preferred against two Europeans, one of whom, Mr. Langley, a solicitor of the High Court, has, under the pressure of legal proceedings, tendered the following public apology. "With reference to the summonses taken out against me before the acting chief magistrate, I have to express my extreme regret for the occurrences which led to the issuing of the summonses."

ANOTHER "LOAFER" was murdered in Bombay on the night of the 15th ult., in a low tavern. A constable was asked by three sailors to help them with a man who had been stabbed, and on going with them to the Royal Oak he found the man lying on his face in a pool of blood in the compound. The pulse was still, and the body quite cold. Another sailor, named Foley, was found drunk in the house, with marks of blood on his trousers, and his knife missing. The name of the deceased is unknown, but he is supposed to be a German or Dutchman.

HARDSHIP OF THE FURLOUGH RULES.—The Times of India illustrates the furlough grievance by the fate of Lieut. F. I. Innes, adjutant of the 4th Cavalry, Hyderabad Contingent. Two months ago he applied for permission to return to Europe on medical certificate, as he was suffering from disease of the liver. He had returned from Europe about three years before, but found, after sending in his papers, that the time that elapsed between his landing in India and joining his regiment did not count as part of the three years he had to serve before he could again go home on sick certificate without resigning his appointment. Feeling loath to throw up all his prospects, he put off his leave for a month, and this delay cost him his life.

NEWS FROM CABUL.—The Afghanistan correspondent of the Bombay Gazette says, as the season of snow falling is now drawing near, Abdul Rhuman is zealously preparing to march with all his forces towards Balkh. Mazoolah Khan, a servant of the Maharajah of Cashmere, arrived at Cabul on the 23rd ult. from Turkistan, with a large number of horses. A Cabul chief had received a very important letter from Candahar, to the effect that the report of Herat having passed from the hands of Shere Ali to the Persians or Russians was altogether unreliable. Shere Ali had ceded a piece of land near Herat to the Russians, where they are to raise a strong cantonment, which is to be employed as an arsenal. Two Russian regiments and two battalions from Teheran had entered the fort of Tyhoor in Herat. It is reported that Shere Ali is in receipt of an allowance of two lakhs of rupees from the Russians. "However this may be exaggerated, there is not the slightest doubt that the Government of Russia has shown its favour to the Ameer Shere Ali by appointing him a certain allowance in exchange for the services rendered by him." Another letter from Tukthapool said Shere Ali had so entirely given himself up to Russian and Persian affairs that he had abandoned all idea of renewing battle with the Cabul faction. His son, Yakoob Khan, had strengthened the fort of Farah and was preparing to lay siege to Candahar. For three coes round, Candahar is surrounded with fosses filled with water, and it will be no easy matter to carry it. The late Mahomed Ameer Khan greatly strengthened its naturally good position.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN STANLEY.—We are very sorry to hear of the death, by the fall of his horse, of Captain Stanley, of the 23rd R. W. F. at Jubbulpore. He had only just returned from England. The horse he was riding was a new purchase, and the owner did not know it was given to stumbling; he was not killed on the spot, but the injuries he received on his head were so great as to prove fatal. This officer met with a very severe accident of this kind at Nynce Tal a year or two ago, when he was very nearly killed by a fall from his horse or pony over a "khud." The deceased officer was a near relative of the Earl of Derby, the present Premier.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 21.

A NEW MISSIONARY COLLEGE.—We hear that the Church Mission Society intend establishing a College in Lahore, for the education and training of those who wish to become Scripture readers, catechists, and missionaries. We think one Missionary Society in a station is quite enough. We would advise the C. M. S. to have their College in Umritsur, and not to intrude into the mission field of Lahore, founded and so long carried on amidst difficulties and trials by the American missionaries. The establishment of two rival missions in a station is sure to lead to a great deal of ill-feeling and heart-burnings among the missionaries; it is thus Christianity becomes a stumbling block in the eyes of the heathen.—Punjab Times.

THE PUNJAB RAILWAY COMMISSION REPORT is before us, and though we cannot say we are not surprised at the general tenour of this report, we must confess that the harshness of the conclusions is quite unexpected, after all we have heard on the subject of its probable result. Carefully considering, however, that it is based on a foregone conclusion, that the commission must have stultified not only themselves but the Supreme Government, had they been in favour of Col. Elphinstone, and that there are grave reasons for believing that much stress has been laid in high quarters on the very material desirability of wounding a distinguished member of the India Board, through his connections in this country, we must confess that our feelings of surprise are greatly modified. The report condemns Colonel Elphinstone in most of the instances of laches laid to his charge, maintains that he has infringed in several instances the terms of the contract between the (Punjab) Railway Company and the Secretary of State, that the company have suffered loss by the unsatisfactory character of the contracts he entered into, and that his selection of employes was not to the advantage of the company. We regret we are not in a position to give this document in full, but have no doubt it will soon enough find its way into the official Gazette. The Governor-General has added a minute adopting the very unfavourable conclusions of the report. That was a matter of course. Our Lahore correspondent must have surely been mistaken when he asserts that Colonel Elphinstone has been refused an official copy of the report, while it was communicated to Mr. Harrison, officiating agent of the Punjab Railway for transmission to the board at home, and has been paraded in the agent's office without scruple. That one so much interested should under the circumstances be refused a copy of the report and of the Government resolution thereof appears to us such an unusual stretch of official tyranny even in India, that we must be excused for doubting the correctness of the information on which our correspondent has based his assertion on this part of the Government proceedings.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 14.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON AND CHINA.—The directors of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China have declared a dividend of 3 per cent., free of income-tax, for the half-year ending the 31st instant, payable on January 1 next.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 18th inst., at the Bank of England, and £123,000 was allotted to Calcutta. The minimum price was fixed as before at 1s. 11d. per rupee on Calcutta and Madras, and all tenders above that price will receive in full. The result again shows a falling off in the demand for remittances to the East.

FAILURE OF AN EAST INDIA HOUSE.—Messrs. Nixon and Kellick, of Manchester and Liverpool, and Messrs. Kellick and Nixon, of Bombay, have suspended payment. Reports were current during the past few days of the stoppage of the house, but from its high standing most persons were unwilling to place full reliance in the statements till further advices were received. The liabilities are estimated at about £100,000.

DESPATCH OF THE CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Dec. 20.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Ripon, Captain Rogers, sailed hence to-day with mails for Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, Egypt, Aden, Ceylon, India, China, Australia, New Zealand, &c. She took out seventy first and forty-two second-class passengers, and on freight a large cargo, including sovereigns, £26,990; dollars, £26,708. 6s. 8d.; bar silver, £4,000; gold thread, jewellery, watches, &c., £4,641. 8s.; and gold and silver thread, £175.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.—(WAR-OFFICE, Dec. 17.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officer and private soldiers of her Majesty's army, whose claims to the same have been submitted for her Majesty's approval, for their gallant conduct at the Little Andaman Island, as recorded against their names—viz., Assistant Surgeon Campbell Millis Douglas, M.D., Privates Thomas Murphy, James Cooper, David Bell, and William Griffiths, 2nd battalion 24th Regiment, for the very gallant and daring manner in which, on the 7th of May, 1867, they risked their lives in manning a boat and proceeding through a dangerous surf to the rescue of some of their comrades, who formed part of an expedition which had been sent to the island of Little Andaman, by order of the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, with the view of ascertaining the fate of the commander and seven of the crew of the ship Assam Valley, who had landed there, and were supposed to have been murdered by the natives. The officer who commanded the troops on the occasion reports:—"About an hour later in the day Dr. Douglas, 2nd battalion 24th regiment, and the four privates referred to, gallantly manning the second gig, made their way through the surf almost to the shore, but finding their boat was half filled with water they retired. A second attempt made by Dr. Douglas and party proved successful, five of us being safely passed through the surf to the boats outside. A third and last trip got the whole of the party left on shore safe to the boats." It is stated that Dr. Douglas accomplished these trips through the surf to the shore by no ordinary exertion. He stood in the bows of the boat and worked her in an intrepid and seamanlike manner, cool to a degree, as if what he was then doing was an ordinary act of every-day life. The four privates behaved in an equally cool and collected manner, rowing through the roughest surf when the slightest hesitation or want of pluck on the part of any one of them would have been attended by the gravest results. It is reported that seventeen officers and men were thus saved from what must otherwise have been a fearful risk, if not certainty of death.

LOSS OF THE "BOSPHORUS."—The following details of the loss of the Bosphorus have lately been published:—The Bosphorus, Captain Alexander, a hired steam transport from England for Bombay, with stores for the Abyssinian expedition, ran on Zitzikamma Point, between Algoa Bay and Simon's Bay, at one A.M. on October 21. She left Simon's Bay on the evening of the 19th. About midnight on the 20th the weather was slightly hazy, and the Bosphorus was bowling along at nearly full speed, steering E. by N., with no apprehension of danger, her officers but a few hours previously having believed themselves to be 198 miles from land. Five minutes before she struck the haze lifted, and land was seen right ahead. Everything was done to wear the ship, but it was too late. She struck on the rocks with a crash which shook every bolt from stem to stern. The vessel then almost immediately heeled over and broke her back, leaving only one boat available. Three hours afterwards the Bosphorus went to pieces. Although only half a mile from shore, the coast was such as to prevent all hopes of landing, which could have been effected only with the greatest difficulty in broad daylight. Most of the crew found their way to land on pieces of wreck which were floating about. The captain, who could not swim, was saved by clinging to a piece of timber which floated past him to a rock, over which he clambered to land, much cut and bruised. There were eighty-eight persons on board, and forty only were saved. The other forty-eight persons met their deaths in the first hour. The Government at the Cape ordered a special and strict inquiry into the circumstances of the wreck. The Court gave judgment, we learn, on November 4. Captain Alexander was absolved from blame. The disaster is attributed to the strong current which generally runs to the westward after fresh westerly gales, as well as to the existence of a north-easterly current, which sets directly on to the shore from Formosa Point to Cape Recife, between the Agulhas current and the coast, and which was unknown to the said master, not being stated upon the chart by which he was sailing.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

OLD SORES, WOUNDS, AND ULCERS.—The readiness with which Holloway's ointment removes all obstructions in the circulation of the vessels and lymphatics explains their irresistible influence in healing old sores, bad wounds, and indolent ulcers. To insure the desired effect, the skin surrounding the diseased part should be fomented, dried, and immediately well rubbed with the Ointment. This will give purity to the foul blood, and strength to the weakened nerves—the only conditions necessary for the cure of all those hideous ulcerations which render life almost intolerable. No sooner is this Ointment's protective power exerted than the destructive process ceases, and the constructive business begins—new healthy growths appear, to fill up the lately painful excavated pit.

NOTICE.—Mr. Vambéry's New Work, "Sketches in Central Asia," including Rivalry between Russia and England, is now published, price 16s.
